
Soaking takes the place of rubbing—

JUST by soaking the clothes in the suds of this new soap, dirt is gently loosened and dissolved.

Even the dirt that is ground in at neck-bands and cuff-edges yields to a light rubbing with dry Rinso. Not a thread is weakened. The mild Rinso suds work thoroughly through and through the clothes without injury to a single fabric.

Rinso is made by the makers of Lux. For the family wash it is as wonderful as Lux is for fine things.

All grocers and department stores sell Rinso.

CANADIAN CEMETERIES ON THE WESTERN FRONT

By Albert Close.
August 30th, 1924.

The Beaver, Napanee.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I have just made a tour of the Battlefields of the Western Front and the Cemeteries in which Canadians in large numbers are buried. At Ypres Major de St. Victor, Staff of the Imperial War Cemeteries, kindly took me around in his car to the various Cemeteries in which our Canadian boys are sleeping their last sleep on the fields they triumphed over the foe.

Major de St. Victor is an old Quebec and Montreal boy and was able to direct me to the cemeteries where the boys killed in the different campaigns and battles were laid to rest. At the capture of Passchendale in 1917 Major de St. Victor's battalion reached Passchendale Church, but the Church was not there. In the dark he had a hand to hand fight for the objective for the reason last only the site remained.

The cemeteries are beautifully kept and in many cases are veritable flower gardens of the choicest flowers. Civil cemeteries cannot compare with them for beauty. First, I went to Voormazeele cemetery where many of the boys killed in the great gas attack in April, 1915, lie buried. Grave after grave is marked "An Unknown Canadian Soldier", "Known Unto God." About 400 are buried here. Next I went to Passchendale New British cemetery, where over 400 of the Canadians killed in 1917 at Passchendale are buried. Large numbers are marked "Unknown Canadian Soldier." These have been found all round Passchendale on the great battlefields of 1917 and concentrated in this beautiful cemetery. They have been found in many cases so perfectly preserved that the features seemed as natural as in sleep after six years. This is true, I am informed, where a soldier has been buried in clay soil. After exposure to the air a change speedily takes place. The War Graves Commission men are finding about fifty missing men a week on the average as building or farming operations unearth them. Trained men can tell at once if a body is buried by the green colour of the nail. Seven was identified at Hill 60 last week by the number on the boots of each soldier. The reason why so many are unknown, although perfectly preserved, is because the earlier identification discs were made of fibre and perished in the earth. The Germans made their discs of bronze and they stand the test of time.

Next, I went out to Villers au Bois cemetery, about eight miles West of Vimy Ridge, where are the graves of about 500 Canadians killed at the capture of the Ridge in April, 1917. This also is a beautiful cemetery. All of the boys have their headstones over their graves instead of crosses as at Voormazeele. About 1183 Canadians are buried in the beautiful Lissenshik cemetery, where over 3000 British are buried. There are 185 British cemeteries around Ypres containing 101,000 registered graves, and 171 German cemeteries containing 70,000 German registered graves. Over 240,000 British were killed, or died of wounds received at Ypres 1914-18, but many died in base hospitals. The Germans chiefly for the discrepancy in the number of actual graves and the 240,000 killed.

The German cemeteries are only raised mounds with only an occasional shingled grave or cross. Behind Vimy Ridge a great German cemetery has been used for concentration. They say there are 25,000 graves in it.

North East of Arras four miles I saw a big German cemetery with 4,800 identified graves, and 25,000 "unknown". The French are collecting them from all over the Front. The coffins are stacked up 25 feet deep on the top of another and covered over with the chalky lumpy soil six feet deep.

Friends coming from Canada can save large sums of money when visiting graves by using the light railways, instead of hiring motors. Stanfield's of 12-14 Long Acre, London, have just published a fine cemetery map showing where all the cemeteries lie and the roads and railways leading to them. These cost $1.25.

We also visited Verdun, the great French Fortress, which cost the Germans 500,000 killed and 1,500,000 wounded in their furious assaults in 1916. The whole country-side has been blown to pieces. About 300,000 French killed are buried in unknown graves, 100,000 in known graves. We went right down inside Fort Vaux and saw the underground galleries, hospitals, and gun emplacements. Great walls 15 inches thick are shattered to pieces.

The Germans captured the Fort for a time by throwing hand grenades and bombs down the air ventilators, etc., and by cutting off the water supply.

We saw the 170 bayonets still sticking up out of the ground, where a salva of German shells blew in a trench and buried the men just as they stood. The French have left them as they stand and are erecting a vast Mausoleum over the spot.

General Falkenhayne and the Crown Prince buried their reputations as soldiers at Verdun. The great dug-outs all over the Front are fast falling in.

As one goes over the Front and sees the positions stormed by the Canadians it makes one proud of the race to which we belong.

I enclose a photo of Villers au Bois and Voormazeele cemeteries. If any Napanee relatives desire copies you can let them have these for reproduction.

Yours truly,
ALBERT CLOSE,

ERADICATION OF WEEDS

Co-operative Experiments Show How It May Be Done

Rape for Perennial Sow Thistles and Twitch Grass—Iron Sulphate for Mustard—Another Plan for Killing Twitch—O. A. C. Barley Popular In the United States.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

As a result of ten years' experiments the following methods are recommended by the department of Botany of the Ontario Agricultural College:

Use of Rape to Destroy Perennial Sow Thistle and Twitch Grass.

Cultivate the field until about the middle of June, running over it frequently with the cultivator so as to keep the tops down and thus weaken the "roots." Then apply manure at the rate of about twenty tons per acre (12 good loads). Cultivate the manure in thoroughly, and with a double mould board plough slightly ridge up the land, making the ridges about 26 inches apart. On the ridges sow pasture rape 5 lbs. the rate of 1½ pounds per acre. It is important that the right amount of rape be sown, for if too little is sown the stand will not be thick enough to smother the weeds, and if on the other hand too much is sown the plants will be too crowded and not grow vigorously enough to keep ahead of the weeds. Sow the rape when the land is sufficiently moist to insure quick germination of the seed. If the rape is slow in starting, the weeds may get a start in the rows and thus necessitate hand cultivation impossible. If, when the rape is cut or pastured, any weeds remain, the field should be ridged up the last thing in the fall and put in with a hoed crop the following year. This should not be necessary if a good stand of rape is secured.

Spraying With Iron Sulphate to Destroy Mustard In Cereal Crops.

Iron sulphate or copperas can be successfully used to destroy mustard in standing grain without injury to the crop.

Preparation of Solution.

A 20% solution should be applied. This can be prepared by dissolving 80 lbs. of iron sulphate in 40 gallons of water. Iron sulphate is dissolved quite readily in cold water. The solution should be strained through a cheese cloth, as it is put into the spray pump tank. This will remove dirt and small particles that are apt to clog the nozzles.

Time to Apply.

Apply on a calm, clear day just as soon as the first few plants in the fields show flowers. It is very important to spray early. If the plants are left too long the treatment is not nearly so effective. If a heavy rain comes within 24 hours after the solution is applied, it will be necessary to spray again.

How to Apply the Solution.

An ordinary hand pump barrel sprayer, such as is employed to spray fruit trees may be used, or a potato sprayer can be rigged up to do the work. Many of the up-to-date sprayers have a special broadcast attachment for spraying weeds. These are excellent for large areas, as they cover a wide strip at each round. Care must be taken to see that every mustard plant is covered with the solution in the form of a fine spray. Iron sulphate can be obtained at any hardware store.—J. E. Howitt, O. A. College, Guelph.

Another Plan for Killing Twitch Grass.

A successful experiment in ridding land of twitch grass was made recently by the Farm Department of the Ontario Agricultural College on a field that was a mass of twitch after the oat crop had been removed.

The land was so badly infested that the field produced a very small crop that season. After the oats were removed, the land was ploughed lightly and trash-disposer device, and then cultivated and harrowed. Later in the fall this field was ploughed with a double-disc plough, the usual disc cutting six to seven inches deep and the rear disc twelve to thirteen inches. This brought some subsoil up and threw it on top of the sound mass of roots.

In the following spring the field was planted to flint corn in the check-row system. Practically no twitch made an appearance during the summer, and the field, without fertilizer, produced an excellent crop of flint corn for husking.

O. A. C. Barley Grown In the United States.

Dr. C. A. Zavitz received a letter recently from Prof. Moore of the Agricultural College of Wisconsin, which says: "Now practically all of the barley grown in Wisconsin, and in many of our surrounding States, emanated from the few pounds of barley which you so kindly sent us. We will never be able to get even for the good things you have done for us in bygone years."

The man who takes pride in "doing chores well" usually has stock and clean stables, and realizes a great profit from his everyday chores as from any other of his farm operations.

A bee is said to travel 42,776 miles to gather one pound of honey consisting of 29,184 drops of nectar. Those who do not believe it are invited by the bee to count the drops.

Sometimes it's lack of time and sometimes it's just indifference that leaves farm machinery neglected and broken from one season to the next.

Requisite on the Farm.—Every farmer and stock-raiser should keep a supply of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil on hand, not only as a ready remedy for ills in the family, but because it is a horse and cattle medicine of great potency. As a substitute for sweet oil for horses and cattle affected by colic it far surpasses anything that can be administered.

After many conferences had been held by the Board of Directors of a small-town bank about buying a new water-cooler, a grouchy old member had this to say:

"Gentlemen, before we adjourn, I move that our next conference be held on a merry-go-round."

And, as they locked at him in astonishment, he added the tag of explanation:

"We never get anywhere." — Wall Street Journal.

No surgical operation is necessary in removing corns if Holloway's Corn Remover be used.

An Oil That is Famous. — Though Canada was not the birthplace of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, it is the home of that famous compound. From here its good name was spread to Central and South America, the West Indies, Australia and New Zealand. That is far afield enough to attest its excellence, for in all these countries it is on sale and in demand.

A farmer came to town to insert a death announcement.

"How much do you charge?" he asked.

"Ten shillings an inch," was the reply.

"Heavens! He was over six feet high!"—Kasper (Stockholm).

"Ah, here's something interesting," said the near-sighted American tourist in Holland. "Let's wait and see the game."

"Game? I don't see any game."

"What's that ahead of us?"

"A windmill."

"My mistake! I thought it was a baseball pitcher going through the motions preliminary to sending a hot one over the plate."—Boston Transcript.

Address and Presentation

On Sunday, Sept. 14th, the members of the Methodist Sunday School, Centreville, presented Miss Hazel Milligan with a traveling bag and four pieces of ivory, together with the following address:

Miss Hazel Milligan,
Centreville.

Dear Hazel:

One of the disadvantages of a small place is that our young folks leave us to go out into the world and to you has come the call of the west.

We shall miss you in the church and community, but particularly in the Sunday School, where you have been organist, and also President of the Young Peoples' Class. To both these duties you have been faithful; you have taken an interest in the work of the church and been regular in attendance, and so have laid a good foundation for your future usefulness for the Master wherever you may be.

On behalf of the Sunday School and friends we ask you to accept this travelling bag and these ivory pieces with our best wishes for your happiness, and we assure you of a warm welcome when you come again.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School.

ISMA M. JOHNSTON,
HAROLD THOMPSON.

I take this opportunity of thanking the Sunday School and friends for their kindness.

HAZEL MILLIGAN.

The Burler of Crystal Mountain, by Naine LeRoy Gayle, is an unusually interesting story of the elk. Bonny-castle Dale, in his best style, makes us acquainted with Sir Harry Lauder, of Nova Scotia. Sure Fire Fishing on French River, by J. B. Kerrott, is a description of an ideal place for the sport of the angler. Bob White's Rival, a story of Hungarian partridge shooting in Alberta, by W. D. Elliott, is equally interesting reading. Call Back to Nature, by "Nimrod II", and Surprises for Miller, by Martin Hunter, are two particularly sly entertaining sketches. In addition to these in this well illustrated number, there are numerous other worth-while articles and stories and the regular contributors have packed their departments full of interesting material from first hand experience.

CEDAR DALE

We are having cool weather at the time of writing.—There passed to the Great Beyond on Monday, August 8th, Mrs. Reed-Sams, at the age of 92 years, 3 months and 7 days. She was a splendid christian woman, always doing something for Her Heavenly Father. Her husband passed away March 23rd, 1880. In the fall of the same year her home was burned and she went to live with her son, Mrs. Sidney Huffman, and after her death she went to her brother's at Bay of Quinte for a while, and then to Bowmanville. She resided with Mrs. L. Mason, Sr., for 19 years. She also lived with Mrs. W. Cranderman and Mrs. W. W. Noble, all of whom gave cheerful testimony to her amiable disposition and consistent character. In 1917 she went to live with her niece, Mrs. James Carroll, at Tamworth, where she remained until her death. Eight weeks before her death she fell and broke her hip and was confined to her bed until death relieved her. At times she suffered intensely, but bore it all with christian patience. Never was she heard to murmur. She was buried beside her husband, at Bath.—Miss Edna Carroll is able to be out, after being confined to the house by whooping cough.—Our school has reopened, with Miss Flynn as teacher. Hope we have fine weather for Centreville Show on Saturday.

WHY STUDENTS LEAVE

ONE-FOURTH QUIT FOR PECUNIARY REASONS.

The Next Cause Is Illness—Third Cause Is Transfer to Other Educational Institutions—"Miscellaneous Personal Reasons" Apply Most Potently to Freshmen.

A Chinese student at the University of Minnesota wrote to the registrar: "Far too cold; could not stand." Of the 9,025 students who registered at the university for the 1922-23 college year, 1,659 dropped out voluntarily. The Chinese boy was the only one of these who gave the climate as his reason. Domestic trouble, "divorce action pending," was the explanation given by another. Sixteen students, all of them women, said they were leaving to get married. If any men quit for the sake of matrimony their names are among those listed under "financial reasons." The registrar, Rodney M. West, has completed a survey undertaken to ascertain why the 1,659 cancelled their registration. The problem of "student mortality" has long vexed college administrators, and it was hoped that the survey would throw some light on the subject. Four-fifths of the students who left school responded to the questionnaire, says the New York Times.

About one-fourth of the departing students leave for pecuniary reasons, and there are twice as many men in this group as women. The next leading cause is illness, in which the women far outnumber the men. The third important cause is transfer to other educational institutions. In the year under discussion money troubles cost the university 418 students, illness 256, and transfer 112. Illness or death in the family caused 49 departures, and removal of the student' families from the state caused 32. Twenty students left because there was need of them at home. Business took 109 away. Opportunity to travel called 15, while 17 dropped out because of desire for temporary experience in other fields. Discouragement and lack of interest accounted for the loss of 84 students. Eighty-nine departures were ascribed to "change or lack of objective." The registrar does not include under this head those young women who left to get married. He thinks it a "fallacy" to believe that young women, even while they are striving for an education, do not constantly have matrimony as object in mind.

The survey shows that the liberal arts college loses far more students than do the schools in which the studies have a reasonably definite aim, the professional schools especially. Many more students drop out in the first or second year than in the third or fourth. This is explained as due to the natural weeding-out process that occurs in any competition in which large numbers take part. There comes something not quite so clear. The table shows that three times as many students become ill in freshman year as in junior year. Be it remembered that in freshman year homesickness is strongest; and in that year, too, most students are thrown on their own for the first time, to resist the strains and stresses of unsheltered life and the temptations of candy shops as best they can. In freshman year, again, few times are many students at all "invited home" as in junior year.

The departure of families from the state would seem to have something to do with higher education. The figures show that only 3 per cent. of all instances when the collegiate son or daughter is a sophomore, and in only 9 per cent. when the family has managed to stand the strain long enough to put the student through to junior year.

"Miscellaneous personal reasons" appear to apply most potently to freshmen. Not one junior or senior is found among those miscellaneous personal reasons at Minnesota in the year surveyed. The affection felt on freshmen in 55.7 of all cases. Half the girls who left to wed did so as sophomores, which would apparently establish a woman's second year in college as one of her dangerous ages. Mrs. James Carroll, at Tamworth, where she remained until her death. Eight weeks before her death she fell and broke her hip and was confined to her bed until death relieved her. At times she suffered intensely, but bore it all with christian patience. Never was she heard to murmur. She was buried beside her husband, at Bath.—Miss Edna Carroll is able to be out, after being confined to the house by whooping cough.—Our school has reopened, with Miss Flynn as teacher. Hope we have fine weather for Centreville Show on Saturday.

BRAZILIAN SAVAGES.

Special Staff Try to Tame Them Without Bloodshed.

Wild races, who have seldom, if ever, seen a white man, people the tropical plateau of Brazil, and the Government of the country keeps a special staff, whose job is to try to make friends with the savages, and to gain his allegiance without bloodshed.

The vast areas of forest are divided into sections, to each of which is allotted an officer, several armed guards, and interpreters. In the stillness of the night these men take up their post in a crow's-nest, high in the lofty trees. Then, with the aid of a megaphone, they send out messages of friendship and peace far and wide over the forest.

The natives in their huts awakened by the curious sound, lie trembling, but listening to the tales of the coming of their pale-faced brothers bringing presents for all. The marvel to them is that the voice from the trees-tops speaks their own language.

Music is also used for the same purpose, a viola or some other instrument sounding clearly through the night. Curiosity brings the natives to track down the bird that makes this unknown note. Dreadful in the moonlight, they gather beneath the tree which conceals the player.

Then the music ceases, and a voice tells them in their own language of all the good things the white messengers are bringing them. The natives flee in alarm, but the seed of friendship has been sown, and they will come back again to hear more another night.

The work of conciliation is completed by "Attraction Posts," says Mr. W. Maxwille-Fife, in "Among Wild Tribes of the Amazons." Lanes are cut through the undergrowth from the camp into the forest. Every half-mile or so along these trails presents are hung on the trees, with brief messages in native characters, explaining the peaceful mission of the white man, and telling of more desirable gifts near the camp.

Months may elapse before the timid natives appear within range of the post. Time and again, every tree is stripped of its gifts during the darkness. Then the messages which accompany subsequent presents point out that secrecy is not necessary when approaching either trees or camp, and that the whole of the people in a locality unless the natives come to thank them for the gifts already received.

This has the desired effect, and occasionally the camp may be attacked, with ensuing casualities, in the majority of cases friendship results. The next step is to teach the natives to do useful work for both themselves and the Government.

There are many strange customs prevalent among these tribes.

The Botocudos Indians, for instance, catch the huge paiche, the biggest fresh water fish in the world, by spearing it, and use its tongue, when dried, as a file.

The Caribbos, or Vampire Indians, always carry a bag of salt when out hunting or fighting, with which to treat poisoned wounds. They consider it a specific against almost all forms of disease, and even to have a far greater knowledge of its many uses than most civilised peoples.

In another tribe custom decrees that a man may not be married unless he is tattooed. There is no option in the matter, however, as all the boys of the tribe are forcibly tattooed when they reach a certain age.

The boy is held down by two men, and the medicine man tattoos his body with a brilliant red dye, which looks very much like blood. He continues at it for hours, and as he works a spear, and, lastly, a wife.

The Huanuina tribe hunt and fish by means of poison. The poison is found in a tree root, which is pounded into a powder.

This powder is put into a bag, which is then hung by a cord in a river. Any fish near it becomes intoxicated and floats on top, when they are speared. When hunting, the arrows are smeared with the poison.

Troublesome Freight.

One of the most awkward loads for a railway train to carry is a long steel bridge casing. Budders of a bunch of palm trees have to be taken by train. These are taken on special wagons, which are also used for big trees logs. They trucks are short, with four wheels, each provided with what is known as a "bolster," which swings upon a pivot. Other things carried on these trucks are ship anchors and tall flagstaffs. Things are often carried which are "out of gauge." A wagon load that exceeds the dimensions of the metals and also the height of bridges and tunnels. Careful measurements have to be taken, and then the load is twisted and turned until it is arranged so that it will pass through the tunnels and leave a safe clearance under bridges.

THE MOVIES.

Millions In Old Country Attend Cinemas.

Those who still, ostrich-like, try to ignore the cinematograph should at least reflect on the quantity of people for whom it caters, even if they cannot overlook the quality of some of the productions that are set before them. It is estimated that in those days, about, forty millions of people in Great Britain alone visit the cinema every week. It is impossible entirely to neglect an entertainment which has such a vast influence over such a vast number of people.

According to the latest figures that it is possible to obtain there are 4,072 picture theatres in Great Britain and Ireland, but the total is now swinging in excess of this. Of this number there are 3,238 in England, 465 in Scotland, 199 in Wales, 112 in Ireland, and eight in the Channel Islands.

Their distribution throughout the country is interesting, says a writer, in John o' London's Weekly. Of the towns, London, of course, with its population of somewhere approaching eight millions has the first with 385 cinemas, and the next on the list is naturally a very long way behind.

This is Glasgow, which, with over a million inhabitants, has 111 picture theatres. While there is a great difference in the number, Glasgow is really very much better catered for than London, because, whereas in London there is only one cinema for every 20,000 people, in Glasgow there is one for every 9,000.

Manchester is not very far behind Glasgow, for, with a population of less than a million, there are 105 cinemas, or one for every 7,000 inhabitants. After this there is another great falling off, for Liverpool follows with only 67, Birmingham with 65, and Leeds with 61.

Sheffield and Bradford both have more than 40, Bristol 34, Newcastle 28, and Portsmouth 20. Leicester, Cardiff, Brighton, Southampton, and Blackburn are all just in double figures.

Taking the counties outside the London area, it is instructive to notice that there is in the North a tremendous preponderance of picture theatres. Yorkshire, Cheshire, Lancashire, and Durham, between them, have more than 1,200 cinemas.

Lancashire heads the list with 552, Yorkshire follows with 482, and Durham and Cheshire have 158 and 110 respectively. There are just over 100 in both Warwickshire and Staffordshire, and several other counties are well represented.

At the other end of the scale comes Huntingdonshire with six. The reason for this is not very far to seek, for there are none of the great industrial towns that provide so many of those whose main relaxation is the film.

Herefordshire similarly has only 10 and Cambridgeshire only 16. Dorsetshire has 20, and Northamptonshire, Cornwall, Norfolk, and Worcester all have less than 40.

"These statistics give a very good idea of the importance of the cinema in our national life. It would be rather interesting to compile a similar list of theatres and music-halls throughout the country, and to see how it compares with the list given. Whether the majority of films are artistically good, bad, or indifferent, their importance cannot be ignored.

Indians Talk to Birds.

A tribe of Indians, whose members communicate among themselves only by whistling, and who can talk to birds in the same manner, has been found in the Siskiyou Mountains in Northern California. The discovery was reported to A. L. Kroeber, curator of the anthropological museum of the University of California, by J. R. Saxon, of the United States Forestry Service. Saxon said that for weeks forest rangers in a remote part of the canyons had heard uncanny whistlings over the service wires that stretch from station to station through the mountains. He went to investigate. He said the Indians conveyed to him that they had seen forest rangers using this instrument and had themselves experimented with it in their remote villages. This explained the mysterious sounds. Saxon believes that the isolated clan of "whistling people" is an obscure offshoot of the harok tribe of Klamath Falls Indians. Prof. Kroeber says the Karoks are an unusually intelligent and industrious race, numbering to-day about 2,000. At a whistled command birds would hutter from the trees at a clearing to eat food scattered there by the women, according to Saxon's narrative. He described the men as shy, adding the women were like deer. "At the sound of my voice," he explained, "the women fled into the canyons."

Shows of the Past

How many people are aware of the fact that we owe great exhibitions to France, in which country the first was held as long ago as 1798? Most of us are under the impression that our own great exhibition of 1851 was the first of its kind, but, in point of fact, France had held no fewer than eleven before that date, says Answers.

It was for our first exhibition that the Crystal Palace was built. It remained open for 144 days, and was visited by 6,700,000 people. There were 17,000 exhibitors. Yet, wonderful as it was, it was "small beer" compared with more recent efforts in the same direction. Its total cost was only just over half a million.

Compare this with the French-British Exhibition of 1908, which was held at the White City. The daily attendance was a quarter of a million, and the total number of visitors was over twenty-six millions. The bill for illuminations was $185,500, and for wages $4,000,000. The value of the exhibits exceeded $60,000,000.

There were thirty miles of garden paths and 400 different buildings, costing over a million sterling. Two and a half million gallons of water a day were required for the gorgeous rainbow cascade, which fell for three hours daily into the lagoon in the Court of Honor. There were 11,000 chairs, 2,000 are lamps, and 150,000 other electric lamps.

The biggest exhibition, so far as area of ground is concerned, was at St. Louis, in 1905. It took seven years to prepare. To meet its cost, the people of St. Louis gave $5,000,000, the city $5,000,000, while Congress gave $5,000,000, and lent another $4,500,000.

Fifty-one states and territories were represented, while foreign countries spent $7,000,000 on buildings to house their exhibits. The total exhibits were insured for twenty millions.

There was room within the exhibition grounds to test locomotives running at full speed, and among the side-shows was a mining gulch, in which all modern methods of mining were shown. This one side-show alone occupied twelve acres. The Paris Exhibition of 1900, up to that date the greatest ever held, covered 226 acres, but the St. Louis occupied 1,240 acres, or very nearly two square miles.

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of this St. Louis show was the method adopted to cool the air during the sultry days of summer. A tall standpipe was erected, through which blowers blew down a current of cool air from the upper layers of the atmosphere, and with this flood of an area of fifty or sixty acres.

A rose garden covering six acres, a village of Filipino head hunters, a replica of Jerusalem, and one of the terrible flood which destroyed Galveston were other features of this tremendous World's Fair.

Some of the most wonderful exhibits have shown disastrous figures. In 1878 and 1888 Paris lost heavily, in combination with Barnum's travels and a-half millions. The Philadelphia Centenary Exhibition also had a bad balance-sheet, and of London exhibitions that known as the "Inventories" showed a loss.

But, in all cases, it must be remembered that an exhibition on a large scale brings crowds of visitors from abroad, and that what they spend at the exhibition is but a trifle compared with their outlay for travel, hotel bills, theatre tickets, and shopping. You may take it that Wembley means something like forty millions sterling going into British pockets.

Whales Long Hunted.

Considering the many centuries during which the whale has been pursued by man and the growth of knowledge and mechanical appliances for its capture, it is hardly to be wondered that the whale is in danger of becoming as extinct as the dodo and the ichtyosaurus. Whales were carried on to considerable extent during King Alfred's time. The Atlantic right whale was hunted in the Bay of Biscay as early as the twelfth century. When few of these whales were left, the Greenland right whale was sought. This was hunted first off Spitzbergen, then about 1610, then in Davis Straits from about 1719, and finally in the North Pacific and Bering Sea from about 1845. The sperm whale was pursued from about 1712. The whaling industry was also instituted in 1865, when the modern harpoon-gun, with its harpoon projectile carrying a charge of explosive, made it possible to capture the large and swift rorquals, or fin whales.

Mover Moves House Also.

House moving in the Barbadoes is really and truly house moving, as the "flitter" not only takes his furniture and such like portable stuff, he takes his house along too. The structure is taken to pieces in sections, roof and walls being detachable. A flat truck is secured and the fore walls are laid one above another as if they were pieces of scenery from the theatre. The roof is disembowelled as such, for the tiles are put into the bottom of the car. The owner carries the front door on his head and kind friends assist with the window shutters and such like chattels of house. There is no plumbing, and the eve that follows a moving morn in the entire establishment newly set up and ready for occupancy.

Shells Came Off.

A little boy had been sent to the dairy to get some eggs, and on his way home he dropped a basket containing them.

"How many did you break?" asked his mother.

"Oh, I didn't break any," he replied, "but the shells came off some of them."

Mandy—Mose, is yo' sho' yo' didn't marry me fo' mah job?

CLAY THAT PAYS.

Diamond Mine Which, Seen at Night, Looks Like Inferno.

In the heart of the Transvaal, near Pretoria, there is a tremendous hole in the open veldt. This colossal gap in the earth is half a mile long, a quarter of a mile wide, and four hundred feet deep. It is known to thousands in sunny South Africa as "Hell Hole."

In reality, it is the Premier Diamond Mine!

Looking from the surface down into this vast pit, one can see hundreds of tiny black figures, like giant ants, shovelling the rich blue clay for dear life. Small trucks rush along a miniature railway to be loaded with this blue earth, which is taken to the surface through tunnels and there crushed.

It sometimes takes one hundred tons of this blue earth to produce thirty karats of actual diamonds.

During prosperous times at the Premier Mine, hundreds of miners work continuously throughout the whole day in shifts. At night the mine is lighted from the surface by very powerful searchlights, which give it the appearance of a modern Inferno.

This sinister likeness is intensified by the continuous blasting of the rock and earth. Sometimes this is like an incessant cannonade, and earth quivers for a few seconds. At these times the horde of black workers are sheltered in specially constructed "dug-outs" to protect them from the flying rock."

The history of the mine is a romance. The property was at one time an isolated farm, and offered for sale at £25,000. Diamonds were first found on the farm in 1902, and since then this "hell hole" has produced no less than £23,000,000 worth of diamonds!

Mining engineers state that there is unlimited wealth yet in the great hole, and for many years to come fortunes will be made from the ugly-looking gap in the open veldt.

The Artist.

The artist descends within himself and in that lonely region of stress and strife, if he be deserving and fortunate, he finds the terms of his appeal. His appeal is made to our less obvious capacities; to that part of our nature which, because of the warlike conditions of existence, is necessarily kept out of sight within the more resisting and hard qualities—like the vulnerable body within the steel armour. His appeal is less loud, more profound, less distinct; more stirring—and sooner forgotten. Yet its effect endures forever. The changing wisdom of successive generations discards facts, questions facts, demolishes theories. But the artist appeals to that part of us which is not dependent on wisdom; to that in us which is a gift and which bloweth where it listeth. That is more permanently enduring. It speaks to our capacity for delight and wonder, to the sense of mystery surrounding our lives; to our sense of pity, and bravery, and love, all the latent feeling of fellowship with all creation—and to the subtle but indiscernible conviction of solidarity that knits together the loneliness of innumerable hearts, to the remorse, the dreams, in joy, in sorrow, in aspirations, in illusions, in faith, in doubt, which binds men to each other, which binds together all humanity—the dead to the living and the living to the unborn.—Joseph Conrad.

Strange Duelling Methods.

Many strange duels have been fought by men as a means of settling their difficulties. Recently in Slavia a duel was fought with sharpened scythes. Stranger still was an "affair" in which the combatants quarrelled over a game of billiards, and decided to fight a duel with a single billiards ball—the red. A coin was tossed to see who should throw first, the winner hurled the ball with such force that he killed his opponent. Another duel was settled with the aid of two pills, one poisoned and the other harmless. They were put in a box, shaken up, and picked out by the "duellists." In 1505 lots were drawn by two men as to which of them should commit suicide. One of the participants was physically incapable of fighting an ordinary duel, so this unique substitute was decided on. The loser, who was encased, at once wedded his sweetheart, and after the ceremony the newly-married couple committed suicide together.

Literally Footmen.

The modern footman is the descendant of a long line of men in rich man, riding in his lumbering coach, was accompanied by an escort of foot runners. These were partly as a protection and partly to help his coach out of the mud through which every now and then it got bogged. They ran beside the carriage and had no difficulty in keeping up with it as the pace was so slow. Later on, as roads improved and speed increased, a place was made for them behind the coach. A survival of this is seen in the footmen of to-day. The footmen's silver-mounted staves are the descendants of the pole by which the old footmen carried to use in helping the coach out of difficult places. The modern footman has been extinct for over a century, but the name still applies to the menservants of the wealthy.

Take Your Choice.

"In a few hundred years the world will be caught fast in the grip of another ice age, which will mean the end of the human race." So predicts a French professor, who adds that it will come about because the earth is using up its supplies of carbonic acid gas faster than they are manufactured. Well, if another prophet is correct, it will not matter much, for the population of the world will reach the maximum it ever will, and after that there will be a desperate struggle for possession of the food supplies.

WORKING GIRL'S EXPERIENCE

Read How She Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Arnprior, Ontario.—"I must write and tell you my experience with your medicine. I was working at the factory for three years and became so run-down that I used to take weak spells and would be at home at least one day each week. I was treated by the doctors for anemia, but it didn't seem to do me any good. I was told to take a rest, but was unable to, and kept on getting worse. I was troubled mostly with my periods. I would sometimes pass three months, and when it came it would last around two weeks, and I would have such pains at times in my right side that I could hardly walk. I am only 19 years of age and weigh 118 pounds now, and before taking the Vegetable Compound I was only 108 pounds. I was sickly for two years and some of my friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken a bottle of it I felt a change. My mother has been taking it for a different ailment and has found it very satisfactory. I am willing to tell friends about the medicine and to answer letters sent me."—Miss HAZEL BERNDT, Box 700, Arnprior, Ontario.

A day out each week shows in the pay envelope. If you are troubled with some weakness, indicated by a run-down condition, tired feelings, pains and irregularity, let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound help you.

Was Ancient London a Village of Mud Huts Two Thousand Years Ago

What was London like 2,000 years ago?

Was it a little village of mud huts perched on Ludgate Hill with a few shaggy British business men engaged in the fish and meat business; or did it begin with the Romans? This is one of the interesting questions which Mr. W. R. Lethaby attempts to answer in "Londinium."

The earliest glimpse we have of London is a vision of a busy port thronged with great galleys, bringing merchandise, wines, pottery, furs and pretty jewellery for London's first shopping women, across the sea from Gaul. Mr. Lethaby revives the suggestion that London may have begun life as the Port of St. Albans, which, long ago, was the great British stronghold of Verulamium.

For 300 years London was ruled by the Romans, and it became the busiest city in Britain. It was built on the banks of the Walbrook. It must have been a beautiful city, with its red-tiled houses, its wide squares, and its amphitheatres, where gladiators and animals fought.

"The best way to see again the old Roman city of London," says Mr. Lethaby, "is to go to the foot of the hill below St. Magnus the Martyr, and then, turning away from the riverside quays of the seaport, to walk up in the street, which still retains something of the look of the High street in an old market town.

"Behind it we may still discern the ghost of the Roman Axis street. Right and left are narrow streets with red plastered houses, separated by little 'orangways.' Here, at a corner, is a small temple with a dedication to the Twelve Emperors. There is a great city bath.

"Further on is the civic centre, the market place and hall. Beyond are the walls and gates, and in the background rise the northern heights and wooded hills now called Hampstead and Highgate."

Who built London Bridge? Nothing was known of a Roman bridge across the Thames until recent history. Then, when the old stone bridge was destroyed, evidence was found that a Roman bridge had preceded it, and we may believe that the legions of Rome first linked Middlesex with Surrey.

Mr. Lethaby has brought up to date the mass of archaeological material gathered by Roach Smith and earlier writers, and, like all antiquarians, he does not give rein to his imagination. But the Londoner, reading between the lines, will build up a colorful picture of the first city of London, its streets thronged with Roman citizens and wild British tribesmen; its shops full of articles brought from the Latin world; its pavements echoing to the sound of chariot wheels and the steady tramp of the legions passing through London on their way to police the barbarous districts of the north.

"Roman building methods," says Mr. Lethaby, "were remarkably like our own of a century ago. The large number of tools which have been found and brought together in our museums are one proof of this. We have adzes and axes, hammers, chisels and gouges, saws, drills, and files; also foot rules, plumb-bobs and a plane."

It is curious how little things have altered.

"Doors would not have been very different from our own, as is shown by many examples of framed panel work from foreign sites in museums. The use of window glass was very general. It was cast in small panes, as is shown by the large proportion of existing fragments, which have edges and corners."

Mr. Lethaby waxes quite enthusiastic over the work of the Romans.

"A study of Roman methods may suggest to us many points for our consideration and emulation. I would especially mention their excellent mortar, made of crushed tile, opus signinum and coarse tesserae floors, cemented linings, red external plastering, the tile-shaped brick, tile wall linings and down-pipes, hip and gable knobs, vaults of box-tiles and pipes, the hypocaust system of heating low under-floor spaces connected with an external stoke-hole in one direction and with a flue in the other, panels of stonework, painted decorations, marble linings, cast pediwork."

Praises This Asthma Remedy. A grateful user of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy finds it the only remedy that will give relief, though for thirteen years he had sought relief. Many years of needless suffering may be prevented by using this wonderful remedy at the first warning of trouble. Its use is simple, its cost is slight, and it can be purchased almost anywhere.

OBITUARY.

The Late Mrs. Vine.

On Tuesday last Mrs. Wm. C. Vine passed away at her late residence on Alma Avenue. Mrs. Vine, who had been ailing or some time, lapsed into a state of unconsciousness about a week ago and gradually slept on until the end came on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Vine was formerly Miss Elita Saul, and came to Canada when quite a little child from County Down, Ireland. Her father at that time came to Montreal to engage in the construction of the old Victoria bridge, at Montreal. After that project was completed, the family moved to Kingston, and from there to Odessa and Camden East. It was here, in June, 1873, that Miss Saul was married to Mr. Wm. C. Vine, who survives her. And ever since her marriage they have resided in Napanee. Two years ago all the family and relatives gathered at the homestead to honor the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of the deceased.

There were five children: Mrs. Richard Vanalstine, of St. Catharines; Miss Edith, of The Beaver staff, Napanee; Mrs. I. P. Huffman, Napanee; Mrs. J. F. Donaldson, of Peterboro', and Mr. William E. Vine, of Napanee. It is rather a remarkable fact that of the seven sisters and brothers and the five children, the death of Mrs. Vine constitutes the first break in the family. Besides the children and her husband, there is left to mourn the loss, Mrs. Manuel Osser, of Harrowsmith; Mrs. J. E. Sigsworth, of Harrowsmith; Mrs. S. L. Williams, Camden East, sisters; and W. J. Saul, Perth; R. W. Saul, Camden East, and Mr. David Saul, Camden East.

The late Mrs. Vine was a member of Trinity Methodist Church, and the funeral service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. R. Tanton, on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Vine was possessed of a splendid christian character and was always interested in all that made for the best, both in the community and the church. For the last few years she has been more or less confined to the house and will be missed most by those in the home, who were in so close contact with her, and to whom The Beaver extends its deepest sympathy.

Farewell and Presentation

A largely attended meeting of the congregation of Trinity Church was held in the school room last Thursday night for the purpose of expressing appreciation of the presence and services in the choir of Miss Mildred Perry, who leaves today to take up a course of training in the Toronto General Hospital. The meeting was of a two-fold character. There was at first a programme of instrumental and vocal numbers, in which Miss Perry took part, and then on behalf of the congregation Miss Alma Thomson presented Miss Perry with an address of appreciation, which was accompanied with a purse of money presented by Mr. J. E. Robinson.

The balance of the evening was spent in a social way, lunch being served by the Ladies' Aid. Miss Perry leaves the church and town with the well wishes of a large circle of friends and acquaintances to whom she has endeared herself by her bright disposition and willingness to serve unstintingly the community and the church.

OBITUARY.

Late Mrs. Ira B. Hudgins.

There passed away at the home of her son, in her 80th year, one of Richmond's oldest and most respected citizens, in the person of Mrs. Ira B. Hudgins. In spite of tender care and careful nursing, the end came at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, September 17th.

The deceased was a woman of most lovable and cheerful disposition and will be greatly missed by every one who had the privilege of knowing her, having a kind word for everyone.

Although the late Mrs. Hudgins had been in failing health for the past two years, she was never heard to murmur or complain, but would repeatedly remark "The Lord has been good to me."

She was also a woman of splendid Christian character, having accepted Christ at the remarkable early age of eight years. All through her long and useful life she has been a staunch member of the Methodist Church, and up to her declining years took an active part in all its various organizations. Being a woman of keen memory and clear intellect, her advice was always useful.

The deceased was a life long resident of this community, having been born iff the year 1845, on the old Secsmith homestead, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John O. Secsmith, where she lived up to the time of her marriage to her surviving husband, Mr. Ira B. Hudgins, who after their marriage moved to his present home 50 years ago, where she lived up to the time of her death, within sight of her birthplace. Besides an aged and sorrowing husband, the deceased leaves to mourn her loss, three daughters and one son, Mrs. James Wilson, Brathonia; Mrs. Edmond Wilson, of Edmonton, Alta.; Mrs. Edward Purcell, of Colebrook, and Mr. J. C. Hudgins on the homestead; also two brothers, Mr. T. E. Sexsmith, of 63 Fairview Boulevard, Toronto, and Mr. D. R. Sexsmith, who still resides on the farm of her birth; also seven teen grandchildren and one great-grandson.

The funeral, which was held at the house, conducted by her pastor and friend, Rev. Mr. Anderson, was largely attended by many relatives and friends from far and near, who came to pay their last respects to one who was worthy of all the respect that could be shown, and many were the floral tributes sent by friends both present and by those who distance held them back, resulting in a profusion of flowers.

The casket was lowered in the grave in Riverview cemetery, there passed from sight one of this community's saintly old ladies, but whose memory we cherish and revere.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the sorrowing husband and family in their bereavement.

James Calvin Trumper.

The late James Calvin Trumper was born at Napanee, Ont., to George and Ester Trumper twenty-five years ago, coming to Fort Hope at the age of age. Here he received his education after which he worked in the Nicholson File for some time.

For the past five years he has lived in Oshawa where he worked in the General Motors factory.

On the beginning of the present year he became ill and was forced to leave work, and in February he went to Fort Twede coast, hoping that his life could not be saved, so he returned home in July where he remained until Monday afternoon when through the kindness of Providence he was given rest from his suffering.

In religion he was an Anglican, and attended St. John's Church here.

He is survived by his sorrowing parents; brothers George and William; sister, Mrs. W. Copeland; aunt, Miss Babcock, Yarker; uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eagle, Toronto, and Mrs. Harry Fleming, Tamworth.

The funeral took place from his late residence, Cavan street, to the Port Hope Union cemetery. — Port Hope Guide.

CONWAY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The September meeting took place at the home of Mrs. Hopper, Conway, September 9th, with an attendance of nineteen members, and Mrs. President and Vice-President in their places.

The meeting opened in the usual way with the repeating of the Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer. The lady who was expected to give a temperance address on her recipe that she was unable to be present. Mrs. J. C. Fitchett read a short piece from the Ladies' Home Journal regarding the present liquor problem in Quebec.

The plans were discussed for serving lunch at the school fair. Other business of the Institute followed, then the singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.

The hostess served a dainty lunch and all were asked to remember to be present at the school fair at Stirling, Sept. 18th. A number of faithful members provided lunch boxes for the Book Fair for the Township of Camden on the 19th day of November, 1919, as No. 14746.

METHODIST DISTRICT MEETING.

The Financial District meeting of Napanee District was held in Grace Methodist Church, Napanee, on Friday, Sept. 19th. Rev. A. J. Terrill, B.A., B.D., Chairman of the District, presided. Nearly every minister of the district and a good average of the lay delegates were present.

In addition to the routine business, which was put through with much despatch by the genial rapid-fring chairman, some of the most important resolutions were:

"In view of the rapid growth of our missionary operations and the pressing demands upon the Missionary Fund of the church:

1. That this district meeting recognize the serious problem facing the Mission Board at the present time.

2. That as a district we earnestly and loyally pledge ourselves to the special centenary campaign arranged for this year.

3. That in view of the serious conditions in the northern part of the district it is of the utmost importance that we retain our missionary at Plevna, and that we, as a district, in addition to our usual missionary obligations, pledge ourselves to help maintain our missionary in that field to the extent of $200.00.

4. That the following amounts be allocated to each circuit; Trinity $100.00, Grace $100.00, Deseronto $10.00, Morven $20.00, Newburgh $40.00, Odessa $20.00, Tamworth $40.00, Selby $40. Bath $10.00, Adolphustown $20.00, Bay $20.00, Yarker $20.00, Enterprise $20.00, Roblin $15.00, Arden $10.00, and Mountain Grove $10.00. Then Rev. A. R. McWilliams, B.A., returned missionary, made a personal contribution of $15.00."

This hearty response to the needs, rather than leave the Methodist people of Plevna Mission without a pastor for the year, should appeal to our loyal laymen of many a district to place this small amount of extra missionary money in the hands of their pastors without being asked for it. Brethren, the need is urgent; do not leave your pastor in suspense, but tell him at once the amount you will help.

The request from the Presbyterian Church that the Methodist Church take over their work at Mattawatchan was agreed to and attached to the Denbigh Mission, under Rev. Perry A. Scott.

The Parsonage Board of Plevna Mission was given the privilege of using the proceeds from the sale of the Ardoch Methodist Church to repair the Plevna parsonage.

A committee was appointed to arrange the time, place and programme for the District Missionary Centenary Celebration at the time of the November District meeting.

The afternoon and evening of Thursday, Oct. 2nd, was the date set for the District Y. P. S. Convention. All our young people are urged to attend, as we are fortunate in securing Rev. Dr. J. Howard Taylor, Superintendent of the China Inland Mission; Mrs. J. Fallis, North China, and F. H. Rhodes, Deputy Secretary, for the evening addresses.

Each pastor was made responsible for the Educational, Evangelism and Social service and Missionary Anniversary services on his own field.

The Statistical Secretary requested that each pastor report the actual amount of salary received at the time of filling in the schedules for the May District meeting.

The arrangements reported by Rev. S. F. Dixon for holding the District Ladies' Aid Convention at Colebrook on Tuesday, Sept. 30th, 1924, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., were accepted.

The chairman made an earnest plea for hearty co-operation in the Plebiscite campaign to save us the calamity that would be the result of a defeat of the O. T. A. The Methodist ministers are solid for the O. T. A. and the church is practically a unit in its favor. Let the forces for righteousness and sobriety rally to the standard, that our children and youth may be spared the disgrace and suffering of the drinker's home.

The following resolution on the Plebiscite was unanimously passed:

"That whereas the Province has been asked for an opinion of the plebiscite on the O. T. A., we, the Napanee District meeting in regular session assembled, desire to express our satisfaction with the O. T. A. and its beneficial effects on the moral, social and economic life of the community, and we do hereby put ourselves on record favoring the continuance of the Act; and pledge ourselves to that end."

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, B.A., B.D., President of the Conference, presented the financial and and spiritual condition of the church, with a strong appeal to both ministers and laymen for an intensive evangelism during the year.

Rev. Roy McWilliams returned missionary from Japan, give a fine address on missionary work.

The meeting were both instructive and inspiring.

In the Town Hall in the evening Rev. Dr. Thomas gave a masterful temperance address, in which he proved that the O. T. A. had been a success beyond the most sanguine hopes of the temperance people of 1916. Also that Government sale in Quebec and British Columbia was a failure in every phase of its operation.

BAY OF QUINTE LEAGUE GOLF.

The last of the league games in this district was played on Wednesday, when the Napanee team visited Belleville. The Bay of Quinte course is in splendid shape this year, the weather for that afternoon was all that could be desired, and the game was much enjoyed. The Quinte Club entertained our players to dinner in the Club House after the game. The result of the play was as follows:

THE FRONTENAC CLUB

This New Organization Should Be Popular With the Young Men

The Frontenac Club is the latest association to be instituted in Napanee, and while still in its infancy is decidedly a lusty infant and bids fair to more will be heard of and from it in the future. It will prove to be a boon to the young men of the town who may become members, by providing a place where they can indulge in sports, have healthy and invigorating recreation and have a general development improved by drill and gymnastic evolutions under competent instruction, also a place of social activity which the projectors of the club have in view will prove a powerful incentive to young members.

The club is composed of members of 9th Company Frontenac Regiment and other returned soldiers; also of members of the Militia.

The officers:—Honorary Presidents Col. Patridge, Kingston, and Mayor Alex. MacGregor, Napanee; President, Lieut. Frank Bell; Secretary, Lieut. C. Mills, and Treasurer, Sergt. Major MacGillivray. These men are all in earnest in regard to their undertaking, and their goal is success.

Through the courtesy of the Militia Department the Club has been provided with quarters in the Armouries, rent-free. The members will have a large clubroom, a reading room, a cloak-room and a toilet-room; the two last mentioned having hot and cold water; the whole being steam-heated. By day the rooms will be bright as they are well provided with windows, and at night an ample supply of electric light will be provided.

Already a good start has been made towards furnishing. It is intended to have the walls and ceilings tinted a pleasing color and have necessary painting done. Then the furnishing will be gone on with as rapidly as possible. Good pictures will be wanted for the walls, also a supply of magazines and newspapers for the reading room.

The Club hopes to acquire a small, but good useful reference library and no doubt friends of the movement will help in this direction.

The Club has the use of the main floor of the Armouries for games, drills, etc. Proficient officers come periodically from Kingston to impart drill instruction.

The members have purchased the necessary equipment for the following games, viz., boxing, punching bag, medicine ball and basketball. They also intend to train, for outdoor sports, and hockey, baseball and lacrosse teams.

Later on they expect to provide for good concerts, dances, lectures and other attractions and they even aspire to dramatic entertainments.

The formal opening of the rooms for the reception of the Club will take place as soon as arrangements can be completed.

DR. THOMAS AT TOWN HALL

On Friday last, Dr. Thomas, of Toronto, spoke before a crowded house in the Town Hall, on the O. T. A. The speaker at the outset made clear the issue before the electorate clear. The question is the O. T. A. vs some form of government sale. From every angle, the moral, economic, and social, the O. T. A. had more than justified its existence.

Turning to the international aspects of the question, the speaker compared the social usages of Europe which he personally observed around the drinking habit to that of the United States which by an amendment to the constitution had eliminated the practise from their life. Canada had to choose whether it was content to be wedded to the past or was prepared to set its face forward to the new order.

In 1916 Ontario passed the O. T. A. which was not a prohibitory measure, but was based on the principle of removing incentives to drinking. Later on, by additional legislation, it was made a prohibitory measure, and under this law there is operation with marked success. Drinking has decreased in Canada from 9 pints per capita to 3 pints, drunkenness had been decreased in Canada by 60 per cent and in Toronto the convictions for crimes associated with liquor had decreased by 310 per cent. Taking all the statistics from government returns, there has been a decrease of 60 per cent in all the crimes in Ontario. Surely that in itself is sufficient to justify continuance of the O. T. A.

The alternative is government sale. Government sale means increased facilities for drinking, which means an immediate increase in crime and bootlegging as the experience of British Columbia and Quebec show. The speaker showed charts, and quoted government statistics to buttress up his arguments. The sale of beer in Quebec had increased from six million gallons in 1920-1 to twenty-two million gallons in 1922-3, and 46 per cent. of all business failures last year in Canada were in Quebec, while in Ontario during 1923 there was a more liquor sold through the bootleggers than there was through the government stores in Quebec.

At the close of his address Dr. Thomas answered a number of questions that were put to him by the audience, and the meeting closed by the use of the National Anthem.

Word has been received in Newburgh of the death of Mrs. Thompson, former resident of this place. The death occurred Monday morning, from pneumonia, following an operation for appendicitis in Jan. His young wife, his parents, brother and sister, have the sympathy of many friends in Newburgh.

These certificates were presented for regular attendance at the meetings of the Band and general interest. Six members of the Band have been present at every meeting during the year. Two of the certificates were donated by the C. G. I. T. run by the Mission Band, and the others by individuals.

The workers in favor of the continuance of the O. T. A. have been fully organized, and a strong committee has the work in hand and sub-committees are appointed to carry out the various details.

MANY thousands of people have eaten McGregor's with a relish—but it is surprising how many of them have figured that sausage could only be cooked the one way.

Since we began publishing our "Six to the Pound" cooking recipes, we are receiving hundreds of commendations from users, stating how much they appreciated the wonderful versatility of the Sausage de Luxe as a Meatfood

The "Six to the Pound" Recipes

No. 1 McGregor's Sausage a la Royale.

Place McGregor's Sausages in pan, without extra water, and bring to a simmer. Simmer, not parboil, gently for 15 minutes. Pour off water, let sausage cool thoroughly. Separate links with scissors or sharp knife. Put generous supply of butter in sizzling hot frying pan. When butter is melted sausage will come right out of skin without further burning. This method of cooking will keep all the juices in the sausage and is pronounced by experts the most delicious of all ways of cooking.

One customer says—

"McGregor's sausages a la Royale is a treat. It lifts Sausage out of the ranks of a mere food into the realm of superfine delicacies."

OBITUARY

Mrs. Jacob H. Roblin.

There passed to rest last Monday morning, at 95 Nelson St., Kingston, Susanna Roblin, widow of the late Jacob H. Roblin, of Adolphustown. The late Mrs. Roblin, who was seventy-seven years of age, was the descendent of two prominent U. E. L. families, her father being the late Elijah Lucas, of North Fredericksburgh, and her mother, Felinda York. In 1870 she married the late Jacob H. Roblin and moved with him to the farm in the 1st Concession of Adolphustown, where for nearly fifty years she discharged the many duties of farm life. She was ever a good neighbor, a true friend, and above all a self-denying and conscientious mother. She was for years a regular attendant of the Methodist Church and a willing helper in every good work in the community. After the death of Mr. Roblin in 1915, Mrs. Roblin made her home with her only daughter, Mrs. A. F. Miller. She had been in failing health for some years, and the end was hastened by a paralytic stroke. Besides two sisters and a brother, she is survived by two sons, Byam A., of Belleville, and David W., of Kingston, and one daughter, Mrs. A. F. Miller, also of Kingston. A private funeral service was held Tuesday afternoon, at the home of her daughter, after which the remains were interred in the family plot at the U. E. L. Methodist cemetery, Adolphustown.

Less Pot-washing

SMP Enameled Ware has the smooth surface and polish of fine crockery—without the breakage. And it is so very easy to clean—just like china, and therefore makes light work of pot washing.

Try this test. Take an SMP Enameled Ware sauce pan and an all-metal sauce pan of equal size. Into each pour a quart of cold water. Put on the fire at the same time. The SMP sauce pan will be boiling merrily when the water in the other is just beginning to simmer.

DOMINION OF CANADA REFUNDING LOAN, 1924

The announcement that the Dominion Government has arranged to issue $50,000,000 of new twenty-year bonds, payable in Canada, will be welcomed by investors as a whole. One of the outstanding features in connection with the bond market during the last few weeks has been a shortage of the higher grade of bonds, and with $107,000,000 of Victory Bonds maturing on November 1st, some questions have arisen in the minds of many investors as to the channel in which their funds would find investment.

Bonds are now being offered by a strong financial syndicate consisting of A. E. Ames & Co., Wood, Gundy & Co., Dominion Securities Corporation, Limited, National City Company, Limited, Bank of Montreal, The Royal Bank of Canada and the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

The new issue of bonds payable in Canada amounts to only $50,000,000, as compared with $107,000,000 of maturing bonds, and while it will not be possible for all present holders of bonds maturing on November 1st next, to participate in the new issue, many will undoubtedly find this an ideal opportunity for reinvestment. Not buyers, of course, will have an opportunity of participating in this issue, inasmuch as the offering terms indicate that this is not a renewal loan, but that in order to grant a special concession to those who now own maturing bonds, such bonds will be accepted at face value on or before October 15th, the purchaser having first detached the interest coupon due November 1st. In other words, the purchaser buying bonds receives practically double interest for a period of over two weeks.

Those in close touch with the financial situation anticipate that the new offering will be quickly oversubscribed. At the time last year, an issue four times the size of the one now offered was more than subscribed in the course of a week, and investment bankers generally are watching keenly on the part of those who wish to participate.

The Government's official announcement indicates that the present loan completes all refunding operations that are necessary for some time to come. It is pointed out that the indebtedness of the Government will be reduced by about $22,000,000, and as a substantial amount of new money has been obtained in United States, the supply of Canadian payment bonds in Canada has been reduced by a very large amount.

It is felt that the distribution of the new loan between Canada and United States should prove satisfactory to all schools of thought in Canada. Certain interests have felt that it would be better to bring a large volume of new money into Canada. Others have felt that present holders of Victory Bonds should be given an opportunity to renew their loans to the Dominion Government. The result of this operation is that a large amount of new money will be brought in, but those investors who wish to extend the term of their investment may do so provided they act before oversubscription is announced.

Morpheus and Somnus.

Morpheus, the ancient Greek God of Dreams, was early pictured as carrying with things. He held in his hands a wand or horn from which he shed the drug produced vapor. Somnus was the son or Somnus the God of sleep. The name Morpheus is derived from a Greek word which means to shape or form, and the god was given to the god of dreams because of the shapes or forms which appear to him in the dreamland. The word, while the name of a sleep-producing drug, comes from Morpheus.

All bonds may be registered as to principal only, and bonds in denominations of $500 and authorized multiples thereof may be fully registered.

Privilege of Conversion

Purchasers of new bonds may make payment on October 15th next with Victory Bonds maturing November 1st, 1924 (after detaching interest coupons due November 1st). Such purchasers will receive in cash the difference between the face value of maturing Victory Bonds and the price of the new bonds, namely, $3 per $100. As new bonds will be dated October 15th, such purchasers will thus receive a bonus of one-half month's interest (2½), thereby reducing the cost of new bonds from 97 to 96.79, or a yield rate of 4.75%. As the amount of this issue is limited to $50,000,000 as compared with maturing bonds of approximately $107,000,000, holders desiring to convert should make immediate application.

Dominion of Canada bonds are the most attractive investment available in Canada.

This offering is made subject to prior sale and advance in price, and the right is reserved to allot a less amount of bonds than applied for.

Bonds are offered for delivery in interim form about October 15th, 1924, when, as and if issued and accepted by us.

"Orphaned" Horses.

Three unknown thoroughbred horses grazed on Beddington sewage farm for two years, says a London Daily Express report. All attempts to find the owner have failed. They now have been sold at Aldridges' to meet the expense of their keep. The best horse fetched more than £70.

They arrived at the sewage farm with a groom, who gave the name and address of the "owner." The horses were taken in and grazed. When the "owner" was asked for grazing money he disclaimed all knowledge of the horses.

The matter was placed in the hands of the police, and the horses were advertised all over the country. The owner did not come forward to claim them. Several people whose horses had been stolen went to Beddington, but none recognized the animals.

Mother—Didn't I tell you to notice when the milk boiled over?

Mary—Yes, mother. It was a quarter past four.

BEAVER LAKE

A sad gloom was cast over the entire community on Thursday, when the death occurred of Raymond Woodcock, oldest son of Mr. Wellington Woodcock. He was only sick a week, and blood-poisoning was the cause of his death. In the early age of eighteen he was called to the Great Beyond. He was of a kind disposition and will be greatly missed by those who knew him. His coffin was covered with beautiful wreaths. The funeral took place to the Methodist Church on Saturday and was well attended. The pall-bearers were; Gordon Brown, Stanley Williams, Stuart Stinson, Walter McDonald, John Enret and Leland Redden. He leaves to mourn his loss, his father and mother, also five sisters and one brother. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved family. — Miss Thelma Johnston, of Toronto, is spending some time with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hughes.—Mr. James Kirkpatrick, of Port Colborne, spent a few days at his brother's, Thomas Kirkpatrick. — Mr. James McDonald and Annie spent last week-end visiting relatives in Camden East. — Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Storring took in Centreville Fair on Saturday.—Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Rogers and little son, Allan, also Mr. and Mrs. J. Johnston's on Sunday. — Little Dalton Storring has gone to Belleville to attend school.

The Ballot.

Our word ballot is from the Italian "ballotta," which is the diminutive of "balla," a ball, and it is used to indicate the modern method of secret-voting employed in political legislative, and judicial assemblies. The name comes from the use of a little ball dropped secretly into a chalice as the right receptacle, but nowadays it is used for any system of secret-voting, even though no such ball is used. In ancient Athens balls of stone or of metal were used. In ancient Rome blocks of wood, called "tabellae" were used, and a vote was cast by placing one in a wicker basket or box called a "cista."

In England the ballot was suggested for use in Parliament in the time of Charles II. and it was actually used by the Scotch Parliament in 1642.

Secret-voting by means of a ballot — a slip of paper to be picked out of a number by the person for whom the vote was cast, was introduced into South Australia in 1856, and shortly after the ballot was in use in the other Australian colonies. Australia is the way in this reform, which was next taken up by Great Britain. At the close of 1870 the ballot was employed in the election of members of the London School Board under the Education Act of that year. In 1872 W. E. Forster's Ballot Act introduced the ballot in all parliamentary and municipal elections in Great Britain, except parliamentary elections for universities. Secret-voting by means of the ballot was first used in Canada at the general federal elections held in January, 1874. The Canadian election law that then went into operation was largely copied from the British Act. Amendments have since been made, but they relate largely to matters of detail. The procedure followed at our parliamentary elections is very similar to that followed at a British election.

Crossing Mongolian River.

A traveller in Mongolia gives an interesting account of how he crossed a river with a pack train. "Two cugouts were requisitioned," he said, "into which we loaded our baggage, and when all was ready we first chased the cows into the water. Then, tying a couple of ropes to the heads of the camels, we handed the ends to a native in the stern of one of the boats. Two ponies supplied the power; a Mongol, leading over the bow of each boat, grasped a pony's tail in his right hand while he manipulated the reins with his left. In that manner we crossed the river. When the camels floundered out they all but succeeded in upsetting us.

FORTUNES IN PRISON CELLS

Business Conducted From Behind Bars.

A portable tie-making machine has been placed on the market by a man named Wunnenberg, and it is manufactured at the rate of a hundred a month.

Wunnenberg, a German, states that he invented his new machine while serving a two-year sentence in the federal prison at Atlanta, Georgia, for violation of the neutrality laws.

Wunnenberg is by no means the only man who has made money in prison. Joseph Svacek, a Bohemian, but like Wunnenberg, an American citizen was sent to five years' penal servitude for burglary, and while serving his sentence in the Maryland State Prison invented a device to be used in the manufacture of boots. As soon as he was released he was offered a position at £1,000 a year with a firm of bootmakers, and with the royalties which have accrued is now a very wealthy man.

A banker named Zucco was arrested in Paris for what was politely called an "irregular financial transaction." He was found guilty and imprisoned at Fresnes. By bribing a warder he got into communication with a former clerk and started a scheme for getting small investors to subscribe for Lottery Bonds.

Business went extremely well, and the new establishment was soon employing ten clerks while Zucco, in his cell, was coining money at the rate of £60 a day. But something happened and Zucco was tried all over again, given a fresh sentence, and placed in another prison, where he will have no opportunity to corrupt his guardians.

Taking of finances in a cell brings to mind the notorious case of Alphonse Stephani, who was sentenced to life imprisonment in Dannemora Criminal Asylum for the murder of Clinton Reynolds, a well-known New York lawyer.

Although adjudged insane, Stephani has a amazing financial instinct, and his trustees, acting on his advice, have invested his money so that the four thousand pounds which was his original capital is now nearly fifty thousand.

But though a rich man, Stephani, being "strictly dead," is unable to touch one penny of his property, and his greatest daily luxury is a tin of condensed milk.

Another insane criminal, an artist named Dadd, who died some years ago in the Criminal Lunatic Asylum of Broadmoor, had some of his pictures exhibited in London. They were of wonderful quality, and in the opinion of some critics equal to those of Watts. Dadd painted many pictures, a number of which were sold at good prices, and he also did mural paintings in Broadmoor, which are still to be seen there.

In the French penal settlement of New Caledonia convicts who behave well are allotted land, and allowed to farm on a profit-sharing basis. Years ago Pere la Cainnette, having a passion for jealousy murdered a man, was sentenced for life, and sent to the penal island.

He showed an extraordinary genius for agriculture, and for years past has been making at least a thousand a year. Gelde Cassil, an Italian, sent to prison for the murder of a barrister at Perugia occupied his time in writing a play, a tragedy based on his own crime. This play was afterwards purchased by the great actress Eleanora Duse, and has proved a money-maker.

Strange Poison Case

An extraordinary case of attempted murder is now exciting New Yorkers to a greater degree than many a case of actual murder. This is partly because of the mystery adding of the alleged poisoner and his victim and because the other circumstances are unusual. The motive is alleged to be man's infatuation for another woman. One of the most amazing features of the case is that the wife suspected that she was being fed with various poisonous substances and informed the police. They trailed her husband for weeks, and all the time the wife had to pretend that she was on affectionate terms with him, and guard herself against eating something that would result in her death. At last the man was arrested with a vial of some deadly poison in his hand, the supposition being that he was on his way to administer it to his wife. He is said to have made a confession.

Possible cases, on a big, horrify the public to a greater extent than murders committed by other means, and the prosecution in this case is terrible in the annals of Ontario. Was one of them, and the late B. B. Osler acted for the prosecution in his career that gave him the greatest satisfaction in retrospect was that of Hammond. The Buchanan case in Toronto was another shocking affair. In one respect it was strongly reminiscent of the Molyneux in New York which was, with the exception of the Thaw case, the most sensational in the history of that city. With the exception of Thaw defence, more money was spent to clear Roland Molyneux than any other accused murderer. The point of resemblance between the Molyneux and the Buchanan cases was that in both the actual victim was not the intended victim. In one case it was the wife who was plotted against, in the other it was a young man who had quarrelled with Molyneux.

Molyneux, whose father, Gen. Molyneux, was a distinguished lecturer of the Inns of Court, was, it was one of the few accused persons ever involved in a sensational affair who might be described as "a well-known clubman" for his membership of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club was one of the chief features of his career. He resigned after a bitter quarrel with Harry S. Cornish, the athletic director. Previous to this he had met Miss Elsworth in love with Miss Blanche Chesebrough, and had introduced to her his friend, Henry Tammac Barnett. In October, 1898, Barnett received by mail what purported to be a box of a proprietary remedy. He took some of it, and shortly afterward died; his death being ascribed to diphtheria. Among his effects was a bundle of letters from Miss Chesebrough, couched in most affectionate terms. A few days later Molyneux and Miss Chesebrough were married, a month later Harry Corning received through the mail a small bottle, containing some of the poison which had been on the wrapper away and took the bottle home.

Two or three days later Mrs. Katherine J. Adams, a distant cousin with whom he lodged, complained of a headache, and it was suggested that she might take some of the effervescing salts. She did so and died within ten minutes. The facts that Molyneux had been a rival of one of the men who died so suddenly and had quarrelled with Cornish; that both had received packages through the mail containing poison, and that Molyneux himself was a professional chemist employed in a color factory directed suspicion to him, and he surrendered before being arrested. It was proved that Mrs. Adams had died of a dose of mercuric cyanide, a rare and deadly drug. There followed a terrific legal battle, mostly fought out by handwriting experts. The judge admitted evidence concerning the death of Barnett, and Molyneux was found guilty. An appeal was lodged on the ground that the Barnett evidence ought not to have been admitted. A new trial resulted in Molyneux's acquittal. His wife divorced him and he remarried. He sought to support himself by writing plays and stories founded on his experiences in prison and eventually became violently insane. He died in 1917.

Another case that created a tremendous sensation in New York and elsewhere was that of Dr. Warren Waite, a young dentist who with his wife lived in a fashionable part of the city and set up a good deal of money. He was the son-in-law of John E. Peck, a wealthy retired druggist of Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. Peck were visiting their daughter in 1916, when Mrs. Peck became ill and died from Bright's disease. A couple of months later Mr. Peck also became seriously ill and he too died. Waite accompanied the body of Mrs. Peck to Grand Rapids and saw it buried. Then he had Mr. Peck's body cremated. The family opposed this and the body was buried. They had been unable to account for the receipt of a telegram from an unknown-looker urging an autopsy. This was performed and revealed the presence of ground glass. The newspapers then took up the case, made their own investigations and revealed the existence of a woman who was waiting for Waite's wife to die in order to succeed her. Waite made a confession in which he admitted that he had married Miss Peck to put himself in a position for the poisoning and then had proceeded to murder the members of the family who blocked his way to it. He died in the electric chair.

THE NAPANEE BEAVER

THE MAGIC TEST TUBE.

Some of the Wonderful Things Chemists Discovered.

From the window in the room in which this article is being written can be seen a bridge spanning a river, says Tit-Bits. The bridge is made of iron, and it is being repainted—red. To many people this will seem an unusual color for such a structure.

In the near future, however, many if not most iron erections will be painted red. The reason is that a new discovery by chemists means that there is nothing better to keep iron from rusting than iron rust itself.

A red-colored paint is being made from a mixture of which iron rust and linseed oil are the principal ingredients. Paint so made has proved itself to be the finest known protective agency for iron that is exposed continuously to the action of the weather, and it is now being used on an increasingly large scale.

A connected story of the achievements of modern chemical science would read like a romance of the days when Aladdin was supposed to have worked miracles with his lamp, with the important difference that in the case of the chemists the tale would be true.

Again, do you know that milk can be got, indirectly, from sawdust? Recent experiments prove that a perfectly good food for cows can be made from pine sawdust, treated with certain non-injurious acids under steam pressure.

The researches of chemists show that coal is one of the most wonderful substances in the world. Thousands of dyes are made from it, although less than a thousand of them are commonly used.

There was a time when all our rare perfumes and spices were obtained from the East. Now we get them from coal, which supplies us not only with the loveliest colors, the most delicate scents, the finest flavours, and the most useful drugs, but with the deadliest poisons known to science and the most powerful explosives.

Probably you do not know that novocaine, the pain-deadening substance which the dentist injects into your gum before extracting a tooth, comes from coal. So do aspirin, salicylic acid—a remedy for rheumatism—phenacetine, and a whole series of antiseptics and germicides. It has been rightly said that what we know about coal even now is comparable to what one knows of a book when one has read only the preface.

Just now experiments are being carried out in connection with the waste products of maize and other cereals. One of the men so engaged in these experiments is to produce a substitute for rubber. Already a rubber-like substance has been obtained from a kind of gum yielded by Indian corn—the red rubber sponge in your bathroom, or the red eraser on your lead pencil, may be made from it. The gum on the backs of stamps and envelopes comes from the same source.

Recently it was announced that British chemists had found a new mixture with the aid of which unlimited quantities of the waste hops discarded by brewers in the making of beer can be quickly made into food suitable for use in internal combustion engines. Waste paper can also be turned to good account in the same way, and experts say that the discovery is likely to be of very important part in augmenting, if not supplanting, petrol supplies of the future.

School for Canaries.

Teaching canaries to sing is netting one man a comfortable little fortune. In some cases a canary graduate from his training school will fetch as much as $150. A visitor who investigated personally said "I cannot imagine anything more opposite than the liquid trilling notes of these birds and the shrill, ear-splitting piping of the majority of canaries. When the birds are six weeks old they should be put in small cages and placed near a finished singer. The youngsters soon begin to imitate the adult bird. This is a simple method enough, but to train a large number of canaries means retaining many trained adult singers. In Germany, when the Hartz rollers are again beginning to make their appearance, the young birds are taught to sing in a room with a barrel organ. The young birds, after three or four months' daily tuition at this organ, are expected to be 'word perfect.' Their song must be free from all harsh notes, and be equal in all branches named with the bird closed."

Camel Fills Many Roles.

From time immemorial the camel has been regarded as one of the most useful animals of the east. In the hot, dry desert regions the camel is the horse, the cow, and the sheep of the borders and trades. He carries all the burdens, he furnishes flesh and milk for food, and his hair or wool furnishes material for tenting cloth. At night he is a pet for the children of the chief get cups of the camel's milk, cheery and full with which to sup. On the chief's table is cooked camel flesh. The herders wear robes and turbans of brown camel's hair cloth. The master sleeps under a camel's hair tent.

Awful!

"I see it says here some of them London banks have been doin' business for thirty years and more and never closed their doors."

"Dear me, how careless! I wonder anybody trust 'em with their money."

'Twas Pleasure.

She (indignantly): "You had no business to kiss me!"

He (apologetically): "But, hang it all, it wasn't business—it was pleasure!"

Husband Germs.

Matsie: "Do kisses really contain germs?"

Mamsie: "Well, you can catch a husband that way."

Don't keep the family awake nights with coughing ! Boots Meloids—the tiny black tablets in the tin box—act wonderfully well for any throat irritation or hacking cough. Four dozen boxes sold last year in England where they are made. Sold in Napanee by Wallace's at 25c. a box.

ELEPHANTS.

Charles Mayer Tells How He Trapped Sixty.

In telling the story of how he trapped sixty elephants at one time, Charles Mayer, explorer and animal hunter, says:

In the dense jungles of Malay, with vines and creepers binding the undergrowth together, everything is twilight, for the dense foliage of the trees overhead completely shuts out the sun. Progress is slow and difficult and sometimes the plan of driving elephants through such a tangle seems hopeless.

The work of making our trap was prodigious. Trees about twenty-five feet in length and about a foot and a half in diameter were cut down and dragged through the jungle for a quarter of a mile to a place I had selected. There they were planted in the ground for five feet and braced with smaller trees so they could stand the pressure of the elephants trying to barge through them. The trap was round, about seventy-five feet in diameter, with two wings one hundred feet long converging to the entrance.

After planting and bracing all the posts they were bound with heavy ropes made of twisted rattan, and the whole covered with vines and leaves to conceal them. We took care not to touch the ground in the vicinity, for like all jungle animals elephants can see at night and there is always danger to the people if they become suspicious. The whole thing could scarcely be distinguished from the dense growth that surrounded it. In the runway and in front of the entrance the grass was left untouched.

When all was finished the herd was about four miles away. Then every one got his instructions and we started, splitting into two groups and circling around the herd. A man was stationed in a tree every few hundred yards to steer the drive. This was all done at night and meant fighting every foot of the way through the dense jungle and keeping up a continuous hubbub of tom-toms and shouting. The elephants wish to avoid the noise and move slowly away from it, crashing through trees and vines.

The men behind have the easiest time, for they can follow the trails made by the elephants. No lights may be used, and care must be taken to avoid little elephants, who are about investigating. If they see a man and give the danger signal the entire herd stampedes.

The drive began with the men behind the herd at sunset Monday. Soon we heard the elephants moving away from the noise, crashing against the trees and breaking off the limbs in bulk, we stumbled on, guided only by the trails of the men in the trees. Insects swarmed about us and bit us until we were frantic. At times the drive was in one direction. Sometimes which meant that the herd had reversed in that direction and the men were in front. Then we would go back to the trap and drive them on. At dawn we had advanced only a mile and a half. Tuesday we pushed on and we slept until late in the afternoon.

But we had a stampede the next day. Just a little elephant, straying from the herd, saw a man and ran back stampeding and bellowing. Soon the entire herd came down on us. I jumped behind a tree and shouted to my men to do the same. Each of them picked and fell, and before I could count ten the elephants were upon us. I saw him and tore him in two, throwing the upper part of his body over his head and dashing on with the herd.

Elephants, bellowing furiously rushed past us, and men strewn behind them for safety as the immense animals loomed up in the darkness for a second and then disappeared. In their excitement they ran into trees and were thrown back, only to charge blindly on again. When elephants stampede their mouths fall in front and not charge, as many people imagine.

At last it was all over. We called the men, torches were lighted and we looked for the injured. Three had been killed and twelve hurt. After a few hours' rest in which I got the men together and talked to them until they calmed down we went back for the elephants again. They were not hard to find, for the herd had a wide swath through the jungle and had stopped about five miles away.

Men were posted again, and this time we decided there would be no rest until they were all in the trap. Some had escaped, but it was still the largest herd any one had ever seen. In their minds there seemed to be connection between the noise that was driving them on and the men they had seen on the night before. About midnight we approached the stockade, and the men went wild with delight, for above the uproar I could hear the calls of the men in the trees telling us that the head of the herd was in the runway.

The big beasts jammed in the runway between the wings, heaving and trumpeting, and the noise ahead of them into the trap. The walls of the wings groaned as they threw their bodies against the posts, while the natives kept up a continuous uproar and the elephants bellowed.

I climbed up on the platform and looked down and saw a tossing flood of backs that could be seen pouring into the trap. When the last one was inside, the ropes that held the gate were cut; it crashed down and bars were run through the sockets—the elephants, sixty in number, were trapped.

The Reason.

A Londoner met the oldest inhabitant of a small village and asked him how old he was.

"Oi be seven and four score, sir," replied the rustic.

"Why do you put the seven before the four score?" asked the visitor.

"Because I was seven year old when I was four score, sir," was the innocent reply.

How Rubber Is Collected.

Rubber arrives at the portals in different parts of the world in various forms. Plantation rubber is that which has been collected scientifically from cultivated trees; "native" rubber usually comes from the jungle.

Plantation rubber is clean, light in color, and, when seen in the creamy semi-transparent form known as "crepe," seems pretty enough to be used as material for a girl's summer frock.

Native rubber is almost black, as hard as iron, and contains a considerable amount of foreign matter. Twenty per cent. of dirt is the average amount extracted in the hot bath to which such rubber is subjected upon reaching the factory.

Although native rubber is so dirty, however, the way it is collected is very picturesque.

Having located and tapped his trees, the native puts utensils beneath the cuts (perhaps tin cups, more likely gourds or cocoanuts), then makes regular round with a bucket, emptying into this the milk-like substance which has run out from the trees.

This is known as latex and contains a certain amount of water.

As it is necessary to evaporate the water, the native builds a fire, then dips a stick into the latex and holds it in the smoke. As it dries, he re-dips, until the resulting lump of smoked rubber is some eight or twelve pounds in weight.

Another but rare method of collection is for the native to climb a tree and upon his own body, and so carry it to camp, where he pulls it off in strips!

Small wonder that "native" rubber requires a considerable amount of washing and softening when it reaches a factory!

FOR JOY OF GOOD HEALTH

Manitoba Woman Thanks Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Crandall, Manitoba.—"When I was a young girl at home and working I had terrible pains, almost more than I could bear, and I was not regular. These troubles kept me so tired all the time that I had no strength and no ambition to join in with my friends and have a good time. I was just tired and miserable always and felt just nervous as if it wasn't worth living. I saw so much in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then I had a friend who had taken it and told me about it, so I got some. Every time after taking it I got stronger and I soon did not suffer every month. It stopped my pains and helped me other ways. Then when my babies were coming I was so strong and went to the first month and added body. I took the Vegetable Compound right along and many it is made a new woman of me and able to do my work, and it helped me through confinement. You may use my letter if my wife will be helpful by it." —Mrs. Jos. H. Kunz, Box 56, Crandall, Manitoba.

DESERONTO

The Harvest Thanksgiving services at St. Mark's, Deseronto, on Sunday last, were full of the joy of the great festival and thoroughly enjoyed byall who attended in the right spirit. The decorations were remarkably good, showing thorough detail work by the ladies of the Chancel Guild. Over the altar were sheaves of grain waved before the Lord. On the Re-Table were model sheaves of wheat, loaves of bread, bunches of grapes, bouquets of flowers. With the electric lights lit the sanctuary was the most attractive place in the church; the choir stalls were tastefully treated and the pulpit showed care and good treatment. A large sheaf of wheat and oats, etc., stood in the centre of the church. The windows were veritable beauty spots. The church porch was not forgotten. The donations of grain, vegetables, fruits and flowers were most liberal. Lovers of decorating could appreciate the artistic thought, and time spent in producing so pleasing an effect. The music was of a high order reflecting credit on Organist, Choir Master and Choir. At Evensong the men's rendering of "The Magnificat," without the organ, was most musical. The Rev. D. B. Rogers, M.A., preached two excellent sermons. The Festival was one long to be remembered by the St. Mark's people.

Now for fun!
School's out, and now for romping play!
But in the course of play, young hands touch many things — sometimes dirty, grimy-laden, and germ-covered. Disease germs lurk in dirt and are carried from hands all dirt and are carried from hands to face, to mouth and food.
What mothers must do
You cannot keep children from this ever-present disease-dirt. But you can, and should, do everything possible to prevent its serious effects.
Children need the rich, purifying lather of Lifebuoy with its wonderful health ingredient to godown deep into the pores and combat the germs ever present in dirt.
The health odour of Lifebuoy proves its antiseptic power.

Miracles of St. Leonard.

If there were such a personage, Saint Leonard would assuredly have been the patron saint of prisoners. He was originally a French nobleman at the Court of Clovis I., and became a monk and founded a monastery which, after his death, about 559, was known as St. Leonard le Noublet. He was famed for his charity towards prisoners, and is reputed to have worked many miracles on their behalf. These miracles in releasing unhappy captives continued after his death, according to tradition, which was very convenient, as his festival happened to be the first day of the Michaelmas term, when writs were made returnable.

It's Your Father.

Two little girls coming from Sunday-school, where reference had been made to his Satanic Majesty, were discussing the lesson.
"Do you believe there is a devil?" asked one.
"No," said the other. "It's just like Santa Claus; it's your father."

D. C. M.

"What did the boss say to you for being late on Friday?"
"He gave me the D.C.M."
"She is."
"What's that?"
"Don't come Monday!"

All cheap teas, and some high priced ones, contain many broken leaves and even what looks like siftings. Just examine a pound of Daly's. You will find nothing but the full leaf, unbroken and with no "dust" towards the bottom. For a better cup of tea use Daly's. For sale at Wallace's Drug Store.

Fined For Speeding.

There have been quite a number of cases in the police court lately for speeding and reckless driving. On Tuesday morning a young man from Foxboro was hailed before Magistrate Ruttan accused of driving recklessly along Dundas Street. He was found guilty and fined $20 and costs. Other cases of a like nature are pending. Speeding is a poor place for a speed fiend to operate—it costs too much.

Brother and Sister Meet After Over Fifty Years.

Last Monday Mrs. Jane Gardner was greatly surprised to see her brother whom she had not seen in about fifty-three years, his home being in the U. S., and her home in Ontario. She had no word of his coming till he got to Grimsby station. He will be at the J. F. Beamer farm for a month and visit with his sister, Mrs. Jane Gardner, where her home has been for the last three years and more.

Napanee Man Honored.

A signal honor has been conferred upon one of our most distinguished citizens and incidentally some of the reflected glory illuminates the good old Town of Napanee. Walter S. Herrington, K.C., F.R.S.C., etc., has been invited to represent the Canadian Bar Association at the annual meeting of the New York State Bar Association to be held at Buffalo, N.Y., October 3rd and 4th. No more suitable choice could have been made, and Mr. Herrington will, as usual with him, ably sustain the prestige of his profession and of the country he represents.

Vespers at Wilton.

Harvest Home and Old Boys' and Girls' Re-union Vesper Service brought a good crowd to Wilton last Sunday afternoon. Messrs. J. B. Saunderson and Jas. Baines, former residents, assisted the Rector, Rev. Siford F. Dixon, and visitors were present from Harrowsmith, Yarker, Switzerville, Fourth Line and Odessa. The church was beautifully decorated with grain, fruit, vegetables, evergreen and flowers, centering in an anchor and a cross. Bouquets were given to the grandparents present and sent to the sick and shut-ins. A similar service will be held at Odessa next Sunday afternoon.

Napanee Women's Institute.

The members of N. W. I. were called to the Agricultural Rooms on Tuesday, Oct. 16th, after a two months' holiday. The meeting opened with the usual procedure, after which the District Director gave a report of the Lennox Women's Institute Convention held on June 30th last, in the form of a picnic picnic, at a beautiful spot along the Bay of Quinte shore, just east of Bath. No special programme had been prepared for the afternoon; it was just a business meeting but with an atmosphere as delightful as a prospective holiday. A number of plans were laid for the execution of the year's work, and the Executive was complimented upon the new programmes for the year, which were just off the press, ready for distribution. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Presentation.

A very delightful time was spent on Friday evening last, when the Choir of Grace Methodist Church motored to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Spencer, River Road, and presented Mr. and Mrs. Leone Spencer with a beautiful silver casserole pie dish. Both Mr. and Mrs. Spencer were taken completely by surprise, but responded in a few well chosen words, expressing their thanks for the Choir's good wishes, and also for the beautiful gift. Mrs. Spencer, up to the time of her recent marriage, had been a most faithful and efficient member of the Church Choir, and was always in her accustomed seat at the Sunday services. After the presentation was made, a social time was spent in songs, games and social intercourse, after which a dainty lunch was served, and all departed to their different homes, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Leone Spencer bon voyage through life.

For boys and girls at school, we have something special in Fountain Pens, Pencils, Scribblers, Inks, Water Paints, etc. Hooper's Drug Store.

TOOK FATALLY ILL ON WAY TO FAIR

Charles E. Burley, a long-time resident of Bath, and for many years stage driver between Bath and Kingston, died suddenly Friday night, on the road about six miles out of Bath while on his way to the Kingston fair with a party. Mr. Burley left Bath in his usual health and was contemplating having an enjoyable evening at the exhibition. When the car in which he was riding had proceeded about six miles out of Bath, Mr. Burley suffered a heart attack. It was not very serious at the time and the car was turned and headed for Bath again, but when it reached Millhaven, Mr. Burley's condition became worse. He was taken from the car and laid on the grass at the side of the road, and he died in a few minutes. Heart failure caused his death. The late Mr. Burley was fifty-nine years of age and had been in poor health for the past six or eight months, but had been able to be around. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon.

MR. BAYLEY ON GOVERNMENT CONTROL

At a meeting held in Grace Church, Wednesday night, Mr. W. D. Bayley, M.P., member of the Manitoba Parliament, addressed a large gathering of interested people on the working out of government control in Manitoba. Mr. Bayley pointed out that government sale, such as practised in Manitoba, after a year's experiment, was a total failure. There are three localities that a State takes towards any business. Dogs are free to roam the rural communities without restraint. In towns and cities they are licensed, and prohibited in Chicago. On Oct. 22rd the people of Ontario would on which of these attitudes was to be exercised towards the liquor traffic. After twelve months' experience it was apparent that Government Control had doubled the shortcomings of prohibition. He quoted from editorials in the leading dailies in Winnipeg, which were not friendly to prohibition, to the effect that beer and intoxicating liquors are now openly sold over the bar. As a member of the parliament there he was worried beyond measure as to the morals of the workings of the Manitoba Act, and urged the people of Ontario to hold fast to that which they had, which was, in his judgment, the finest piece of social legislation ever enacted in the Province.

OLD BOYS' RE-UNION PRIZES

Mr. Ed. Huff, of Detroit, an old boy of Napanee, put up for competition at the Old Boys' Re-Union, a prize to be given to the oldest old boy (lady or gentleman) in attendance at the Old Boys' Re-Union.

The conditions attached to the qualifications for the prize were that the winner must have lived over 150 miles from Napanee during his absence, that he must be over seventy-five years of age, and he must have been away at least twenty-five years. Therefore, age, residence away from Napanee or the County, and distance, were all factors.

After considering a great number of possibilities, the prize was awarded to George Adam Fraser, of Austin, Washington. Mr. Fraser left here in 1868, when he went to Prince Edward, where he stayed for five years. In 1873 he went to Washington. He has not been in Napanee since 1868. He is 80 years of age, and returned with his wife for the Old Boys' Re-Union. His parents were Daniel Fraser and Harriet Fraser, who lived at Northport in Prince Edward. His grandfather, Captain George Fraser, was an officer in the British army; and lived a short distance from Napanee on the Palace Road. His great grandfather, Captain Daniel Fraser, was an officer in the British Army, and was in charge of a section of United Empire Loyalists who settled in Sophiasburgh Township.

The winner of the prize, Captain George A. Fraser, held a certificate from the Kingston Military School, making him a first class officer. He held a commission in No. 3 Company of the 49th Lennox and Addington Battalion of Infantry. His certificate was granted him in 1866. On the first Dominion Day, July 1st, 1867, Captain Fraser was in charge of his company in a parade which took place in Napanee. The parade was composed in part of eight companies (the full complement) of the 49th Battalion under Lieutenant Col. William A. Fowler, of Amherst Island. Captain Edmund Hooper led a company of artillery in the parade. Captain Fraser's first Lieutenant was Ed. Strange, son, son of the late Hon. John Stevenson, who was the first speaker of the House of Parliament.

The Napanee Brass Band led the parade. The parade proceeded all over the town and finished with a Royal Salute by a firing party.

The awarding of the prize was so difficult that the announcement has been delayed. The prize was a Canadian Ten Dollar Gold Piece.

Mr. H. W. Hough, of St. Catharines, was so close to Mr. Fraser that the Committee thought it fitting to make a second prize. Mr. Hough is over 80 years of age and is a brother of Miss Maria Hough, of Gretna. Mr. Hough came from Lake Simcoe district. He has two sons, Dr. Arthur Hough, of Wharton, and Mr. Ernest Hough, of St. Catharines, and one daughter, Mrs. Maude Phelps, Niagara Falls, N.Y. Mr. Hough is well known in these parts on account of his frequent visits to his old home. It should be noted that Mr. Fraser has not been Napanee since 1868 until this summer.

Other contestants were Mrs. Hiara Henry Edgar, 204 Marion St., Mount Carmel, St. Boniface, Manitoba; William Wallace Bell, 2339 Mound Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio; Dr. Wilson Reed, Rome, N.Y.; Dr. John Stevenson, 2111 North 49th Street, Seattle, Wash.; Mrs. Benn, Brull Lake Station, Ontario; James Murray Walker, Publisher of the Perth Courier; George W. Snider, 427 Cooper St., Watertown, N.Y.; Dr. Albert John Fife, Amelisburgh, Prince Edward County.

NEWBURGH

When other subjects fail to give satisfaction, we always feel that we are safe on ground when we talk about the weather. The weather will not retaliate no matter what we say about it. It has no fixed views on current subjects, and while it is not without variety, it has no whims or fancies such as agitate the minds of men; being wet or dry does not effect it, it goes right on and continues to be —just weather. And yet after all, we can't afford to ignore it. We dress to suit it; we make our plans with an eye to its requirements; it forces us at times to do things we do not care to do; it makes us bright or dull according to its varying moods. It influences the action of parliaments and laws are made to suit its demands. In fact there is no such thing as individual or personal liberty when we come face to face with it. It has its way in effect, to one and all, take what I give you. And yet, after all, what we call weather is the thing that gives us life and hope in this world, and teaches us to believe and trust in an infinite mind. We hope the readers of The Beaver will be able to enlarge on this philosophy.

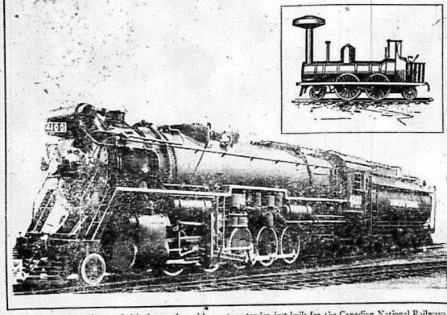
THE BIGGEST LOCOMOTIVE IN THE BRITISH EMPIRE



Engine No. 4109, the new freight locomotive, with new type tender, just built for the Canadian National Railways by the Canadian Locomotive Works at Kingston. It is the last word in designer's skill for lines, weight and power. Ninety-two feet in over-all length, it weighs 325 tons, and has a tractive power of 44,500 tons, or the power to move 150 loaded freight cars on a level track. Its boiler has 3,200 horsepower, or more than what is used by the civic electrical plant at Kingston, with a population of 25,000, for lighting and industrial purposes. It is the largest locomotive in the British Empire, being more than three feet longer than the famous "6000" type passenger locomotives, and 35 tons greater in weight. The tender is also an innovation. It is of roomier type, known commonly as the Vanderbilt Tender, as it was designed by the famous railroader Cornelius Vanderbilt. It is of a more simplified construction than the usual rectangular tender and it carries 11,600 imperial gallons of water and 15 tons of coal. It also has the advantage of giving greater vision to the area for yard work. Five of these locomotives have been built for the National System. The majority will be used in train-for work in terminals.

The remarkable progress made in the construction of motive power on Canadian railways is illustrated by comparing this giant new locomotive of the Canadian National Railways with the first rail-way engine used in Canada, a drawing of which is shown inset. This engine was used on the Champlain and St. Lawrence Railroad in 1837, and it was named the "Dorchester." The drawing is made from a print in the possession of the Chateau de Ramezay, Montreal.

DOCTOR SAYS DEATH NOT DUE TO MOONSHINE

The death of Roy Woodcock, of Sheffield Township, Lennox and Addington, was not caused by alcoholic poisoning, as was reported yesterday, but by blood poisoning caused from the opening of a boil with a pin, according to the statement of Dr. O'Connor, of Tamworth, who was the physician in charge of the case. Dr. O'Connor telephoned The Standard this morning to correct the statement which had been published yesterday in several papers in Ontario giving the cause of death as the drinking of "moonshine" whiskey.

About three days after the opening of the boil with a pin without the use of any antiseptic, septicemia or blood poisoning developed and Dr. O'Connor was called in on the case. It had developed so far that the progress of the poisoning could not be checked and death ensued about a week later.

Asked about Harold Doyle, who was reported to be seriously ill from having imbibed of the same moonshine, Dr. O'Connor said that he had not heard of this young man being sick at all, or at least he had not been called in to treat him. The Provincial Police investigated the case yesterday and it is reported that the moonshine story has been dropped on Dr. O'Connor's report.—Kingston Standard.

The late John Scribner, a member of the New York bar a generation ago, was totally bald. Speaking to Joseph H. Choate one day about the approaching marriage of one of the Vanderbilts to a foreign nobleman, he remarked, "It would be absurd to give a Vanderbilt a costly gift. I should like to find something not intrinsically valuable, but interesting because it is rare."

"Nothing easier, John," Mr. Choate replied. "Just send her a lock of your hair."

"I suppose you have had a good many narrow escapes in your experience as a sailor?"

"Not so many, miss. I don't go ashore more than I can help."

A Great Teacher

ADVERTISING conducts a public school. Its pupils are all the readers of the home paper—in short, the whole buying community.

ADVERTISING teaches that loyalty to the home merchants brings real returns in better service and better values. It's a lesson that requires the repetition afforded by the weekly arrival in the home of "The Napanee Beaver."

You can teach the public to rely on your Advertisements as safe guides to economy and satisfaction in shopping. Moreover, people appreciate being asked for their patronage.

To them

"An Advertisement is an Invitation"

AN OPEN LETTER

Dear Friends and Customers,—

Since my announcement last May of my determination to retire from active business in Napanee, the response to my advertising has been wonderful. However, to sell out a stock of $15,000, such as mine was, will take time. But now, to speed up to a whirlwind finish, the very cream of my stock of Winter Wearables for Men, Women, Boys and Girls, will go at very saving bargain prices.

Space will not permit of my enumerating them here. "Come and get 'em." Absolutely without any reserve, everything in the store is on sale. Hundreds have taken advantage of this golden opportunity to buy seasonable goods cut to the bone. Come and take your share.

Thanking you for your patronage, I am yours faithfully, for Better Bargains.

Progress or Reaction

Ontario Electors Must Choose

THE issue of the Plebiscite of October 23rd is: Shall the sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage continue to be prohibited, or the traffic be re-established and conducted by the Government? ¶ Since September 16th, 1916, the legalized sale of liquor for beverage purposes has been prohibited. During eight years The Ontario Temperance Act has wrought a moral, social and economic transformation, gradual but real. ¶ A new generation knows nothing of the evils of the liquor traffic before the O. T. A. came into force. Older generations may have forgotten. ¶ Think of it! There is not a man or woman 29 years of age who has legally seen the inside of a bar-room or liquor shop in the Province of Ontario. ¶ Booze is banned! It is a discredited and dishonored outlaw. Now, it wants to come back. It seeks not only re-instatement, but that the Government itself shall be an active partner.

Do You Remember?

The old-time Bar-Room and Liquor Shop, with their disgusting sights and sounds and smells;

The staggering, cursing, drunken men who jostled us on the streets and on the cars—particularly on holidays or at public demonstrations—and who filled our jails;

The poor, battered, bedraggled hulks of men and women—God's children, our brothers and sisters, every one of them;

The destitution, misery, wretchedness, squalor, filth and disorder in many homes that might, and should, have been homes;

The vice, the immorality, the crime, the debauchery, incited by liquor, that appalled good citizens.

The O.T.A. Has Made Good

Contrast those conditions with the situation today. The Ontario Temperance Act has brought immeasurable improvement. Drunkenness has decreased. Crime has been lessened. Homes are happier. Children have been given a better chance. Savings Bank deposits have increased. All down the line, PROGRESS has been written into the history of Old Ontario!

OFFICIAL RECORDS PROVE ALL THIS!

The following table shows that, in Ontario under the O. T. A., there has been a substantial decrease in the offences that are usually associated with drink:

	1914	1922
Assaults	1,627	756
Cruelty to Animals	1,172	256
Vagrancy	4,703	1,507
Keeping and Frequenting Bawdy Houses	802	352
Loose, Idle and Disorderly	6,411	1,736
Drunkenness	17,703	10,063

NOTE THE OPINION OF OUR MANUFACTURERS:

"Does Prohibition, under the O. T. A., result in more comfortable homes and better supplies of food and clothing for wives and children?"

When this question was asked of leading Ontario manufacturers by the Ontario Board of License Commissioners, 1,165, or 82 per cent., answered "Yes", while only 239, or 17 per cent., said "No".

All Systems of Government Sales Have Failed

So-called "Government Control" has proven a colossal failure wherever tried. Drinking, drunkenness and bootlegging have reached appalling proportions. Every Canadian Province that has tried any form of "Government Sale" has already learned a hard lesson.

Take BRITISH COLUMBIA: Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P., in a public address in Vancouver recently, declared:

"Never, in the history of the country, was bootlegging comparable in magnitude and murderous results to what it is today."

Or, MANITOBA: Figures furnished by the Chief of Police of Winnipeg show an increase of 45 per cent. in the number of 2 Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and of spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?

drunk and disorderly cases in the first five months under Government Sale, as compared with the corresponding five months of the previous year under Prohibition.

And, finally, QUEBEC. The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the Presbytery of Montreal, April 15th, 1924:

"That we regard it to be a patriotic duty to make it known that the drug traffic flourishes here as never before and is on the increase, bootlegging flourishes in and from this Province as never before, that drunkenness is on the increase and that the Quebec system of Government Control is socially injurious and not a success."

Ontario Must Hold the Line

If a majority vote for "continuance", it means that we will have a better law more effectively enforced, with correspondingly improved results. The Government, through the Prime Minister, has definitely pledged itself to "strengthen" the Act and "give it active and vigorous enforcement".

If a majority vote for "Sale", it means the re-establishment of the old, discredited Liquor Traffic, in the guise of respectability under a system that makes the Government the bartender and every citizen a partner, acting as sales agent for the brewers and distillers and making profit for them out of the destruction of life and happiness.

The Ontario Plebiscite Committee, uniting the temperance forces of Ontario, calls upon all who love their Province and wish its continued and increasing prosperity and the happiness of its people, to VOTE FOR THE LAW that has accomplished immeasurable good, and not for a return of the traffic that has wrought such havoc in the past, and would do it again.

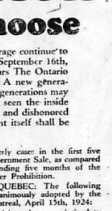
TIRED OUT ALL THE TIME

Nerves Gave Little Rest

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Harrowsmith, Ontario.—"I took your medicine before my baby was born and it was a great help to me as I was very poorly until I started to take it. I just felt as though I wanted to cut all the time and would take weak, fainting spells. My nerves would bother me until I could get little rest, day or night. I was told by a friend to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I only took a few bottles and it helped me wonderfully. I would recommend it to any woman. I am doing what I can to publish this good medicine. I lend that little book you sent me to any one I can help. You can with the greatest of pleasure use my name. In regard to the Vegetable Compound if it will serve to help others."—MRS. HARVEY MILLIGAN, R. R. No. 2, Harrowsmith, Ontario.



In a recent canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 said they had been helped by its use. This medicine is for sale by all druggists.

Rabbi Sandwiches Are Good.
Oakesdale, a hamlet near Othello, Wash., is known as the sandwich town of the Northwest. Overland trains stop at Oakesdale and there are always many hungry folk on board.
Comely lasses, wearing white aprons, enter the cars or sell from the platform an endless variety of sandwiches, said by experienced travelers to be best anything ever seen elsewhere.
The trains are delayed long enough so that all west-bound tourists have an opportunity to taste Oakesdale's newest and most popular sandwiches, jackrabbit or sage hen. The roasted meat of these two local products, besmeared with butter and comforted between two slices of fresh bread, are the temptation placed before newcomers.
For 15 cents a traveler may buy one of thirty varieties of sandwiches, each as large as a pie plate.—New York Sun.

Suspicious Conduct.
"No wonder the Gadders don't get along well together. Why, when Mrs. Gadder goes away for weeks at a time Mr. Gadder doesn't even write to her, but tells his stenographer type letters saying how lonely he is. What kind of a man would you call that?"
"A very, very busy man," said Mr. Bibbles, with a far-away look in his eyes, "and I'd give $5 in nickles to know what he's up to."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

JAPANESE GOOD FLIERS.

Head of British Air Mission Says They Have No Nerves.

A rather curious report current wo or three years ago with reference to Japanese aviation is revealed by an interview in London with the Master of Semphill, who has just returned after spending many months as head of the British air mission to Japan. The suggestion was that Japanese could not be made into good airmen because of something in their early upbringing, one point being that because they were carried pick-a-back in infancy they had acquired some their sense of equilibrium. In support of this it was pointed out that many accidents had happened in Japan, and even to-day it is conceded that they have progressed no outstanding fliers.

The statement, however, that they do not make good airmen is disproved by the Master of Semphill, who describes them as pupils leaving little to be desired, and the standard achieved by pilots trained under the naval air force is very high. In fact, one report of the interview credits the statement that it is higher than the British naval air force. The Japanese are said to be ready to try anything, and to have nb trace of nerves. All this makes a very different story from that which betame fashionable to be desired, and the standard common property shortly after the armistice, and there seems now no doubt that that hypothesis outran facts.

Scandals of the Law

We are supposed to live in a revolutionary age; but there is one of our institutions which never changes essentially. It is the Law, with which are connected as many scandals as ever there were, says Tit-Bits.

One of the particularly outrageous characters started from its notorious delays. Ignorance of the law, we all know, excuseth no man, and yet it frequently happens that the public cannot possibly know what the law is. This is because Acts come into force when they receive the royal assent, but copies of them cannot be obtained for days, or even weeks, afterwards.

A scandal equally gross is the slovenly wording of Acts of Parliament. One grotesque instance raises the question. "Is Sunday a weekday?" The principal Act governing the closing of shops lays down that certain shops shall close at 8 p.m. on "every day except Saturday," and in an amending Acts occurs the term, "every weekday except Saturday," this suggesting that Sunday is not a weekday.

No wonder magistrates are puzzled. Several have held that "every day except Saturday" includes Sundays as one of the weekdays, and have given decisions accordingly.

A further scandal is that a man may do in one capacity precisely what he is prohibited from doing in another. While, for instance, a man is an undischarged bankrupt he must not obtain credit without disclosing that fact, but if he, assisted by dummies, turns himself into a company, he can get credit without stating that he is an undischarged bankrupt. So the transformation is often effected.

Again, not long ago a certain municipal corporation prosecuted the owner of some automatic machines for an offence against the lottery laws. Now, the corporation had itself been guilty of exactly the same illegality. So, on the tit-for-tat principle, the indignant defendant in the case took proceedings against it, only, however, to make the discovery—by no means a new one—that a corporation has neither a soul to save nor a body to be kicked.

Amazingly lax, too, is the law of bankruptcy. It enables hordes of rascals, mostly aliens, to pile up wealth at the expense of the trading community in general. A favorite trick of these rogues is to cover secret assets by inventing as many debtors as may be necessary. Here is an actual illustration.

The books of a certain bankrupt contained the names of a number of debtors. One of them was entered as owing more than £20,000, and the liabilities of the whole number amounted to about £25,000. Now, of these debtors not one was to be found!

Another common dodge of fraudulent bankrupts is a family arrangement. In a recent case—this is an instance given by a certain official receiver—a man sold a business to his wife for £100. Two or three months afterwards she entered into negotiations for selling it to a third person for £1,000. Can any sane man believe that this was an honest transaction?

Some years ago a well-known barrister called the public examination of a bankrupt a "most amusing performance," and said that even cabmen would have a fair idea of the character of the proceedings. One of these men, according to the member of the Bar, drove somebody to the door of the Bankruptcy Court, and then remarked what is known as the "hard shilling."

"What," he remarked, "I do hope you will get your discharge. They cannot say that extravagance has been done it."

But an examination is anything but amusing to creditors who, though they can, as a rule, see plainly how they have been swindled, have no legal remedy.

Among other rascals the law treats tenderly are disreputable solicitors. Numerous men who have been struck off the rolls for more or less flagrant professional acts are virtually permitted to practice under other names. Certain precautions have to be observed in carrying out the deception; but it goes on, and is often winked at.

Once, at a county court in the South of London, three solicitors in succession bore the same name, though not one of them actually bore it. The fourth room also presented the familiar name, the judge's face was a study. This trickery, however, was too clever, and consequently the actual owner of the name was dragged over the coals.

There is scope for legal reform in many directions. When will it be started upon in real earnest?

Man and Fashions.

Fashion in male attire change very slowly and gradually, because the average man of intelligence hates to be conspicuous. Man regards his dress clothes as a uniform for a particular occasion, and the uniform, of course, must with very tiny differences be the same as the other fellow's. Women does adopt a uniform fashion because she likes to look out of the ordinary, and her clothes must also be adapted to considerations of age, figure, complexion, and so on. Man, on the other hand, sticks to one color and one "cut," equally suitable for all ages and types. His dress clothes uniform, though in this country kept for the evening, is in other countries the recognised wear for every function—at whatever time of the day—and a Scotsman or gentleman attending any sort of affair will put on his dress clothes.

"WHY DON'T YOU MARRY HER?"

Humors of Matrimonial Advertisements—Lonely and Unloved.

The American who goes to his grave single and unblessed has only himself to blame, for to no man is the path to the altar made more smooth and alluring.

From Maine to Texas Cupid has his agents in hundreds, all eager to point the way to the golden goal and to give every conceivable help to those whose will wavers or whose hearts fail.

In almost every newspaper these ambassadors hold out hands to the timid or the ignorant, in some such cordial and breezy fashion as this:—

"Why don't you marry her? The girl is waiting, so am I. This is the accepted time. Come and see me, and bring the girl. I'll undertake to do the rest. In any event, call on me; and if you have any difficulty that the law can solve for you, you will be glad you came."

The advertiser is usually a man who combines the practice of the law with his ministration to Cupid; and he certainly has little to learn from the expert in the arts of proclaiming his "wares," as witness the following announcement:—

"If a man's in love, that's his business.
If a girl's in love, that's her business.
If they contemplate marriage,
That's my business.

"P.S.—I always reserve the right to kiss the bride. Terms liberal. Time given if desired."

As is perhaps only natural, people who yearn for the altar are responsible for not a little humor that is to be found in the advertisement columns. When, for example, Houghoshi, a pretty maid of Japan, wanted a husband, she did not let contentment feed on her cash in hand, but proclaimed her attractions in the local newspaper thus:—

"I am a beautiful woman, with cloud-like hair, silvery face, willow-like waist, and crescent eyebrows. Here is a description to walk through life hand in hand, gazing at flowers in the day and the moon at night. I desire to meet a gentleman who is clever, learned, handsome, and of good taste. I will join him for life, and share the pleasure of being buried in the same grave."

There was more humor and much less sentiment in Miss Elizabeth Maggie, a Washington typist, who thus boldly advertised herself for auction-sale to the highest bidder:—

"Young, intelligent, educated, refined, true, honest, just, poetical, philosophical broad-minded, big-souled, and womanly above all things. Brunette with large, grey-green eyes, full, passionate lips, and splendid teeth. Hardly beautiful, but with very attractive features, full of character and strength. Graceful, supple, warm, generous-hearted, at times bubbling with merriment and vivacity, then dignified, sedate, and studious.

"Deeply and truly religious, without being prudish or pious. Cannot sew a bit, but plan a dashing costume. Cannot judge uncooked meat in a butcher's shop, but can make a dinner party a success. Cannot add a column of figures, but can tell a good story. Does not imagine for a moment that hers is an exceptional case, but realizes the deplorable fact that in this age of greed there are thousands whose souls are yearning for opportunities of expression, but whose bodies are bound by galling chains to the rock of mechanical toil."

Though Britons may not rival such efforts as these, our own advertising columns furnish material for at least a smile in such announcements as the following:—

"Advertiser (widower) desires to find a good wife, age from 40 upwards; able to build her own house. She must be Church of England and a communicant. Advertiser feels himself very lonely in the world, through what could not be avoided. None need apply except in own handwriting."

"A gentleman of 78, who has been twice happily married and thinks himself quite young enough to venture again, wishes to meet a middle-aged lady (widow preferred) with a view to matrimony. This is not a case of 'Love's young dream,' but a business wish to find a suitable helpmate. Apply Sence."

"A bachelor, weary of a lonely, unloved life, and bored with his surroundings, wishes to meet a lady who will share his life and join in a mutual endeavor to make it bright and happy. No objection to a widow, if without encumbrances. Address Lonely——"

More delicate and unconventional but possibly no less appealing is the method adopted by an Italian widow, who has had the following inscription placed on her late husband's tombstone:—

"Sacred to the memory of Anacleto Tortilini, who died at the age of 72. He leaves a young, beautiful, and amiable widow, to whom, owing to the difference in age, he acted the part of a second father."

THE SCHOOL FAIR AT SILLSVILLE

It was an ideal day for the school fair held at Sillsville, on the 18th of September, with a large crowd in attendance. The display of fruit and vegetables in the Town Hall, would have done credit to our County fairs; also the girls' needlework and cookery were indeed excellent.

The first prize was awarded to S. S. No. 4, Parma. The pupils of this school did well. They represented the provinces and colonies of the British Empire, and carried baskets containing the products of the province they represented; each one coming forward and saying a short recitation describing the products they give to the Empire. The Empire entwined in the British flag, then thanked her colonies.

S. S. No. 3, South Fredericksburgh, while winning only the second prize, deserves special mention, as this school left to the whole scene the appearance of a fair. The pupils in their pretty rainbow colors, entered the grounds in a body, decorated with the name of their school, "Elm Beach", and drawn by a team of white horses. The large banner with S. S. No. 3 and also the name of their school in bright letters, made a very colorful picture. After giving an excellent and attractive drill, showing good training, they sang a patriotic song and ended by singing the chorus of the popular song, "It Aint Going to Rain no more", at the same time forming a rainbow made from the tiny balloons attached to their wrists.

The banners, drills and singing of all the schools were good, also the speeches and singing by the pupils of the different schools. A speech on school fairs and another about our Canadian artists, were particularly good.

The children are at a disadvantage for lack of an elevation of some kind to stand on when speaking and singing; however, as the school fairs are becoming more popular and interesting each year, these necessary improvements will no doubt be made by those interested.

The Women's Institute gave substantial prizes for the best sight reading, etc., and also served a dainty lunch, which helped to make the day a very pleasant one.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Men want the front seats in a theatre, but the rear ones in a church.

Cheapest of all Oils.—Considering the qualities of Nerviline, Nerviline Oil it is the cheapest of all preparations offered to the public. It is to be found in every drug store in Canada from coast to coast and all country merchants keep it for sale. So, being easily procurable and extremely moderate in price, no one should be without a bottle of it.

Phyllis—Your husband is simply wild about you, isn't he?

Doris—Yes; he raves about me in his sleep, but the poor absent-minded fellow nearly always calls me by the wrong name."

Simple and Sure.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is as simple in application that a child can understand the instructions. Used as a liniment for only direction is to rub in and when used as a dressing to apply. The directions are plain and unmistakable that they are readily understood by young or old.

Many a clever business idea has been choked by the salesman thinking too much of the time clock and not enough of the purchaser's remarks.

Miller's Worm Powders not only make the infantile system untenable for worms, but by their action on the stomach, liver and bowels, they correct such troubles as lack of appetite, biliousness and other abnormal disorders that the worms create. Children thrive upon them and no matter what condition their worm troubles or aches may be in, they will show improvement as soon as the treatment begins.

One of the very best golfing stories that has come my way for many a long day was told recently by Joe Kirkwood.

A player, grievously afflicted with the malady of topping, one day walked over to the professional in a fit of despair and exclaimed disconsolately:

"I'm hitting the ball every time right on the top. I want you to tell me a cure for it!"

"Oh," replied the professional, "just turn the ball upside down and hit it in the same place."

Could Hardly Live for Asthma, writes one man who after years of suffering has found complete relief through Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Now he knows how needless has been all his suffering. That matchless remedy gives sure help to all afflicted with asthma. Inhaled as smoke or vapor it brings the help so long needed. Every dealer has it or can get it for you from his wholesale jobber.

A small man was holding forth on the subject of humanitarianism. His pet hobby seemed to be the wickedness of inflicting corporal punishment.

"My friends," he said, "you should never in any circumstances strike a child. I've brought up six boys myself, so I know what I'm talking about."

"Six boys!" exclaimed one of the audience, "And do you mean to say you've laid a hand on one of them?"

"Never," declared the lecturer, "except in self-defence."

Don't keep the family awake nights with coughing! Boots Meloids—the tiny flash imbibed in the tin box—act wonderfully well for any throat irritation or hacking cough. Four million doses sold last year in England where they are made. Sold in Napanee by Wallace's at 25c. a box.

Back talk rarely sends a man ahead.

PLAYING TRICKS WITH CUPID.

A Number of Romances Spoiled by Practical Jokers.

A happily married couple, who celebrated their silver wedding recently, did not meet each other in person or place until the eve of the ceremony.

As a girl, the wife was secretary to the employer of her future husband, who was the firm's financial representative. A personal correspondence grew up between the two, and photographs were exchanged.

Finally, the young man proposed marriage and the wedding was arranged for his next leave. It was not to take place until the lovers had been together for three weeks, as a test. The moment they met, however, they were so enamored of each other that the man rushed off to get a special license, and they were married the next day.

Postal romances do not always turn out so fortunately. Recently, a prospective bride who went to America to get married had not previously met her fiancee. Their courtship had been conducted entirely by post. She had seen his photograph, but apparently it was too flattering. When she met him face to face, she flatly refused to go on with the wedding.

Another romance by correspondence was spoiled by a practical joker. A wealthy bachelor in the South of France advertised for a wife. He got a reply from a charming young widow and there was romantic correspondence before they met.

When she visited him they arranged for the wedding, and the bachelor showed her his board of several thousands of pounds. At the end of her visit the prospective bridegroom found that his board had been filled in a furious rage, he informed the police and the widow was arrested. She protested her innocence, but was kept in prison. Some days afterwards her innocence was proved. A neighbor had taken the board as a practical joke. The marriage, of course, did not take place.

Other practical jokers, in Switzerland, tried to force romance on a confirmed bachelor. Unknown to him, they inserted a newspaper advertisement in his name, saying that he required a wife. As the bachelor was known to be wealthy, he was snowed under with applications for his hand. In despair he fled the country.

Love advertisements have recently been carried to account by theatrical press agents. Italian women were entitled to see a newspaper notice stating that an eligible bachelor was prepared to correspond with a view to matrimony. He might be seen in a box at a well-known theatre on a certain night.

The theatre was crowded with women on that date, but all the boxes remained empty. When the audience looked at the program, it was seen that the name of the advertiser was the same as that of a young tenor who was making his first stage appearance that night. He apparently had adopted the ruse in order to advertise him.

Newspaper and postal couplings are common in some countries. Certain German newspapers of repute make a feature of matrimonial advertisements. Even an aristocratic woman advertised in one of them a few weeks ago for husbands suitable to her two nieces.

Most of the advertisers are women. Nearly all of them offer substantial dowries to the honest and industrious. Men, too, advertise for wives. They offer very little with themselves. They merely clearly the advantages their prospective wives must possess.

Mear's Record Unbeaten.

The Round-the-World record made by John Henry Mears of New York in 1913, has never been beaten. He completed his long journey in thirty-five days, twenty-one hours and thirty-five minutes. This was made possible by using the C.P.R. ship Empress of Russia. Mr. Mears defeated his nearest rival Andre Jacque Schmidt by three days, twenty-two hours seven minutes and thirty-two seconds. Mr. Mears left New York at one a.m. on July 2, 1913, by the S.S. Mauretania, arriving in London on July 7, and thence, travelling via Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg and the Trans-Siberian route, Kharbin, Chanchiun, Antung and Shimonoseki, reached Yokohama on July 24. He then embarked on the Empress of Russia for the trans-Pacific trip, and reached New York on Aug. 6. The total distance covered by Mr. Mears was 212,066 geographical miles, an average of 587 miles per day and of 24½ per hour.

Strategy of Penelope.

Penelope, the wife of Ulysses, King of Ithaca, was left so long alone by her husband during the siege of Troy, that she was regarded as a widow, and on account of her beauty was beset by suitors. In order to put them off, she declared that she could not choose one among them, until she had finished weaving a shroud, or robe, for Laertes, her aged father-in-law. Penelope was careful to undo at night what she had woven by day, and thus managed to keep her suitors at a distance. This stratagem was finally discovered by her admirers, whereupon renewed their attentions; but the timely return of Ulysses after an absence of twenty years put an end to their importunities.

An Accommodating Irishman.

An Irishman was requested by a lady to do some work for her, and he performed it to her complete satisfaction. "Pat," she said, "I'll give you some refreshment now." "Heaven bless you, ma'am!" "What would you prefer—a glass of porter or a tumbler of gin?" "Well, ma'am, I don't wish to be troublesome, so I'll take the one awhilst you're making the other."

Toy Tramp Wouldn't Work.

Inventor of Toys: "I've had only one failure in my career."

Friend: "Indeed? And what was that?"

"It was too realistic. It was a toy tramp, and it wouldn't work!"

TESLA'S LATEST.

Inventor and Radio Expert Breaks Silence of Years.

Nikola Tesla, inventor and pioneer in the radio field, broke a silence of years recently in announcing his perfection of transmitting power without wires. He said that he could so project his power to transmit power for the operation of ships and aircraft, illumination and machinery, to the greatest terrestrial distance with smaller losses than now attained in restricted short metallic circuits.

His system comprises an electrical generator which delivers its energy into the earth, whence it can be "unlocked" by anyone having the proper electrical "key." He adduces reasons for believing that even usually wireless transmission will manifest endless secrecy.

It is well known that tel-phonic communication through Atlantic cables has been found impracticable, although their capacity is relatively small. But I made the marvellous discovery that the planet responded to the currents imposed upon it exactly as though it were exceptionally insulated in space without any "ground" or other conductor whatever. In consulting envelope whatever. In consulting envelope whatever. In consulting envelope of the earth, supposed to be rendered conductive through ionization, caused by the sun's rays. This discovery showed that the most economical plan and rapid electrical oscillations —human speech and even pictures—could be transmitted through the earth far better than through any artificial cable or conductor. Experiment proved this to be the case.

When asked what would be the immediate application of wireless power he made this interesting reply:

I think that one of the most desirable uses of the power will be for the lighting of isolated homes by vacuum tubes, which will require little or no energy, require no connecting wire, and last indefinitely. My laboratory is already behind by lamps of this kind, and it was so economical that a comparatively small amount of energy would be sufficient for the purpose. Of course, this is not, by far, the most valuable application. The operation of flying machines without fuel will be of very much greater importance and international importance.

Tesla is a Serbian by birth, and came to the United States in 1884. He is now a naturalized citizen.

Maria Levinskaya, who "introduced" him words, whatever be the electrical properties of the atmosphere at high altitudes, there was no heavenly layer, through which the sun's rays. This discovery showed that the most economical and rapid electrical oscillations could be transmitted through the earth far better than through any artificial cable or conductor. IN PARIS

THE PARIS subsidiary of the Bank of Montreal is situated in a quarter rich in historic interest.

From a lofty column in Place Vendôme the statue of Napoleon looks out upon an imposing square the construction of which began in 1686 under authority of Louis XIV.—a square which has witnessed many of the city's greatest demonstrations and which now mirrors the social and business life of Paris.

Here, in the heart of the capital of France, the Bank of Montreal in 1919 established a subsidiary office in the Ritz Hotel Building. In February, 1922, the business of this office had become so extensive that enlarged quarters were opened near by at No. 6 Place Vendome.

Degree Team I.O.O.F. At Campbellford.

The members of the First Degree team of Argyll Lodge, No. 212, I. O. O. F., exemplified this beautiful degree at Campbellford on Tuesday night. Four Degree teams were present representing Havelock, Napanee, Sterling and Trenton, and the showing made by these teams was very creditable indeed. The visiting brethren were splendidly entertained on their arrival, dinner being served at the St. Lawrence Hall. After the exemplification of the First Degree by the Napanee brethren, Bro. Rep. Walter Cox, P. G. Master, was introduced to the large gathering and in a half hour's speech impressed upon everyone the great cardinal principles of Oddfellowship. After Bro. Cox had concluded his speech he was given a tremendous ovation. Luncheon was then served, after which the Napanee brethren left for home, the remaining two degrees being in charge of Sterling and Trenton degree teams.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK OCTOBER 5th TO 11th

Have you not said of your neighbour's place that it was littered with filth, and forgotten to look around and clean up your own place?

Go at once, look over your home, and clean out all rubbish.

Go to your barn and other buildings, clean up and see that hereafter they are kept clean.

Haul away and burn all the old litter and watch the fire while it is doing it and see that it is out before you leave.

If your neighbour asks you what you are doing, tell him "cleaning up," and to go and do the same.

Tell him you are going to help reduce the per capita fire loss which is $6.00 in Canada as against 33 cents in Europe.

Get the men and women together in your community and have them organize for fire prevention.

Advise them to look after the chimneys and see that they are clean before putting up stoves.

See that ashes are not put in wooden boxes or barrels.

See that straw or hay or other inflammable material is not piled against buildings.

Watch for the dates! A One-Cent Sale soon to be held at Wallace's 40a

PISTOLS AND POLITICIANS.

Prime Ministers of Britain Have Engaged in Duels.

There have been cases in which Prime Ministers of Great Britain have engaged in duels.

The last occasion was in 1829, when the parties were the Duke of Wellington, who was then Premier, and the Earl of Winchilsea. The cause of the quarrel was the Catholic Emancipation Bill. The earl was one of the leaders of the extreme Protestants, whom he accused the duke of betraying. The old warrior—he was sixty years of age—insisted on satisfaction, but, seeing his adversary fire in the air, he did the same, and an apology was given and accepted.

The younger Pitt had a similar encounter with Mr. Tierney in 1798. Enraged by the opposition to an emergency measure for using the press-gang to man the navy, Pitt attributed to Tierney "a desire to obstruct the defence of the country." The reply, after the debate was over, was a challenge. The opponents met on Putney Heath. They fired twice without effect and the seconds stopped the duel.

The Pitts were, in fact, a very quarrelsome family. The Premier's cousin, Thomas Pitt, Earl of Camelford, was killed in a duel he had foolishly provoked. He admitted to his friends that he was in the wrong, but as his adversary was reckoned the finest pistol-shot in the country he would not attempt a reconciliation for fear of being misunderstood. The meeting followed, with fatal results.

The much-loved and much-hated Charles James Fox showed wit as well as courage in a duel with a certain Mr. Adams. The custom was for the parties to stand sideways to each other, thus presenting a narrower target and covering some of the vital parts with the extended arm and the pistol. Fox, however, boldly faced his opponent, declaring that his own figure was as broad as he was wide and equally easy to hit in any direction. His antitudinations were realized, for he was severely wounded.

The early days of our Indian empire produced several famous duels. Before the telegraph and the marine cable were invented, the Viceroy and the members of the Supreme Council had enormous power, each being, as it was said, "the fifth part of a king." A single vote might change the destiny of the world.

The disputes between Warren Hastings, the first Governor-General, and Philip Francis, one of his councillors, were specially long and bitter, lasting six years before they ended in the then inevitable duel. The prize was great and the antagonists meant business. It is related that as Francis was sipping his coffee on the morning of the duel he aimed his pistol at a crow which was hopping near the veranda. The bird fell dead.

"If my hand is as steady an hour hence," he remarked, "I shall be Governor-General of India to-morrow!"

The truth of this story is somewhat doubtful. Francis stated that he had never fired a pistol in his life. At any rate, the Governor escaped unhurt and he himself received a ball in the shoulder.

Another duel arose out of the same controversy. Barwell, a friend of Hastings, was challenged by Francis's patron, Gen. Clavering, the Commander-in-Chief. Barwell was said to be in love with Clavering's daughter, and perhaps the girl was in love with him. The general fired and missed, and Barwell would not return the fire. The general called on him to shoot, saying that he knew the reason of his forbearance, but it was useless, for he would never permit the alliance. The duel ended thus without accident, but the romance was shattered.

Origin of Mah Jongg.

Mah Jongg, the "new" game which has just "imported" along to agitate lovers of games of chance, is only about 3,000 years old, according to legend. Like such a vast number of other things good, bad or indifferent, it had its origin in China. A fisherman named Sze is said to have lived on the shores of Lost China Lake, near Mungpo. He was esteemed rich and owned a number of boats. Some of his fishermen were inexperienced hands and suffered from seasickness. When they fell sick they had to be taken ashore. Sea sickness, Sze regarded as a disease of the mind, so he got his sick fishermen together and their combined intelligence produced "Mah Jongg" as a means of helping landmen to forget themselves when the boat was tossing. The game is also known by the names of "Mah Chang," "Mah Choh," "Pung Chow," "Mah Juck," "Mah Ling," "Mah Dia," "Pung Wow," "Mah Cheyk."

Tree Has Heart Beat.

An eminent scientist, after careful investigation, comes forward with the astounding theory that a tree has a heart beat. His experiments show that a definite active tissue extends through every tree. The cellular pulsations of this tissue in regular sequence by their pumping action cause the movement of the sap. When these pulsations are arrested they can be revived by drugs, blows, or by massage. In Bengal the sugar-canes are actually milked. The pulsation of the cell is ultra-microscopic, but the investigator has detected it by his electric probe in circuit with a recording galvanometer. Any agent which quickens the heart-beat of the animal also quickens the heart-beat of the tree. The life of the tree is as wonderful as the life of man.

Nothing to Sing About.

"The Americans," remarked the distinguished and deeply serious visitor, "are a singularly light-hearted people. They keep singing about the utter lack of human to-day."

"Do you dislike the song?"

"Not at all. But why should there be general rejoicing over the fact that the fruit crop is a failure?"

When a fellow gets grouchy and it hurts him to smile, that fellow should work in the garden awhile.

As a vermicide an excellent preparation is Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. It has saved the lives of countless children.

WOULD RESTRICT SALE OF LIQUOR.

No Importation by Individuals Under Government Control, Says Premier.

—Letter to Dr. Moore—Mr. Ferguson Details Manner in Which Desire of People Will be Carried Out.

On September 27th, Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, campaign director of the Ontario Plebiscite Committee, wrote a letter to the Attorney-General, Hon. W. F. Nickle, asking two questions in regard to importation in the event of the O. T. A. being repealed. In the absence of Hon. Mr. Nickle, the Premier did not enter yesterday sent a reply to Dr. Moore, which follows :

The Premier's Letter.

"My Dear Dr. Moore :

"As the Attorney-General, Hon. Mr. Nickle, is out of town, your letter of the 27th September has come to me for reply.

"You ask two important questions : (1) 'Should the Ontario Temperance Act be not continued on October 22nd, 1924, the Canada Temperance Act be enacted, what effect would that have on the section of the Canada Temperance Act now in force, which prohibits importation ?'

"Second, 'What about the "Sandy Act" should the O. T. A. be repealed ?'

"I have had the law officers of the Crown give careful consideration to these questions and they advise that so far as importation by others than the Government itself is concerned the Canada Temperance Act will in no way affect either the section of the Ontario Temperance Act referred to as so-called 'Sandy Act'. It would appear clear that in case of the establishment of a system of government control, the province would have the right to import under the legislature took the necessary steps to repeal its former action in both these particulars and they advise that it would be proper to do so.

"Should the people sustain the Ontario Temperance Act on the 23rd inst., this question of repeal will not arise.

"Should the vote pronounce in favor of the Government taking hold of the liquor problem and directly handling the sale of liquor, I assure you that the Government will be prepared to enact such legislation as may be necessary to give full effect to the people's wish, whatever it may be, as expressed at the polls.

"I have said to you in a former letter that should the people decide that the principle of the Ontario Temperance Act be continued, we will bend every effort to carry out to the full their wishes.

"It has not told this further assurance, that, should the choice be in favor of Government control, the Government will exert its full power just as earnestly and honestly to see that the business is carried on under such limitations and restrictions as will eliminate to the greatest degree the evils which flow from traffic in liquor. We will in a word 'control' the business as far as it is humanly possible. As I have already stated, no sale other than by Government agencies will be permitted or condoned. My personal view is that those who engage in illicit traffic, commonly called bootlegging', should be dealt with just without the option of a fine.

"I know you appreciate how impossible it is in a letter to give in detail legislation and regulation necessary to carry out whichever strategy the electors may express, but I wish all Ontario to be convinced that the Government will accept the responsibility placed upon it with a determination to make a genuine effort will be made to suppress law-breaking and crime, and to maintain the highest possible moral conditions amongst our people.

"Yours very sincerely,

"G. H. FERGUSON."

A care of new-laid eggs upon his bended back, the toiler made his way across the pavement.

Guess what happened?

Ruefully, the man regarded the scattered debris of shells and yellow yolks. Then he proceeded gingerly to collect the few eggs that had remained unbroken.

A passing pedestrain volunteered a word of cheer.

"My poor man !" he exclaimed. "Have you dropped your eggs?"

The luckless one looked up.

"Oh, no, sir !" he answered acidly. "I'm just trying a new process for the demonstration of our new system of open-air cookery ! I'm making an omelette !"

Durand and Mrs. H. M. Johnston, was read by the Rector.

Dear Mrs. Johnson,—When duty combines with pleasure, a joyous time is sure to follow. Such an occasion now at hand, when we, your fellow-workers for Christ and His Church, pause in the midst of our activities to express to you our felicitations on the occurrence of your marriage.

As you know, the Guild, in so far as practical work is concerned, is the back bone of the local Church, and to this busy organization you have given unstintingly when called upon, of your money, time and efforts. As an officer of this society you have ever proved yourself most competent, and we realize that being Treasurer of the Guild carries with it an amount of bookkeeping, banking and payment of bills requiring much time and forethought.

Not because we ever could compensate you for your services, but merely as an expression of our appreciation of them, and to wish you every happiness and blessing in your married life, we ask you to accept this casserole and tray; and we hope you will find as much pleasure in using them as we do in giving them."

Mrs. Johnston, suitably responded, completely by surprise, thanked the Guild in a few well chosen words, after which Mrs. Durland served dainty refreshments.

Mr. Tanton read the last three verses of Matthew's Gospel, and introduced Rev. Dr. J. Howard Taylor, of India, introducing, educating and equipping young people to go out and engage in the activities and swell the ranks of other centres. The only satisfaction we have is being able to see a little of many of the improvements made. We hope that we are doing so in such a way as to bring us few regrets. It is no small responsibility.

Mrs. David Johnston, of Canningston, has been visiting her father, Mr. Arch Reid, and Mrs. Reid. She was accompanied by her son, Master Roy, who, by the way, is a second "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

A public meeting will be held in the Bank Hall here, on Wednesday evening, the 15th, in connection with the Plebiscite campaign. Addresses will be given by Rev. Mr. Dymond, of Bellville, and Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.D., Napanee. We understand that a band will be a free for all meeting to which every one in Newburgh and vicinity is invited. Dr. Mostyn, Chairman of the local committee, will preside.

Mail Orders promptly filled at Wallace's Drug Store.

NEWBURGH

An event took place last week which is among those things always worth while viz., the birth of a baby to Mr. and Mrs. Baden Switzer, at the home of Mr. Switzer's mother, Young Mrs. Switzer and her baby will join her husband in Oshawa, where they will make their home. In this connection we cannot but deplore the unequal distribution of opportunity for young people. The history of Newburgh for years back is that it has been engaged in producing, educating and equipping young people to go out and engage in the activities and swell the ranks of other centres. The only satisfaction we have is being able to see a little of many of the improvements made. We hope that we are doing so in such a way as to bring us few regrets. It is no small responsibility.

STELLA FAIR WAS A SUCCESS.

Splendid Exhibits of Cattle and Horses Proved Feature—Two Fine Horse Races Held — Many Prizes Were Awarded.

Amherst Island being distinctly agricultural, the annual show as sponsored by the Amherst Island Agricultural Society held at Stella on Saturday last, was purely a display of Amherst Island products and talents.

The display of all the products of the farm and garden and live stock was equal to the fall shows on the mainland and was very interesting.

It really was a treat to enjoy the agricultural display and events of the day without being afraid every minute of being run down by a sputtering automobile. There was but one automobile on the grounds. The good crowd came in their buggies and democrats and it seemed like the good old times before the auto came. There were no barkers or ballyhoo men to annoy the enjoyment of the splendid program put on by the society.

As one would really expect the horses, cattle, sheep and swine were of the top notch, prize winning kind and received much attention.

Messrs. A. Finley, Collins Bay, and H. Amey, Bath, were the judges selected to award the prizes to the exhibitors of cattle. Their findings were as follows:

Grade yearling heifer—W. J. Glen, John Tugwell, C. McGuinness.

Two year old grade heifer—Will Scott, R. D. Glen, W. J. Glen.

Grade milch cows—William Marshall, William Scott, R. Marshall.

John Tugwell won first prize for best Durham milk cow.

Holstein bull calf—William Cochrane, R. D. Glen.

For two year old Holstein heifer, William Marshall won first prize.

Holstein milch cows—William Marshall, Robert Marshall, R. D. Glen.

The Holsteins prevail on the Island with a scattering of the red, white and roan Durhams.

The judges allowed that the horses judged were of the very highest quality. They were very busy as the exhibits were numerous.

C. D. Brown, Bath, W. C. Loyat, Bath, and T. R. Nicholson, Kingston, as a trio, awarded the prizes thusly:

Heavy draft mare and colt—E. Miller, W. McCormick, E. McDonald.

Heavy draft suckling colt—S. Miller, E. McDonald, W. McCormick.

Heavy draft team—Robert Marshall, D. Bray, J. McMullen.

Wallace Hefford was awarded 1st prize for best light draft mare and colt and also first prize for light draft suckling colt.

Two year old light draft—D. Caughey, A. Hitchings,

E. McMaster was given first prize for best 3 year old heavy draft.

Light draft team—R. D. Glen, Gordon Reid, A. Drumgoole.

Single carriage horse—A. S. Miller, William Scott.

Single trotting roadster — Will Cochrane, John McMullen, John Tugwell.

Single pacing roadster — H. McCaugherty, H. Drumgoole, William McDonald.

Team roadsters—Harold McCaugherty copped the prize.

Mare and colt, roadster—Childs McGuinness, Herman Willard.

Suckling colt, roadster—Chas. McCuaness, H. Willard.

One year old roadster — Hugh Drumgoole, Arthur Drumgoole.

Two year old roadster—R. Marshall W. McCormick.

Hugh Drumgoole had no trouble in winning first for best 3 year old standster.

Best turn out by a lady—John McMullen, William Cochrane, Sam Miller.

John Tugwell won first prize for roadster stallion.

Robert Marshall refused $500 in cash on the grounds for a 1 year old and a 2 year old mare colt, both being full sisters of Miss Penalty.

The grain and vegetables were judged by R. A. Prink, Collins Bay, and W. Spiers, Collina Bay, who pronounced the exhibits as being exceptionally fine. Ralph Sills, Bath, judged the poultry which he pronounced as being very good.

The swine and sheep were judged by C. Davey, Bath, and D. Thompson. The exhibits were not large but mighty good. The Lesters, Shrapshire Downs and Oxford Downs prevail on the Island in the sheep products as does the white swine.

For the races, Charley Randall, of Napance, acted as starter. The judges were Arhe Loyst, Bath, Wemp Brown, Bath, and Geo. F. Palmer, Deseronto. T. K. Nicholson, Kingston, acted as timekeeper.

In the green race Jerry Wilkes won first, Laura Bray second, and Little Mack third.

Summary.

Jerry Wilkes, H. McCaugherty, Stella	1 2 1 1
Little Mack, Wes. Brown, Stella	3 3 3 2
Laura Bray, Dave Gray, Emerald	2 1 2 3
Time, 2.49¼.

In the Free For All Little Goldie won first, Mack Dillon second, Casey Audobon third, and Joseph Rogers fourth.

Little Goldie, William Frink, Odessa	1 1 3 1
Mack Dillon, Jos. Beaubien, Stella	3 2 1 2
Casey Audobon, Harold McCaughtrty, Stella	2 3 2 3
Joseph Rogers, H Drumgoole Stella	4 4 4 4
Time, 2.49½.

The track was heavy from the rains the forepart of the week, but the races were good and very enjoyable.

The ladies' palace was the objective point of many during the day. The display of household ware and art was pronounced as very fine and highly creditable.

The following personnel of the Association were responsible for the splendid show: D. Caughey, President; P. Tugwell, Vice-President; D. H. Filson, Sec. and Treas.; Directors, W. H. Preston, William Cochrane, A. G. Hutchings, W. J. Glen, P. M. Howard, R. J. Marshall, Robert Fleming, Samuel Milling, R. D. Glenn, Ray McMaster, A. Hitchings, William Scott, S. H. Patterson, C. A. Gibson, B. O. Smith and John Glen.

LADIES' AID SOCIETIES CONVENTION

The second annual Convention of Napanee District Ladies' Aid Societies was held in Colebrook Methodist Church on Tuesday, Sept. 30th, and in spite of the rain, there was a splendid attendance, delegates and visitors being present from the vast majority of Ladies' Aid Societies in the District.

The President, Mrs. A. Earl Perry, of Wilton, ably presided, and the Rev. G. I. MacKenzie conducted the devotional exercises. After reports from the Secretary-Treasurer and the Committee re Constitution, had been read and adopted, the Colebrook ladies delighted the convention with a well rendered chorus. A vote of thanks was tendered Rev. S. F. Dixon and Rev. A. J. Terrill for the work in compiling a constitution for the society. Mrs. Smith Gilmour, of Tamworth, gave an excellent paper on "Loyalty", which made a strong appeal for loyalty to church, community and home.

Mrs. T. H. P. Anderson, of Selby, emphasized service in her paper, and gave many helpful ideas to the Christian worker. Real helpfulness lies in the love that is in the heart. Every Christian should place service before convenience and comfort. The Lord loves a cheerful worker.

Mrs. Purcell welcomed the visitors and delegates to Colebrook, after which a sumptuous luncheon was served in the Orange Hall.

The Rev. S. F. Dixon conducted the devotional exercises at the opening of the afternoon session, and Miss Marjory Storms, of Wilton, delighted all with her solo, "Just To-day". The Rev. W. R. Tanton and Rev. A. J. Wilson were then introduced, and each gave a very convincing talk on the Temperance question.

The Round Table Conference, conducted by Mrs. F. Allison, of Adolphustown, was most helpful in solving the many problems arising in the different societies. Mrs. Ruttan, of Adolphustown; Mrs. Gilmour, of Tamworth; Mrs. Tanton, of Napanee, and Mrs. Anderson, of Selby, took part in the discussion.

The officers for 1924-25 are:—

Hon. President—Rev. A. J. Terrill, B.A., B.D.

President—Mrs. D. Richmond, Roblin.

1st Vice President—Mrs. Geo. Ruttan, Dorland.

2nd Vice President—Mrs. Smith Gilmour, Tamworth.

Secretary—Mrs. N. Boyce, Colebrook.

Treasurer—Mrs. Alpine Woods, Napanee.

These officers, with Mrs. Judson, Napanee, Mrs. A. Earl Perry, Wilton, and Mrs. M. Buck, Bath, constitute the Executive.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Harriett Ann Reid.

One of the best known and most highly respected of the older people of Tamworth and vicinity passed into her eternal rest, when Mrs. Harriett Ann (Fraser) Reid passed away at her home in Tamworth, on Sunday morning, Sept. 21st, 1924.

Mrs. Reid was born in Madoc Township, on September 9th, 1835, the daughter of Mathew Fraser and his wife, Elizabeth Ketcheson. Col. Wm. Ketcheson, one of the pioneer settlers of Sidney Township, was her grandfather. She treasured many interesting stories of the early experiences of these pioneer relatives, as they made their homes and cleared the farms in that district. Mrs. Reid was also one of those present at the historic gathering of the Ketcheson family in 1911 at the old family homestead in Sidney, near Wallbridge, as were also her sisters, Mrs. Cumming, who died about four years ago, and Mrs. Roberts, who died in November last, at the advanced age of ninety-six years. Another sister, Mrs. Catherine Smith, of St. Ola, still survives, having reached the remarkable age of one hundred years.

Mrs. Reid was married on December 19th, 1860, at Centreville, by Rev. Chas. Taggart, to Mr. Robt. Reid, who predeceased her some six years ago. To their home on the farm in Camden Township were given nine children, one dying in infancy. The remaining eight, five sons and three daughters, still survive to mourn the loss of a loving mother, who had been spared to them till her eighty-ninth year, all of whom were able to stand at the bedside at the last moments of both their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid were faithful members of Knox Presbyterian Church, Camden VIII., and rejoiced to see the charge with which that church was connected, grow from a mission station to a self-sustaining field.

About twenty years ago they moved to Tamworth, where in 1918 Mr. Reid passed away at the age of eighty-seven years.

In the failing health of Mrs. Reid's advancing years, and in the loneliness of her widowhood, there remained at home with her eldest daughter Hattie, and her son John, to give her the solace of their presence and companionship.

The end of her long and useful life came in quiet peace, and assurance of the future life with God. Perhaps no more fitting tribute could be paid to her than was given in the words of her former Pastor, Rev. R. L. Hallgetyne, who when calling to see her just before her death, said as he laid his hands upon hers, "these hands that have ministered to so many I commend them to God."

The funeral service was held in the Methodist Church at Tamworth, conducted by the Rev. R. L. Hallgetyne, assisted by her pastor, Rev. W. H. Clarke, minister of the United Presbyterian and Methodist congregation of Tamworth, and her body was laid to rest in the family plot in the Tamworth cemetery beside the church where six and a half years and family had so long joined in worship.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Nathaniel Reid, John Fraser and Alex. Harper Reid, Robt. J. Wilson and Adam Fingland.

The beautiful floral tributes were the loving gifts of members of the family and friends who were unable to bring to her casket the flowers that in her life time she loved so well.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a most devoted mother, five sons and three daughters, Napanee; Mrs. Geo. A. Stinson, Tamworth, and John and Hattie, at home; also fourteen grandchildren and three great-grandsons.

Teach Your Patrons To be Loyal

ADVERTISING conducts a public school. Its pupils are all the readers of the home paper—in short, the whole buying community.

ADVERTISING teaches that loyalty to the home merchants brings real returns in better service and better values. It's a lesson that requires the repetition afforded by the weekly arrival in the home of "The Napanee Beaver."

You can teach the public to rely on your Advertisements as safe guides to economy and satisfaction in shopping. Moreover, people appreciate being asked for their patronage. To them

"An Advertisement is an Invitation"

AN OPEN LETTER

Dear Friends and Customers,—

Since my announcement last May of my determination to retire from active business in Napanee, the response to my advertising has been wonderful. However, to sell out a stock of $15,000, such as mine was, will take time. But now, to speed up to a whirlwind finish, the very cream of my stock of Winter Wearables for Men, Women, Boys and Girls, will go at very saving bargain prices.

Space will not permit of my enumerating them here. "Come and get 'em." Absolutely without any reserve, everything in the store is on sale. Hundreds have taken advantage of this golden opportunity to buy seasonable goods cut to the bone. Come and take your share.

Thanking you for your patronage, I am yours faithfully, for Better Bargains.

Miller's Worm Powders are the medicine for children who are found suffering from the ravages of worms. NERVES AND FAINTING SPELLS

Sent Woman to Bed. Great Change After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sarnia, Ontario.—"After my girlie was born I was a wreck. My nerves were too terrible for words and I simply could not stand or walk without pains. I suffered with fainting spells until I was no longer able for any household duties and had to take to my bed. The doctor said I should have an operation, but I was not in a fit condition at that time. My neighbor said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? I am sure it will do you good and will save those doctor's bills.' So I was advised by my husband to try it after I told him about it. I am very thankful to say that I was soon able to take a few boarders for a while as rooms were scarce at that time. My baby is 17 months old now and I have not yet had an operation, thanks to your medicine. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to a few people I know and have told them the good it has done me. I know I feel and look a different woman these last few months and I certainly would not be without a bottle of your medicine in the house. You can use this letter as you see fit, as I should be only too glad for those suffering as I have to know what it has done for me."—Mrs. Robert G. MacGregor, R. R. No. 2, Sarnia, Ontario.

A recent canvass of women users of the Vegetable Compound report 98 out of 100 received beneficial results. This is a remarkable proof of its merit. C

Every Government Sale Province is a Bootleggers' Paradise

LIQUOR once sold cannot be controlled. The evil lies in the liquor, not in the method of its sale, nor in the form of the package. This is proven in every Canadian province where government sale, in varying forms, has been tried. ¶ With easier access to intoxicating liquor, drinking has increased enormously. More drunkenness and crime associated with drunkenness have naturally followed. Bootlegging—instead of being CURED by so-called government "control"—is flourishing to a degree that makes Ontario's illicit sale seem small and insignificant by comparison. ¶ A ghastly failure, serving only to MULTIPLY the very evils it was heralded to cure! That is the story of government sale of liquor in BRITISH COLUMBIA, in MANITOBA, in QUEBEC.

British Columbia and the Bootleggers

The Vancouver World, a newspaper friendly to the government, has declared in an editorial: "British Columbia is the bootleggers' paradise".

The Attorney-General of that province —who is the official administrator of the Government Liquor Control Act—said in a recent speech: "The greatest bootleggers of all are the brewers and export liquor dealers".

Dr. A. E. Cooke, of Vancouver, in The Canadian Congregationalist, asserts: "The Government controls neither the manufacture, importation, transportation, nor exportation of liquor. The distillers and brewers control all these, and the Government simply acts as one of their sales agents, controlling about 50 per cent. of the retail end of the trade. The whiskey ring and the bootleggers control the rest."

Manitoba Sick of "Control" in Less Than a Year

Eleven months after Manitoba adopted its government control system, an open-minded investigator of conditions in that province, sums up the situation in these words:

"I leave Manitoba impressed with the evidence that both wets and drys are dissatisfied with the government control system—the wets because there is no legal sale of beer by the glass and because there is some delay and trouble in getting hard stuff, and the drys BECAUSE BOOTLEGGING AND DRUNKENNESS HAVE GREATLY INCREASED."

The same neutral authority declares: "There is no dispute in Winnipeg about bootlegging. Everybody—drys, wets, moderationists, police, government officials, business men, professional men and rounders—tell the same story. The unanimous verdict during the week of August 24th, when I was in Winnipeg, was that bootlegging was being carried on on a tremendous scale, that the city was wide open, that the hotelmen had no regard for the will of the people as expressed in the disapproval of sale of liquor by the glass, and that something had to be done."

Quebec under Government Sale Eclipses Open Bar Evil

Quebec, with its longer experience in government sale, has drifted still further back toward the evil days of the open bar. In fact, the only difference between the Quebec "tavern" and the old bar-room is that customers sit down at tables to drink, rather than stand up at a bar!

And while Quebec goes on spending more money for booze than for education ($28,000,000 annually for liquor and $26,000,000 for educational purposes), crime is rampant. The Montreal Gazette was recently constrained to declare: "Montreal is a perfect Mecca for evil-doers, with vicious, immoral resorts and gambling joints, the hiding-places of the alien and other criminals from all corners of the continent."

Ontario Has Higher Hopes

Ontario citizens do NOT want THIS province to become "a bootleggers' paradise". They do not want their government to go into partnership with the distillers and brewers, splitting the booze business "fifty-fifty" with bootleggers—which is the best any government has been able to do under "government sale".

The responsible electors of Ontario DO want the happier homes, women and children, made possible by The Ontario Temperance Act. They DO want to defeat the liquor traffic's insidious effort to turn back the clock. They DO want Ontario to be spared the costly experience of such bootleggers' paradises as British Columbia, Manitoba and Quebec.

In this belief, and with the Government pledged to "give active and vigorous enforcement" of The Ontario Temperance Act, the Ontario Plebiscite Committee asks, with every confidence, that Ontario citizens give the Government an unmistakeable mandate on October 23rd.

For the Honor of Old Ontario mark Your Ballot thus:

1 Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act? X

2 Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?

HAVE THE HENS GONE TO THE DOGS?

Summer is lingering in the lap of Autumn. A proof of this assertion is that a bunch of Napanee young ladies held a most enjoyable picnic at Springside Park, on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday. They built a real, genuine, old fashioned camp fire, and had all of any mere man, and then had a roaring fire, over which swung a large iron pot, in which food cooked the principal ingredient for the making of "hot dog", which was the piece-de-resistance of the banquet to be spread under the beautiful old trees in the park. There were many other delectable things provided to tempt the appetite, but the "hot dog" was the piece de resistance. Some did themselves so well that they were unable to look at a dog now, of any breed, either hot or cold.

After the good things to eat and drink, the famous spring water, of course, had been disposed of, the real charming company set around the fire and sang songs and told yarns in the usual way, just as the men would do. Then left to finish up their little picnic, after herding up camp, they became the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R.M. McKim, Adelphi Street, where they had a most enjoyable time with cards, dancing, and both vocal and instrumental music, concluding with more refreshments. They say that although they just had a lovely time, the participants were the Misses Caroline McConachie, Edna Hull, Grace Hall, Leslie VanAlstyne, Evelyn McKim, Helen Hull, Helen Hall, Yvonne McGrae, Mary Rogers, and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Smith.

First Boy—"See here! Didn't I see you running down the street yesterday, with Bill Bounce after you, wantin' to lick you?"
Second Boy—"Yes."
"What did you run for?"
"I—I was only running so as to get him away from home, so his mother couldn't see him fightin'; but by the time we was out of sight of his house we got in sight of our house; and then, as my mother would see me if I stopped to hit him, I went in, so as to be out of temptation."

"Ouch," said Pat, "that's nothing, I was once at a horse race where two of the horses ran neck and neck until about 50 yards from home, when a wasp stung one of them on the nose, and the race was only won by the blister."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Catharine Wells.

A life that was singularly complete in all the characteristics that adorn a practical, cheerful, Christian life, came to an earthly close in the death of Mrs. Catharine Wells, of Tamworth, at the advanced age of nearly ninety-four years.

Born in the year 1830, at Weddport, in Jefferson County, New York, the daughter of Palmer Hodge and Sarah Ann Wilson, she was married about seventy years ago to Mr. John Wells, at Newburgh. Here they lived until the great fire, that destroyed so many homes, took theirs. Mr. Wells engaged in a harness and leather business, in which he continued for a few years after coming to Canada. Since then Mrs. Wells lived with her daughter, Mrs. Ehrett, and while receiving every care that an affectionate daughter could bestow, yet she delighted to be busy and active, taking the same cheerful, wholehearted interest in the affairs of home and church and community that she had always done, so far as her failing strength would allow. Her mind was clear and alert to the last, and her fund of good humour and her interest in people remained undimmed. As long as she was able, she was through life a member of the Methodist Church. Sincerely true to the finest Christian principles, cheerful and grateful to the end, the close of her long life of remarkable activity came simply as the peaceful closing of life's earthly frailties, that she might enter upon three heavenly privileges to which she had long looked forward. She died on August 12th, 1924, and the funeral service was held at the home of her son, Mr. L. P. Wells, in Tamworth, by Rev. C. J. Wilson, of Tamworth, and her body laid in the family plot in Tamworth cemetery. She is survived by her three children, Mr. L. P. Wells and Mrs. Florence Ehrett of Tamworth, and Mrs. Henrietta Thompson, of Toronto.

WORLD'S RICHEST MEN

FORD'S WEALTH COMES IN AT $225 PER MINUTE.

He Is Probably the Wealthiest Man In the History of the World—Some Families Have Also Amassed Enormous Fortunes In Course of Time.

Who are the ten richest men in the world? Henry Ford is easily the richest, while Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the United States Treasury, was said recently to be the fourth wealthiest. Who are the other eight?

They must possess private fortunes of over $100,000,000 to secure a place on such a list, and fortunes of such proportions are almost impossible to estimate with accuracy. Authoritative estimates, however, supply the following list of men credited with the possession of more individual wealth than any other group on earth:

Henry Ford	$500,000,000
John D. Rockefeller..	490,000,000
Duke of Westminster.	150,000,000
Andrew W. Mellon ...	150,000,000
Sir Basil Zaharoff....	100,000,000
Hugo Stinnes	100,000,000
Percy Rockefeller ...	100,000,000
Baron H. Mitsui	100,000,000
Baron H. Iwasaki....	100,000,000
Gaekwar of Baroda...	100,000,000

J. B. Duke, the tobacco king; G. F. Baker, of the First National Bank of New York; and T. B. Walker, the Minneapolis timber landowner, might be added to the list, since they all have fortunes estimated at $100,000,000, while there are at least three other Indian rulers whose fortunes probably exceed this amount.

The Rothschilds, Guggenheims, Vanderbilts, Weyerhausers, and the Astors do not appear because their are family fortunes. The Rothschild wealth has been estimated at from $250,000,000 to $500,000,000, and that of the Astors at from $100,000,000 to $500,000,000.

Henry Ford is possibly the richest man in all history. He has a net business income of $120,000,000 a year, which, capitalized at 5 per cent., represents $2,200,000,000. He earns $225 per minute. Croesus may have been richer, since his famous gift to Delphi cost $10,000,000, and that, reduced to to-day's terms, might mean $200,000,000.

John D. Rockefeller gave away $500,000,000 to charity and to foundations before 1921. He is the head, however, of the biggest group of wealthy men ever produced by a single industry, and his private fortune must still rank him second.

The Duke of Westminster's wealth is in land. He owns 600 acres in Mayfair, Belgravia, and Pimlico. When the leases of Belgravia fall in he will be easily the richest man in England.

Sir Basil Zaharoff is Europe's mystery man, but it is no mystery that he is one of Europe's wealthiest men. He owns more than half of Monte Carlo, and his holdings in armament firms are even larger. He is in oil, finance, shipping; in fact, it is difficult to say what he is not interested in.

The Mitsuis and the Iwasakis are financiers, traders, and shippers. The Gaekwar of Baroda's wealth is almost impossible to estimate, but his diamonds alone are valued at $1,250,000, and he has a jewelled tapestry worth $1,500,000. Guns of gold weighing 400 pounds stand at his palace gate.

TEMPERANCE RALLY

On Tuesday night over a thousand citizens of Napanee and district gathered together in the Armouries to hear the case for prohibition presented by two speakers, who had a special attraction to the town, Alan VanEvery, of Toronto, and Rev. W. W. Peck, of Vancouver.

Black's orchestra furnished the music as the crowd gathered, and, at 8 o'clock, Dr. Stratton, the chairman, called the meeting to order and announced the opening hymn, after which the Town Council, in a body, mounted the platform and presented Mr. VanEvery, as the Boy Premier of Ontario, an official address of welcome.

This was happily responded to by Mr. VanEvery, who proceeded to address the audience on "The Relation of the Beverage Use of Liquor and the Youth of To-Day". Speaking as a representative of young men of Ontario, he made a plea to the citizens of to-day to handle their own problems rather than to pass on a heritage to the voter of to-morrow which would be tainted with the curse of intoxicating liquors. We young men, he said, have never seen the inside of the old bar. We have heard of it, seen it portrayed on the movie screen, but never experienced it. The habit of drinking alcoholic beverages has no attraction for the young people of to-day. There has been a large campaign of rumors about young people carrying flasks on their hips, and so forth, all of which is part of the post-war hysteria. Drinking has been outlawed, a new environment has been created for the modern youth, and this environment has reacted to create a new type of character. It is well known, he continued, that record after record has been broken during the past two or three years, and the pre eminence of the United States athletes at the Olympic games was due in large measure to the eighteenth amendment. The youth of to-day have got a new scientific view of life and are facing earnestly and thoughtfully the problems which have been passed on to them by the former generation, and they demand of the Ontario voters on the 23rd that they do not intensify the problems and create greater obstacles for them. When you go to vote on the 23rd of the month remember that the young people of Ontario do not want liquor in this province. Those of us who have not the vote are those who are going to suffer, and our children after us, if you vote to bring back the booze.

Mr. Peck, the next speaker, was introduced by Rev. A. J. Wilson, who pointed out that Mr. Peck, who preceded him in St. Andrew's Church, in Napanee, was now the best qualified of any temperance worker in British Columbia to speak of conditions there. Mr. Peck, in a very clear and forceful manner, dealt with the question of Government Control as it operated in British Columbia, and as it would be operated in Ontario, if the O.T.A. is defeated. The Moderation Control in British Columbia made great promises that they would see to it that temperance and sobriety were inculcated into the habits of the people when Government Contrpl was established, but once the flood-gates were opened the moderationists have forgotten their promises and British Columbia was deluged with liquor and beer. He took up the question of a limit to the individual's supply and proved by exhibiting copies of marked cheques secured from liquor vendors that the individuals were able to buy thousands of dollars' worth of liquor in a few weeks. Indeed, there was no limit to the amount they could buy except their capacity to pay. In touching the economic side, he produced his own tax receipts and showed how they had increased on an unchanged assessment from $82 in 1914 to $240 in 1924. He further pointed out that 46% of the business failures, as reported in Dunn's last year, were in the Province of Quebec, where Government Contryl is in operation. More than that, the retailers in British Columbia were the first to feel the pinch and had already put themselves on record as opposing the present system. Concerning bootlegging in Canada, while there was an out-cry here in Ontario, such as there had been in British Columbia in prohibition days, Mr. Peck showed that now, under Government Control, there was more boot-leg liquor sold last year than in the seventy-one Government stores. Touching the moral aspect, it had become practically impossible to arrest or take care of those who were drunk, and special instructions have been given to the police not to arrest men, but take them home, unless they were dangerous or disorderly. He pointed in vivid pictures what had happened in British Columbia, and showed from their experience, and the similar experiences of other Government Control provinces, that Ontario would suffer a tremendous calamity in repealing the O.T.A.

After the address, the chairman, on behalf of the audience, tendered a vote of thanks, and the meeting was then dismissed by the National Anthem.—Com.

Snowy Table Linen

The pure lather of Sunlight Soap cleanses the clothes naturally, NOT chemically. The $1,000 Guarantee of Purity is stamped on every bale of Sunlight Soap.

OF all things, table cloths and napkins benefit most from the mild, cleansing Sunlight bath. An ordinary washing wears table linen out even more than table use. How different the Sunlight way! Just soak the clothes, after rubbing lightly with Sunlight Soap, and all dirt is loosened, all grease dissolved—and this without any grinding rub on the wash board. Then you rinse and the dirt just runs away. Result: freshness, purity and snowy cleanliness.

Following a railway accident, after other medicines failed, he got relief from two bottles of Carnol.

The following letter needs no comment from us. We leave Mr. Sinclair to tell you about his experience in his own words.—"I was very much run down and nervous following a railway accident some years ago. Medicines failed to give me any real help, so I decided to try Carnol. I did not have any faith in patent medicines, but a friend of mine said Carnol was far superior to any other of the so-called patent medicines. 'Give it a trial,' he said, 'and let me know the results.' I am glad to say this wonderful medicine has done for me what no other medicine has done, and it therefore gives me great pleasure to give this evidence in favor of Carnol. I would advise all business men who feel, after the strenuous life of the world, that they need a building up tonic, to take Carnol. It is only by giving it a fair trial that they will know its splendid qualities.

After using the first bottle I noticed a marked improvement. My appetite improved and after the second bottle I could eat like a horse, even raw potatoes and onions would be as welcome as apples. I slept like a log and after a refreshing sleep, I was able to take up the strenuous work of the hustling insurance agent. This work calls for considerable nervous energy in closing business and I can say, with confidence, Carnol has no superior in the medicine line. I would suggest that your company give this letter a most conspicuous place, so that everyone may know what a great medicine is before the public as a regenerative tonic and flesh builder. I say, with all confidence, I owe my life to Carnol. Nothing equals this medicine."—Gordon M. Sinclair, Chatham, N.B. 1-24

BANKING FIFTY YEARS

Your Business is Related to Ours

SINCE 1584, when the first European bank was founded in Venice, the story of the world's commercial progress is the history of the development of banking. Since the foundation of the Standard Bank of Canada in 1873, the commercial progress of many of this country's most successful business houses is closely identified with the services of this institution. Each local branch of the Standard Bank is equipped to meet the financial needs of the community.

IN pioneer days the general merchant often kept the money of his customers for them—there were no banks. Buying and selling were largely by barter only.

The coming of the branch bank filled an important need in every community, and today the wise farmer, business man or private individual keeps his money in the bank and makes full use of the many services it has to offer.

Wedded at Enterprise.

At 7 o'clock on Monday morning, October 6th, a pretty wedding was solemnized in the Methodist Parsonage, Enterprise, when Miss Lizzie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bush, Enterprise, became the bride of Mr. Harvey Keech, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Keech, Moscow. Rev. Mr. Myerian officiated. The bride looked charming in a becoming gown of grey silk crepe with pretty hat of grey silk velvet, veil, shoes, stockings and gloves to match. The popular young couple, who are much esteemed by all, left at once by train for Kingston, where they took the boat for the Cape, where they contracted for Dexter, Watertown, N.Y., and other points. On their return they will reside at Moscow, where Mr. Keech is a prosperous young farmer.

Strathcona Orioles.

We, the Strathcona Orioles, of Soft Ball fame, wish to advise the public in general that, since we have been professionalized under a ruling, we are calling on any team that is unbeatable to automatically sever their relations with the amateurs, which we have done, and are now open to anyone within a radius of fifty miles, to play basket ball. But, we wish it understood that we absolutely refuse to play any more games by auto light, on strange grounds, which handicapped us heavily in Tamworth, accounting for a tie game, it being impossible to find the rings unless you climb the pole and feel for it—as not belonging so far back, we are not very apt scholars at climbing—so had to be content with a tie for the first game. But that does not count hereafter as we are out to win basket ball as easily and consistently as soft ball.

Hit by Auto at Tamworth Resident Dies of Injuries.

Robert Adair, a middle-aged resident of Tamworth, died twenty minutes after being hit by an auto in front of the Tamworth School House, Thursday night about eight o'clock. Mr. Adair was walking with a companion south along the road in front of the school, and the car, which was driven by Hugh Singleton, of Hanna's Corners, between Enterprise and Centreville, in the 8th Concession, was travelling north. Mr. Singleton is said to have seen only one of the men at first and turned out for him, but struck Mr. Adair. He tried to avoid the accident and turned his car into the ditch, practically wrecking it and sustaining a fracture of his shoulder. To late Mr. Adair was about fifty-five years of age, was an old resident of Tamworth, and was employed by the Camden East Paper Mill.

The jury empannelled by Dr. Cowan, the Coroner of Napanee, for the purpose of enquiring into the circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Robert Adair, of Tamworth, who was struck and almost instantly killed by an automobile driven by Mr. Hugh Singleton, of Hanna's Corners, on Thursday of last week, reconvened Monday afternoon, and after hearing all the available evidence brought in a verdict to the effect that the deceased met his death by being struck by an automobile driven by Mr. Hugh Singleton. The jury added a rider to the effect that no blame could be attached to any person, and also added recommendations regarding the better lighting of the highway in the Village of Tamworth.

SHOWERS FOR THE BRIDE.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. W. Coates, Bridge street, on Tuesday evening, September 2nd, when a shower was given by Miss Jennie Coates, in honour of Miss Jessie Henderson, a number of young ladies being present. The evening entertainment was arranged so it was a complete surprise to the bride. The gifts were beautiful, the "Love Wires" Sunday School Class of Trinity Church giving a pair of mahogany candle sticks.

On Wednesday, Sept. 3rd, an afternoon tea and handkerchief shower was given by Mrs. (Rev.) Tanton, at her home, in honour of Miss Henderson. During the interval the bride was blindfolded and led to the living-room, where she was seated under a huge white bell. Presently the bell rang and down tumbled a shower of gifts. The tea-table was beautifully decorated with a miniature bride in the centre surrounded by vases of roses and baby's breath.

On October 2nd, the pupils of Mount Pleasant Public School, where Mrs. Herrington taught for the three previous years, gathered at the home of the bride's father, Mr. P. H. Henderson, and presented Mr. and Mrs. Frank Herrington with a beautiful rug and a pair of candlesticks. The evening was spent in games, and a jolly time was enjoyed by all.

The following ladies played: Mrs. W. J. Wiggins, Mrs. G. P. Carr, Mrs. J. W. Robinson, Mrs. Sneath, Mrs. D. B. White, Mrs. Webb, Miss Constance Grange, Miss Josephine Vrooman, Miss Gladys Miller, Miss Jessie Dibb, Miss Georgie Robinson, Miss Diana Miller.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY CONVENTION.

A Convention was held in St. John's Church, Bath, on Wednesday, of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Rural Deanery of Lennox and Addington. Representatives were present in good numbers from nearly every parish in the County, and the meeting was most successful and inspiring.

The Holy Communion was celebrated by Rev. W. A. Swayne, a very fine sermon being preached by Rev. C. E. S. Radcliffe. The ladies of Morven, Hawley and Bath served a sumptuous lunch at mid-day, after which an afternoon session was held, presided over by Rural Dean Coleman.

Reports of work were given by all the branches, and short addresses made by some members of the Diocesan Board. The leading feature of the proceedings was an address given by Miss VanStratenie, of Kingston, setting forth the needs of the Mission Field and appealing for service and prayer. Her words were listened to with rapt attention, and produced a profound impression.

Mrs. H. M. Johnston, of Adolphustown, was re-elected Deanery Secretary, and Tamworth selected as the next place of meeting.

WEDDING BELLS.

Douglas—Deline.

Grace Methodist Church, beautiful with flowers, was the scene of a pretty wedding, which was solemnized by the Rev. A. J. Terrill, B.A., when Eva Bella Deline, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Deline, Robert St., became the bride of Ruben Weston Douglas, of Haliburton, Ont. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a French gown of poudre blue georgette, heavily beaded, and picture hat to match. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, lily of the valley and baby breath. Mrs. W. C. Quinn, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, attired in a French gown of new blue Georgette, prettily beaded, carried a bouquet of sweet heart roses and maiden hair fern, and wore a becoming black hat. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. James Douglas. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Lottie Scott. During the signing of the register Mrs. Harry Killins, sister of the bride, sang very sweetly, "Because". Ushers were Mr. Harry Kellar and Mr. A. A. Deline. Following the ceremony the guests were received at the home of the bride's parents, which was prettily decorated with asters, gladiolas and Autumn leaves, for the occasion, and a sumptuous dinner was served. After an enjoyable evening the bride donned a smart suit of carmasine, with spell hat, and the happy couple left with good wishes. The gift of the groom to the bride was a bar pin set with a ruby. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas left on a late train for Toronto, Hamilton and London, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas will reside in Haliburton, Ont.

NAPANEE DISTRICT MISSIONARY CONVENTION

The thirtieth Annual Convention of the Methodist Church met at Empey Hill, Wednesday, October 8th, 1924. It being a glorious day the spacious church was well filled, and presented a homey appearance, with its many cut flowers and potted plants.

The officers were in their respective places, viz., Mrs. Geo. I. Perry and Mrs. I. Asselstine. The morning session opened with the worship of the Creed. Hymn 630, "And Are We Yet Alive", gave cause for thankfulness, and an uplifting prayer for God's kind Providence and care. If there was any distinct keynote struck throughout the Convention, it was the important part prayer has in our work.

Revs. Truscott and Merrick led in earnest prayer for our work and workers, and that our lives through Christ may rise above lost victories and defeats.

Press Reporter appointed, followed by reports of Auxiliaries, Circles and Bands. All Auxiliaries reported the sum of $567.50. After a Temperance song, our Secretary, Mrs. I. Asselstine, read a personal letter from Miss Olive Hamby, Missionary in Japan. Mrs. Asselstine had been thoughtful enough to have this letter in time for our Convention. It being a letter of much interest to women, a little pamphlet on conditions along certain lines in Japan being enclosed, the Superintendent thought it wise to pass it around in alphabetical order to different Auxiliaries, and thus relative delegates' notes on same. The Superintendent's report was minus, being throughout the sessions she spoke so fittingly and hopefully of the work, it was a continual report.

Business resulted in re-electing the old officers unanimously. Selby Mission Band being absent, Marian Wintern delighted the audience with a flower motion song, "Gold and Blue", our Workers' Study of "Murray", a paper given by Mrs. Clement, of Deseronto. Firstly mentioned was two thoughts naturally arise in our minds, viz., the workers of to-day and the workers of yesterday (or to-morrow). Secondly, the workers of to-day are built the workers of to-morrow, and this depends on three important factors, home, school and church. Setting forth the various responsibilities of these three factors was included the Church, Young People's Societies and Sunday Schools, as being all important, and Mrs. Clement stated the parents' part in developing a love for the same through home training. Non-attendance at God's House this day and age had become a rule rather than exception, and the even church members were not exempt. Many passages of Scripture were quoted concerning the training of children for God's services of to-morrow. Many great men of yesterday's workers were enumerated showing parents took time for the truest and essential things of life. Touching upon religion in schools brought out the necessity of same, and possible influence to have texts taught there which confirm prohibition as a necessary measure, and will never be repealed until we raise a generation of voters who realize the danger of intemperance, and they will be among our workers of to-morrow. Strong was this paper in parents' duties to see that children receive such training as will make them worthy citizens of the world of which they are, and will be a responsible part.

An instrumental duet by Mesdames Mayhee and Wright, was a new feature in our program, and listened to very appreciatively.

Mrs. Erwell Miller, of Wilton Auxiliary, conducted the Quiet Half Hour in a manner of sweet devotion, and as we listened to the different messages selected from Christ's last hours, inwardly came the thought, all this for me, and perhaps realized a great indebtedness as never before.

Noon hour arriving, Mrs. Fred Close merly voiced our welcome in behalf of the entertaining Auxiliary, and that the interest and devotion in the work would make us feel at home among them, and that the great companionship, eating together, would bind us long among us.

Afternoon session was opened by Violet Auxiliary taking charts of Devotional Exercise and Roll Call, after which the minutes of the morning session were read and approved. Gratifying, indeed, was the fact that there were forty-nine new members added since May 1st. Mrs. Courtland Snider replied to greetings, and left nothing unsaid on the part of hospitality, and the feelings of the assemblage that such a welcome and bounteous repast belonged alone to Empey Hill.

After the offering, Mrs. Terrill's paper on "Modern Plans and Ideas of Missionary Work", showed much careful study, and the Convention received glimpses of the work carried on in foreign fields under wonderful organizations and planning as never thought could be accomplished. How it had grown self or semi-self supporting in certain districts. The paper as a whole was encouraging to all who are interested in the ways and means of conducting the work in foreign fields.

Mrs. Seymour's solo was a missionary story in song, and well received.

"Is Missionary Work Worth While?" was grasped and given by Mrs. Harold Hough, of Sillsville Auxiliary. It was so convincing with its dates, facts and figures compared with present and past, followed up by careful study from first efforts to the present time, dipping down in the dark ages of work in foreign fields, and carried along through decades to show that progress, although slow and often offset, was Christ's work, and always bound to throw out its influence under difficult circumstances. The work in the home field, as given instances, showed was not one of easy accomplishment under many difficult circumstances, but explanations given showed that the worth whileness of Missionary Work" as a fact of Christ's working with a visible result was so authentically given in comparisons, there was no doubt left that our efforts are making their way to a proof, and our labors stand out clearly as never before.

Solo, by Miss Oliver, was pleasing, and the Question Drawer followed, which served to bring out in discussion many points pertaining to our work, and wherein we would never be touched upon.

An invitation from Bay Circuit West Auxiliary was accepted, after which Rev. Mr. Terrill closed the Convention with prayer.

THE CALL OF THE FOREST

Have you followed the trail of the lonely moose
That antlered king sublime;
Have you camped on his trail on a frosty night?
While the lamps of heaven shine;
Have you seen him call to an unseen mate?
Or answer a distant foe?
Have you seen him awim the shining lake?
His antagonist to lay low.

Have you seen him circle, with lowered head,
Young, but very shrewd,
While he met the king of the forest,
Unconquered and unsubdued?
Have you seen that battle for life or death?
That forest monarch grand,
As he met the charge of the young bull moose
And died on the lake shore sand!

Have you seen the gaunt wolves hovering around?
Wild witnesses of the fray,
With lolling tongues and gleaming fangs,
Awaiting their chance to prey;
Have you seen this wolf pack drawing tight,
In a circle closing in?
A bull moose carcass their repast
If youth or age need win.

If you have camped at night upon the trail
And smelled the bacon fry,
If you saw the fight for the champion-ship,
And slept neath the starlit sky;
Then the northern lights will awaken you,
Your blood will surge and thrill,
You will grab your gun, make another hike
For the tamarac swamp and hill.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION

The Convention of the Women's Missionary Society of the Napanee District (Tamworth Division), was held at Moscow Methodist Church, on Wednesday, October 8th, commencing at 9.15 a.m. The weather was ideal and the attendance was very large. Rev. Mr. MacKenzie conducted the Devotional Exercises, and after the reception of the kind words of welcome from the Moscow Auxiliary, the Superintendent, Mrs. J. W. Wagar, proceeded with the programme. Reports from Auxiliaries, Circles and Bands were gratifying both in members and finances. One Auxiliary, Arden, had disbanded during the year.

The election of officers was as follows:—

Superintendent—Mrs. J. W. Wagar, Centreville.

Assistant Superintendent—Mrs. D. B. Wilson, Napanee.

Secretary—Mrs. G. R. Finlay, Strathcona.

The Superintendent's report was optimistic, with great stress upon prayer. Go forward on our knees. If the China Inland Mission is sustained by prayer, cannot our work be also? Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts.

The W. M. S. Conference consisted of four parts,—

(a) "How to win new members", by Mrs. D. B. Wilson, of Napanee. We were reminded of our slogan, "Every woman in the Church a member of the W. M. S." She emphasized individual work and personal influence with preparedness and prayer. Be persistent and use common sense.

(b) "How to Raise Funds", by Mrs. Jos. Paul, of Wesley. She believed in the Bible, that of giving the tenth, and with our time and talents, the reward would be an overflowing blessing. God loveth a cheerful giver. She closed with a challenge to all members to try giving the tenth for this year and note the result.

(c) "How to sustain interest", by Miss Williams, of Camden East, brought before us our duty to give an account of definite work. Pray for a new vision and have a kindly and tactful spirit toward those who do not have the same interest as ourselves.

(d) "How to deepen spirituality", by Mrs. H. Woodruff, Yarker. She said spirituality was the last thing thought of in this age, but really the vital question. In our rush for temporal things, let us not forget the finer things; let us look for peace from above and grasp every opportunity to spread the word of God.

The Quiet Half Hour, in charge of Mrs. White, of Tamworth, will long be remembered as one of deep spiritual uplift.

A sumptuous dinner was served by the ladies of Moscow, after which Mrs. (Rev.) Merriam took charge of the Devotional Exercises.

"Our Missionary Work in Western Canada" was brought closer to our notice by Mrs. Ross Hanna, of Wesley, who presented the problems of the Orientals of Victoria and Vancouver, the Indians of Kitamaat and Port Simpson, and the new Canadians including Poles, Ruthenians, Slavs, Austrians, etc., of the three Prairie Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and reminded us of our responsibility of these strangers within our gates, who are to become citizens in this Canada of ours.

Mrs. W. Redden, of Tamworth, in a paper on "Band Leadership", told of the crying need of leaders in this work. It was not more money, but more leaders. The Band seems to suffer more than any other department for leaders. Let this be a call for service to each one at this time that this great work may go forward.

Mrs. (Rev.) Tanton presented the needs of the Circle in a talk on "Far Marks of a Live Circle". There must be true leadership, with a worth while programme and definite spiritual results. There must come the great spiritual challenge to work for the Master.

Mrs. N. B. Miller, of Napanee, gave a very interesting talk on the Temperance Question, and presented the various problems of to-day.

The Convention was honored by having present Miss Hannah M. Paul, who for so many years has labored as a missionary in Western Canada, among the different nationalities. The keynote of her address was "Prayer".

The musical part of the programme was enjoyed by all and special mention should be made of the attendance exercise by the girls of Moscow Band.

An invitation from the ladies of Tamworth to hold the District Convention in that place next year was accepted, and after the report of the Courtesy Committee, Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Roblin, with a few words of prayer, closed a most successful convention.

CONWAY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The October meeting was held on Monday, Oct. 6th, at the home of our District President, Mrs. W. L. Haight, with an attendance of fifteen members and visitors. The meeting opened with the Opening Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer. The Secretary, Mrs. N. S. Gale, gave the financial statement and minutes of last meeting. Mrs. T. Curran, who was to have gone as delegate to Ottawa, sent word she could not go, and Mrs. John Spearing, the President, was appointed as delegate in her place.

It was resolved, that in giving the school fair prizes next year only those children could compete who had some one person in their family a member of Conway Institute.

Miss Eleanor Hanna delighted everyone by her fine piano selections.

Mrs. W. Haight gave a short address to the members on the temperance effect that alcohol has on the system when it has become a habit and does repeatedly. Her explanation from the point of view of a trained nurse was interesting and instructive and gives a hint way towards proving it should be prohibited, not only for the sake of those who drink it, but the racial effect it has on their descendants.

A motion was made that $50.00 be spent for new books to be equally divided between the library at Sandbanks and two sets at Hillside. A committee of three persons was appointed to choose and purchase these books.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem, and the Institute served cake and coffee.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ephraim Fitchett, on Tuesday, November 11th. Each member is requested to bring any little bit of fancy work she may be doing for Xmas gifts, as each may derive some new ideas from the others. Everybody please attend the meeting, and don't forget your fancy work.

PLUMBING AND SEWAGE

Systems Recommended Suitable for Rural Homes

Hot and Cold Water on Tap Is a Boon—Sewage Disposal—The Septic Tank — Extension Work of Physics Department—Watering the Garden.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Hot and cold water on tap, kitchen sink, laundry tubs, bathtub, shower bath, and water flush closet, and the necessary pipes for carrying away the wastes to some suitable sewage disposal system in the yard outside.

A very good system complete can be put in the average-sized home for $250, and in view of the fact that it will last a lifetime with very little outlay for repairs, it is one of the best investments one can make. It will give you real worth while service every day for a cost of about 1½ cents a day figured on interest and depreciation.

In the Physics Building, O. A. C., there is installed a complete plumbing system for inspection of students and visitors interested in this work. It demonstrates the simplest method possible of piping the various parts together, thereby saving both material and labor to the greatest possible degree. If you are interested drop in and see it, and maybe we can assist you in getting that very necessary equipment in your home—modern plumbing.

Sewage Disposal.

To perfect the plumbing system just referred to it is necessary to build some suitable construction for disposing of the sewage and waste from the home. In the country this must be either a cesspool or septic tank. The cesspool may be all right for a time in porous gravelly well-drained soils, but usually it is a menace to health by contaminating the water supply or becoming a nuisance whenever it overflows. The septic tank is the modern method, and gives good satisfaction as a rule. We have a very fine working or demonstrating model of it installed on a large table in the Physics Building, and it is very useful for showing prop just what the system is like and how it operates.

The Septic Tank.

It consists of a large concrete tank divided into two compartments by a vertical partition. The size for a single house is about 4 feet x 8 feet and 2½ feet deep. This tank holds the sewage long enough for a certain kind of bacteria to destroy the solid matter. When the liquid accumulates to a certain amount a non-mechanical affair called a siphon empties one of the chambers into a system of field tile, called the absorption bed, laid shallow under the ground. Any remaining sewage is destroyed in the soil by another kind of bacteria that live near the top of the ground. In this way these friendly bacteria are enabled to do a very valuable work for us. This is science applied to a useful purpose.

We supply bulletin and blue-print to anyone desirous to build a septic tank. All necessary information is given in these, and by their helpful suggestion any handy man can build it. Cost for cement, cinder, fittings and tile amounts to about $12. The tank may be located close to the house and the tile laid under the flower garden.

Extension Work of the Department of Physics.

The extension activities of the Department of Physics assist those seeking advice or assistance in connection with the regular branches of the department's extension activities, including: Installation of water and sewage systems, lightning rod installations, drainage surveys, farm cold storages, pipe overstraction, anti-freeze mixtures. Blue prints of septic tank installation, hydraulic ram, protection of wells, small ice cold storages, types of ice houses, water supply systems and farm plumbing have been prepared, and are now obtainable upon request from the Physics Department, Ontario Agricultural College.—R. Booze Must Not Come Back!

Only By Voting Can Ontario Citizens Defeat the Desperate Liquor Interests

THE lawless liquor traffic dies hard. But good citizenship is a patient executioner in Ontario. Again and again Ontario citizens have registered their determination that the moral and economic waste caused by booze must cease. ¶ On October 23rd the men and women of this Province must tell the self-seeking liquor interests still more emphatically that booze shall not come back. A half-million majority for continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act is language that brewer, distiller and bootlegger will understand.

O.T.A. is Hated for its Good Work

Desperate because the O.T.A. has cut down drinking by 90%, the liquor trade seeks the death of the finest temperance measure Ontario has ever had. Distiller, brewer and bootlegger are arrayed against the forces of reform. The issue itself is sharply drawn, but John Barleycorn is using a new disguise. Only his desperation can explain his reckless effrontery and his astonishingly low estimate of the common sense of the people.

No good citizen, familiar with the miserable conditions before The Ontario Temperance Act brought sobriety to the homes and happiness to the women and children, would deliberately vote for a return to the bar-room. Yet today Ontario faces, as the only alternative to the O.T.A., a step that will lead to conditions in some respects even worse than the open bar produced.

Rally to Its Defence!

The same sordid story comes from every province where so-called government "control" has been blindly adopted. More drinking, more drunkenness, more crime, more accidents, more misery, more waste—and, above all, infinitely more of the curse of bootlegging. This prospect should send every earnest man and woman in Ontario to the polls on October 23rd to vote for the continuance, strengthening and vigorous enforcement of The Ontario Temperance Act.

To legalize the sale of booze for beverage purposes, though in sealed packages, is to re-establish the liquor shop without the former restrictions of the licensed bar-room, and bring back the treating system, the hip-pocket flask, and the drinking club. To vote for government sale is to bring back to old Ontario the free dispensing of that bottled misery which will blight and destroy the hopes, the character, the life of young and old in every community where liquor shops are permitted to exist.

Your Ballot is Your Weapon

You know that, but you must VOTE. Your weapon, the ballot, must be used. Vote yourself, and use your influence to have every qualified elector within your home and your place of work do likewise. The only votes counted will be those placed in the ballot box on October 23rd, 1924.

Apathy and over-confidence have lost many a good fight. The liquor trinity—bootlegger, brewer and distiller—are at work, night and day. Foil their efforts by polling an overwhelming majority for The Ontario Temperance Act. Mark your ballot thus:

1 Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act? X

2 Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?

THE REV. JAMES AND MRS. DIXON
Are holding a fortnight Special Services in Bethany Methodist Church, commencing Sunday next. Mr. Dixon will preach in the morning at Hay Bay, and Bethany at 7.30 p.m.

WHO IS JAMES DIXON?
Evangelist Dixon is a veteran of the British Army, in which he served with distinction in the Egyptian Campaign. Called of God to the work of an Evangelist, on being honorably discharged from the army, he gave his life to the winning of souls to Christ.
Previous to coming to Canada, he was for twenty-five years with the late Dr. Crawford Johnston, in founding and building Grosvenor Hall, Belfast, which has a seating capacity of over 3,000 people. During this time Mr. Dixon not only preached to congregations which filled this great Central Methodist Church to capacity, but conducted revival campaigns in many Belfast churches, and throughout Ireland, England and Scotland.
Since coming to Canada, nearly five years ago, Mr. Dixon has been conducting Evangelistic campaigns throughout the Dominion under the direction of the Department of Evangelism and Social Service of the Methodist Church. He has been wonderfully used of God in churches large and small, in St. John, N.B., Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver and many intervening points. Thirty years of successful campaigning in city and rural churches bears emphatic testimony to his continued spiritual and intellectual power as well as to his wisdom.
"His eye is not dimmed nor his natural force abated."

SOME CURIOUS RUSES GAVE MAN $100 TO WOO PROMISED WIFE.

Numerous Cases Where Men's Ardor Cools and He Has to Resort to Duplicity So That He Will Not Be Sued for Breach of Promise.

What could be more odd than the hiring of a man for the purpose of wooing a maid or posing as her fiancee? asks Tit-Bits.

As a matter of fact, this somewhat farcical situation does occasionally arise.

It happens quite frequently that an individual, having grown tired of his lady-love, secures the services of some impecunious, and not over-scrupulous, person to take his sweetheart off his hands, and there is no doubt that but for understand arrangements of this nature His Majesty's Judges would have to adjudicate upon a far greater number of cases of heart wounds than they are called upon to do at present.

As a rule, it is dread of the ordeal of an action for breach that leads an inconstant swain to resort to this form of duplicity.

A case in point concerns a wealthy manufacturer who became enamored of one of his lady employes, and proposed to her. He was accepted, but in a month or so his affection cooled, and, regretting his engagement, he began to puzzle his brain with a view to ascertaining a way out of his difficulty.

It would never have done for him to face an action for breach of promise; the ridicule that would have been heaped upon him would have injured his business, besides which he would have been ordered by a jury to disgorge a heavy sum.

The scheme which the manufacturer devised after several sleepless nights, and put into execution, worked better than it deserved.

He had amongst his foremen a handsome young fellow, and he astonished this youth one day by offering him a reward of a hundred pounds in the event of his capturing the heart of the lady.

The bargain was struck and the campaign started. The manufacturer, being of a crafty nature, was careful to conceal from his fiancee the circumstance that he no longer loved her, while the foreman, on his part, courted for all he was worth.

In three weeks, fascinated by her new admirer's manifold attractions, the unsuspecting lady fell in love with him, and when he proposed readily consented to be his wife.

The news that he had been jilted caused the manufacturer much delight that he handed over his cheque for a hundred pounds on the instant.

The reader will naturally suppose that this dark plot brought disaster to the lady. It did nothing of the kind. The foreman developed a genuine affection for her, and a happy marriage resulted.

The same ruse was adopted recently by another business man, who met a lady whom he preferred to his fiancee. He begged to be released from his engagement, but was refused, upon which he consulted his brother.

The latter thought that if he tried he could adore the lady himself, and it was agreed eventually that he should get engaged to her, and thus free his brother, for which he was to receive a certain sum of money. He succeeded in his efforts, and was greatly pleased, for he had come to fancy himself in love.

His attachment to the lady, however, was of short duration, and tired of her very quickly, and then wanted to terminate the example of his brother. This he was unable to do; so, fearing an action for breach of promise, he stole away to America.

An amusing instance of a biter bit was that of a man who was left a substantial sum by his father on condition that he became engaged within a month of his parent's death. This was a most embarrassing proviso, for the reason that the legatee's circle of female acquaintance was extremely limited.

However, he discovered a woman who, on being informed of the circumstances, expressed her willingness to become engaged to him for a few weeks only in return for some hundreds of pounds.

The consequence was that the legatee man obtained his money; but he had no sooner done so than he discovered to his horror that he could not break off his engagement. The woman held him to it, and in institution an action for breach of promise against him secured half the money.

A society woman might be named who was very deeply in love with an army captain. She had reason to believe that her affections were reciprocated, but the exact nature of the captain's feelings could not speak the word.

To avoid further delay, therefore, the woman intimated that she was betrothed to her cousin. Immediately on receiving the intelligence, the officer hurried to the lady's house, and—well, he had no trouble in alleviating her poor cousin, who, obliging mortal, was presented by the lady with a gold watch for his pains.

Snails Weather Prophets.

Snails are said to be most reliable weather prophets. They do not drink but imbibe moisture during rain which they store up for use, exuding it at intervals. They then crawl out the pure water. When the supply is about exhausted a light red succeeds, then a deep red, next yellow, and lastly a dark brown. The snail is very careful not to excrete more of its moisture than is necessary. Prior to rain it is found ascending trees and getting on the leaves. If it be a long and hard rain it gets on the sheltered side of the leaf, if a short rain on the outside of the leaf, if a short rain, outside of the leaf. Another snail has the same habits, but differs only in its color; before rain it is yellow and after it, blue.

WATER IN FARM HOUSES

Hints About Installing In the Rural Household

The Compression System—What You May Enjoy With This Method—The Agricultural College Will Help You—Raising Ducks.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

There are two main sources of farm water supply, namely, well and spring (both hard water) and rain water (soft). Anyone thinking of installing a modern water system and plumbing in his home should make sure that his water supply is both plentiful and safely protected from all possible sources of contamination. Much more water will be used daily under modern than under old conditions of service, about 30 gallons per person per day.

The College Will Help You.

Ask the O. A. College to assist you in solving the following problems in this matter of water supply:—

1. How to increase the well and spring supplies of water.
2. How to safeguard these supplies from surface contamination.
3. How to make more use of the rain water supply.
4. How to get that fine spring water running through your house and stables by installing the hydraulic ram near the spring.

Pumping and carrying water by hand is too expensive at modern rates of wages, is very inconvenient, and is wasteful of time and energy. No one likes the job. It is rapidly going out of date wherever people are getting acquainted with the many modern pumping and supply systems.

The Compression System.

The Compression System is the most popular one to-day. The idea is this: The hard or soft water, as the case may be, is pumped into a large strong air-tight metal tank to about two-thirds full. The water compresses the original air in the tank and thereby produces sufficient pressure to force the water out of the tank through a pipe line that connects to the sinks, closet, bathtub, etc., in the house. The pump may be driven by hand, gasoline engine, windmill or electric motor or any available power. The last named means is the preferable one because the pumping is carried on automatically, in quiet in operation, economical of space, and a fresh water line that supplies water direct from the well for drinking purposes may be installed. The style and size of the pump required depends on whether the well is shallow or deep. The size of the tank depends on the amount of water required about the place. An outfit large enough for the ordinary-sized family or household costs about $175.00, piping, connecting system to well and to the various fixtures in the house being extra.

What You May Enjoy With This System.

1. Have complete plumbing system in your house. That means hard and soft water on tap in the kitchen, bath room or shower or both, and an indoor sanitary water closet, which will dispense with the outside privy. This convenience means greater comfort, convenience, saving of labor and time, better health and greater efficiency or fitness for work and enjoyment.

2. Lawn and garden water service to keep home surroundings attractive.

3. Water under pressure is very useful and convenient for washing the automobile, washing outside of windows, cleaning floors in cellar or stables, putting out fires if reached in time.

4. No longer any need to pump and carry water. Another burden is rolled away.

Different makes of this system are on exhibition in the Physics Building, O. A. College, Guelph. They are properly set up and in good working order. Drop in and see them work and get more information about them.—H. R. Graham, Physics Dept., O. A. College, Guelph.

Raising Ducks.

After hatching, in about one day's time, place before them bread and milk mixed together, and a pan of sand and water. Be sure your ducks have clean sand and water at starting. Ducks will thrive if water is given them all the time. It is their nature to wash their food before eating. Do not feed bread and milk alone or fine corn meal or fine cracked corn to the young ducks. Mix bread and milk with mix duck feed.

As the ducks grow older feed cracked corn and wheat. At younger age corn bread and milk is good for a change in feed. Let the ducks have green feed also. If you do not want them out of pens gather green feed yourself for them. Do not keep ducks shut up except at night. Let them in the creek and watch them to keep crows away. Be careful of turtles in creeks also.

When ducks are nearly feathered out feed whole corn mixed with some cracked corn. Then at last whole corn and wheat altogether. They will not want to eat it at first, but do not feed them too much and they'll eat it. Feed ducks three times a day, like enemies.

Keep their drinking water as clean as possible. They want water right with them when they eat. Ducks can swim in a few weeks if you care and watch them, allowing them to be in water only a few minutes. Do not let ducks sleep in a muddy or damp pen.

To a considerable extent, on the rain, and his condition depends the quality, condition and vitality of the young. Everything possible should be done to maintain his thrift at the highest point, especially during the breeding season.

Watering the Garden.

Remember that a good soaking once a week is more beneficial than light sprinkling daily. Be judicious in your use of the hose. Leafy vegetables do not mind having their tops soaked, as well as the roots. But fruit bearing plants and vines, like tomatoes, eggplant, cucumbers, peppers and melons should not have the tops soaked at all. It washes away the pollen in the blossoms and is apt to cause blight and fungous diseases.

Don't water the garden in the heat of the day. Wait until late in the afternoon and when it has been given a good soaking it will have time to soak into the soil to enable you to rake up the surface easily next morning, preventing the soil baking and conserving the moisture. Regular soakings for the everbearing strawberries and other small fruits, followed by mulching, will prolong the fruit bearing season and improve the quality. Too much watering of grapevines tends to cause an excess of cane growth but a reasonable amount is desirable.

There might be an excuse for using an inferior sow if you already have her on the place, but we can not think of one single excuse for ever using an inferior sire.

Until breeders mate animals whose factors determining producing ability are known to be for high production only, they are going to get many low and medium producers from parents that are from high producing ancestry.

Toronto Mother Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto, Ontario.—"I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a splendid medicine to take before and after confinement. A small book was put in my door one day advertising Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines, and as I did not feel at all well at the time I went and got a bottle of Vegetable Compound right away. I soon began to notice a difference in my general health. I was full of aches and pains at the time and after taking it had every complaint going, but I can truthfully say your medicine certainly did me good. I can and will speak highly of it, and I know it will do other young women who are sick and ailing if they will only give it a fair trial. Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills are a splendid for constipation. You are welcome to use my letter if you think it will help any one."—Mrs. HARRY WESTWOOD, 543 Quebec Street, Toronto, Ontario.

The expectant mother is wise if she considers carefully this statement of Mrs. Westwood. It is but one of a great many, all telling the same story—beneficial results.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for use during this period. The experience of other women who have found this medicine a blessing is proof of its great merit. Why not try it now yourself? C

Evendale was wrapping the countryside in a mantle of peaceful desolation.

The hay stood on the bridge, and the rain fell upon the grass in vain. It was a beautiful thing to behold. Beyond the brow of the hill a dull red glow suffused the sky.

"Ah, little man," remarked the stranger, who was rather nearsighted, "it does my heart good to see you appreciate the beautiful effects!"

"Ah, sir," replied the lad. "I've been watching it for ten minutes."

"Then you are a nature lover, without doubt!" entreated the stranger. "And do you watch the sunsets often, my little boy?"

"Sunset? Why, that's the village school burning down!"

ANIMAL TEMPERATURES

Interesting Figures Relating to Farm Live Stock

Horses Are Relatively Cold-blooded —Poultry Have Highest Temperature—High Temperatures Indicate Fever—Wintering Bees — Select Sires to Give Balance.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The temperatures of domestic animals are of interest, in that each class has a normal temperature range of its own.

Horses.

The horse in health will have a temperature not lower than 99.5°, or higher than 101.3°. There are exceptions, of course, to all rules, and a few animals may be normal at higher or lower temperatures than those given.

Cattle.

The normal temperature range for cattle is 100.4° to 102.1°, which covers the case pretty well. When a bovine animal's temperature goes above 102.1° it can be considered above normal, and that there is some disturbance within.

Sheep and Swine.

Sheep to be considered normal give a temperature reading between 102.2° to 104.5°. The pig's normal temperature can be looked for between 100.4° and 104°. Some individuals run high and others low, but all are steady within two degrees during period of health.

Poultry.

Poultry have very high normal temperatures, 106.7° to 108.5°. Such temperatures as enjoyed by poultry in health could not be endured by any other of our domestic animals for more than a few days.

High Temperatures Indicate Fever.

Any deviation from the normal temperature is taken as a source of information regarding the state of health of our domestic animals. High temperatures indicate feverish condition, while sub-normal temperatures indicate decline and weakness of the individual to a point of grave danger. Exercise raises the temperature, and rest lowers it, hence we get higher readings in the evening than in the morning.—L. Stevenson, Dept. of Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

WINTERING BEES.

Every Colony Should Have a Queen —Have Enough Bees—Keep In a Naturally Protected Place.

Every spring beekeepers find from 5% to 50% of their colonies have died during the winter, or are very weak. There is no reason why the winter loss should be higher than 2% or 3%, provided the beekeeper will prepare and pack the bees properly. So says Prof. Eric Millen of the Ontario Agricultural College.

Every Colony Should Have a Queen.

The first step is to make sure every colony has a queen. As it is too late to requeen now, queenless colonies should be united with those having a queen. Place a sheet of newspaper on top of a strong queen right colony, and place the broodchamber of the queenless colony on top. Leave them for a week, and then shake the bees into the lower brood-chamber and remove the upper broodchamber. It is taken for granted that no American foulbrood exists in the apiary. Otherwise, colonies should not be united, but rather destroy the queenless colonies and combs, if diseased.

Have Sufficient Bees.

The next step is to see that each colony has sufficient bees to cover at least three frames on both sides, if examined on a cold morning when the bees are clustered. This will insure enough bees to come through the winter, provided the stores and protection are adequate. A very important factor of wintering is the question of food. Many beekeepers give every colony ten or fifteen pounds of sugar syrup made in the proportion of 2½ of sugar to one of water, and fed in an inverted feeder over the brood frames. This is done in many cases regardless of the amount of stores the colony has. Every colony should have at least 45 pounds of food to ensure successful wintering, and an opportunity to increase in strength in the spring.

Keep In a Naturally Protected Place.

Bees should be kept in a naturally protected place for winter, or a board fence should be erected around the apiary to form a wind protection. Colonies may be packed singly, two in a case, four in a case, or in any other way desired by the beekeeper. Three or four inches of packing should be placed all around the colony, and not less than eight inches on top. Dry leaves, planer shavings or cork chips make satisfactory packing material. If the beekeeper will see that his colonies are put away for winter in good condition, the winter loss will be negligible.

Select Sires to Give Balance.

If the dairy herd is made up of low testers and poor producers, a bull from good producing and high testing ancestry should be chosen. If the females are too leggy, select a male that is compact and close to the ground. If the sow is rough in the shoulder and short in the side, select a boar with compact, well-muscled shoulder and with length and scale.

The foundation of any enduring structure, whether of a business, a farm, or a life, is thrift.

Rebuilding is not always necessary to make many farm home attractive. Paint and shrubbery plantings with work wonders.

There is a story told of a Scotsman going to work in one of the towns of the County of Yorkshire. He had considerable difficulty in understanding the Yorkshire dialect. As time went on he became quite familiar with it. Six months later his wife came down from Scotland to see him and she said, "How queer folk do talk."

"Oh," he said, "they talk all right now. You should have heard them six months since."

One Bottle of Carnol relieved his weakness

Three bottles of Carnol restored him to perfect health

Don't let yourself get run down. When you do, your system is weakened and you are likely to take anything that is going. If you feel wintering, and an opportunity to increase in strength in the spring. tired, weak, nervous, watch yourself. These are the warnings to you that something serious may follow. Put a stop to this at once by taking Carnol. It can boast of no failures now. I cannot express or find words to praise Carnol for all the good it has done for me. I have proof of what it can do and advise all suffering under such conditions to give Carnol the first trial. A trial will convince you and its continued use will bring permanent relief. It will bring back to you the lost health you once enjoyed".—J. E. Collins, 130 Richmond Street, Sydney, N.S. 2-24

N. C. I. Track Team Goes to Picton.

The Napanee Collegiate Institute Track Team goes to Picton this (Friday) afternoon to compete with Picton in the annual inter-school contest between these institutions. This contest is composed of eight events, of which four were held last Friday at Napanee Field Day. The score for these resulted in a tie, with each school winning 16 points. The four events to be contested at Picton are 100-Yards Dash, Half-mile, Running High Jump and Pole Vault. During this week the school has held extra classes each day, so that Friday afternoon could be taken as a holiday without any loss of time to the scholars. But, unfortunately, there is a lack of means of transportation for the team and also its supporters. If any of the citizens of Napanee could assist in any way in enabling the Track Team or its supporters to reach Picton, would they please communicate at once by telephone with Mr. J. M. Simpson, who is in charge of the arrangements.

BAY OF QUINTE CLERICAL UNION

The Autumn meeting of the Bay of Quinte Clerical Union was held in St. Mark's Parish, Deseronto, on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 14th and 15th.

After the usual business of the meeting, a paper entitled "Fundamentalism and Modernism", was read by the Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, who gave a scholarly presentation of these opposing factors in the world of religious thought.

The preacher at Evensong was the Rev. Dr. Mercer, of Trinity College, Toronto. The sermon was especially designed to strengthen and re-assure all those who were in doubt as to the fundamentals of the Faith, and was greatly appreciated by all present.

A practical and timely paper was read by the Rev. A. H. Creeggan, on "Church Organization", showing how the Church, which is the Body of Christ, functions in its several departments.

The last paper was on "Parish Problems", by the Rev. C. E. Clarke, who was able to throw much light on this absorbing topic.

Many were the expressions of appreciation at the kindness and hospitality of the good people of Deseronto by those who had gathered together for the meetings.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA

Winter Haven, Fla.,
Oct. 18th, 1924.

Editor Napanee Beaver,
Napanee, Ont.

Dear Mr. Editor,—It is some three years ago I wrote you my last letter wherein were many good things about Florida, its lovely and wonderful climate. As good as everything looked to me then, it was only the breaking of dawn for a more perfect future. There is hardly any possibility of a real conception of the advancement that is going on continually in this wonderful State. Towns and cities are growing faster than in any other part of the world, business is expanding in every direction, and the population almost doubling up from year to year. The influx of Northern people during the winter season is taxing the permanent residents to their utmost ability to house and cater to them. And still they come, gradually finding out that the summers are as enjoyable as the winters, consequently we are getting a double tourist season. How long will it be until Florida will be populated to its utmost capacity? I predict that in ten years there will be ten million permanent residents here. The world is just beginning to know what a paradise it will be when well developed.

Six years ago when I first came here and wrote you, this town had more than fifteen hundred of a population, while at present there are over eight thousand, and still bounding along at a terrific rate. Within the next three months we will have to go through trunk lines of railroads from the extreme south passing through this town on their way to New York.

The A. C. L. starting from West Palm Beach on the Atlantic Coast, and the Seaboard Air Line, from Fort Myers on the Gulf Coast. We are getting some fine hotel accommodations, the best of which, The Haven, is a million dollar structure of one hundred and fifty rooms; fire proof with every known convenience for the comfort and pleasure of its guests. This particular section is universally admitted to be the most beautiful part of Florida, and the largest producer of citrus fruits in the State. But, while this industry is vast, there is every indication and evidence of there being two gigantic rivals, viz., the growing of bananas and grapes, both of which will in time, be very much in evidence. But no matter what be, any State income or inheritance tax. Anyone who is energetic and at all industrious, can and do make money here.

I think, Mr. Editor, in your own interest and welfare, as well as of your subscribers, you would be wise to come down this winter and spend a while with me, and let me show you some tangible proof of what I am writing you. Get a personal vision of facts and conditions on this, the greatest of all countries.

Sincerely yours,
W. R. MEMBERY.

DENBIGH

LATE F. F. MILLER

Mr. F. F. Miller, one of Napanee's prominent citizens, passed away on Saturday evening, very suddenly, after a partial recovery from an attack of typhoid fever. The immediate cause of death was nephritis. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon, at St. Mary Magdalene's Church, the very large congregation present testifying to the esteem in which the deceased had been held. The service was conducted by Rev. Rural Dean Coleman, M.A., assisted by Rev. W. E. Kidd, M.A., M.C., and Rev. R. W. Spencer. The Bishop of Ontario also took part in the service, and paid an eloquent tribute both to Mr. Miller's personal character and to the valuable services rendered by him to the Church. The interment took place at Riverside cemetery, where the Masonic burial service was conducted. The honorary pall-bearers were W. A. Daly, John W. Robinson, T. B. Wallace, Herbert Daly, W. A. Grange and F. S. Boyes.

Frederick Fraser Miller, B.A., P.S.C., and C.E., was born in Napanee in 1861, the son of the late William Miller. He qualified himself for the profession of Civil Engineer, winning the Princess Louise and Marquis of Lorne gold medal at McGill University. He practiced his profession for many years in Canada and the United States. He was qualified also as Ontario Land Surveyor and Dominion Land Surveyor, and was a member of the Engineering Institute of Canada. But his interests were wide and varied. Much time and attention were freely devoted by him to the work of his Church, and he was a valued and useful member of the Camera Club for many years he had represented St. Mary Magdalene's Church in the Ontario Diocesan Synod, and he had also frequently sat in the Provincial and General Synods. At the time of his death he was a member of the Executive Committee of the Diocese of Ontario, and the General Board of Missions, and the Council for Social Service of the Church of England in Canada. He was married in 1880 to Miss Mary Sophia Bertha Smith, of Napanee, and their home on Dundas Street, has been a centre for activities for many good causes.

He is survived by Mrs. Miller, who is recovering from a recent illness, and by four children, Captain W. Miles Miller, M.C., Royal Signals; Dana H. Gordon, and Fred Arthur. Mrs. W. C. Smith is a sister, and another sister, Mrs. Dibb, widow of the late Colonel Dean Dibb, died a few years ago.

STRATHCONA

Hello, folks! Here we are again. Strathcona is still on the map, although it is some time ago since it was on Tee Napanee Bower. Sure, it is getting more like a city every day.

The new smoke-stack, which is being built for the paper mill, is well under way. In the past the women had to figure just when to hang out their clothes to avoid having them blackened by the cinders from the mill. But when the wind blew from the north, the women of the north put the clothes out and washed on the line. This worked splendidly, but when the smoke comes rolling out of both stacks, some of the women are getting confused. However, time will tell.

A new bridge being constructed over the Napanee river at this place. Automobiles find great difficulty in getting through the river, and the traffic is greatly lessened on this account. At night this spot is very dangerous, not only to those travelling in vehicles, but also to those walking. Several people dropped off the foot-bridge into the water; others have frozen fingy and fell flat on the planks, while still others have tripped between the planks. It will be a great convenience when completed, and if such a thing should occur, the question has been asked, "Who would be to blame?" Then, if you are not wet, won't be able to lay the blame on the Prohibitionists for that anyway.

Election day went off quietly with just a good number came out to vote.

Mrs. Arnville Stafford, who has spent the summer with her brother, Mr. Ed. Reynolds, returned to her home in Smiths Falls, on Tuesday.

Mrs. McGarvey, who has been working in the mill here, had the misfortune of having his little finger caught and crushed in the calendors on Tuesday. He was taken to Napanee where it was found necessary to amputate the finger.

Mr. Harold Hoare spent Sunday evening with Mr. Stanley Hines.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Wartman took tea with Mr. and Mrs. B. Finlay, on Monday.

Mr. Ed. Tompkins was in Napanee on Monday.

Mrs. E. Hanes has been visiting friends in Newburgh this week.

Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams returned missionary from Japan, gave an illustrated lecture in the church on Tuesday evening. The meeting did not start until late on account of "coming to Canada we couldn't get across" as Mr. McWilliams expressed it. Those who saw the views thought them extra good, and only wished that the hour had not been so late, that they could have seen the whole set.

Rev. R. Merrick, of Morvell, occupied the pulpit on Sunday, and preached a powerful and inspiring sermon.

Miss Blue is visiting with her sister, Mrs. Fred MacDonald.

Sunday School as usual next Sunday at 2 p.m.

TOWN COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the Council was held in the Council Chamber on Monday night.

The members present were Reeve Graham, Councillors Burgess, Dunbar, Huffman, Jewell, Paul and Simpson.

His Worship Mayor MacGregor presided.

A communication was received from the Private Secretary to the Prince of Wales, as follows :

Government House,
Ottawa.
17th October, 1924.

Sir,—

I am directed by the Prince of Wales to ask you to convey to the citizens of Napanee and the school children his sincere appreciation of their welcome yesterday, and his regret that it was not possible for him to halt at Napanee.

Yours faithfully,
A. LASCELLES,
Asst. Private Secty.

A. MacGregor, Esq.,
Mayor of Napanee.

From the Standard Paving Co., notifying the Council that the repairs to that part of the pavement on Dundas St. will be made this fall if the weather is favorable.

From the Board of Education, requesting the Council to appoint two representatives on an advisory committee to look into the matter of the inadequate accommodation at the Collegiate Institute, and make recommendations as to the best method of overcoming the situation. This will be a joint committee of members of the School Board, Town Council and Chamber of Commerce.

Reeve Graham and Coun. Jewell were appointed to represent the Council.

Chief Barrett was granted two weeks' leave of absence, commencing Nov. 3rd.

On the application of those interested in Maxwell McDonald, for a remission of the fine of $200.00 imposed on him for violation of the O. T. A., the Council decided to take no action. McDonald is now in Rockwood Hospital.

Dr. Lewis, Eyesight Specialist, appeared before the Board and protested against being taxed $100.00, under the Transient Traders' By-law. He did not complain about the tax itself so much, but the fact that others in his profession visit Napanee from other towns, carry on business here for a day, and then depart, and are not taxed. Referred to Finance Committee to investigate and report.

A petition was presented, signed by a number of ratepayers, asking that Thomas Corey, a former resident, be allowed to transact business in Napanee without the imposition of the "transient traders' tax, or if taxed that he be allowed to pay the same in monthly instalments of $10.00. No action was taken.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee reported, recommending the purchase of coats, hats and boots for the Fire Department. Also that Will Schuyer receive $75.00 instead of $50.00 per year, for the use of his horse by the brigade.

The Clerk was instructed to communicate with the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, in regard to sending a patient to that institution from Napanee for treatment.

The Finance Committee reported as follows :

We, your Finance Committee, have considered the 1922 assessment of the Royal Hotel, Paisley House and Campbell House, and recommend that the following refunds be made on the 1924 Collector's Roll, viz.,

Royal Hotel	$ 65.00
Paisley House	150.00
Campbell House	90.09

MAP MADE OF JEWELS.

Czar, In 1900, Presented Famous Map to France.

During the Paris Exposition of 1900 the then Czar of Russia presented to the French nation the "jewelled map" of France. It is not only priceless, but unique, because many of the precious stones employed to make it are found in Russia alone, and every one found in those days was the property of the Imperial treasury.

The map, which is now in the Louvre, Paris, is forty inches square. The waters of the oceans are represented by a whitish-grey marble. The groundwork of the general design is jasper. Portions of neighboring countries are uniformly shown in slate-colored jasper; but the various departments of France, eighty-seven in all at that day, are done in many colors and gradations of color from pure white to deepest red.

It must not be supposed that the pieces of jasper that represent the departments have been shaped "anyhow." They follow faithfully the outlines laid down in official maps of the country. So cunning is the workmanship that no joints show at the boundaries, and the eighty-seven pieces have been fitted together with artistic regard to the effect produced by the contrasting and blending colors.

The rivers of France are numerous and long. In this map they are duplicated by threads of platinum that, sunk in the polished jasper, shine like silver. But to most visitors the chief attraction of the map is the hundred and six precious stones that mark the cities and towns—those places being indicated also by their names embossed in letters of solid gold.

Naturally, the eye travels to Paris, and there it stops, captivated by the sight of a magnificent ruby that must be worth a small fortune. It is probably the finest and most valuable stone in the whole map.

Away north is Lille, a trifle smaller in size than the ruby—not a diamond as it appears, but a phenacite, a variety of rock crystal that is very rare. Bordeaux is another large gem that all would mistake for a diamond. It is a very fine aquamarine.

Havre is a splendid emerald, although not so fine as the one-carat emerald that marks Marseilles. Nantes sparkles like a tiny pool of champagne, a particularly handsome beryl. Rouen is a sapphire, Lyons a tourmaline, Nice a garnet, and Chebourg an alexandrite, a stone which, although it looks green by daylight, is seen by artificial light as a mixture of red and blue.

Of the other towns, thirty-eight are shown in diamonds, quartz crystals and the like; thirty-five are tourmalines, and twenty-one are amethysts. The known value of these gems does not help one to estimate the cost of the map, for the finest stones are not in the jewel market. Replacing them with purchasable gems of corresponding size—diamonds, rubies, sapphires and the like—one might be able to duplicate the map for half a million dollars.

SPRING-CLEANING A LINER.

Fortunes Spent on Paint and Polish.

A big passenger ship gets a spring-clean every time she arrives in her home port. The first thing that happens is that all the linen is bundled ashore to be washed in the company's own laundry. At the White Star laundry in Southampton the total of a ship's linen washed in a year runs to six and a half million pieces.

The ships themselves are carefully cleansed. Every carpet is taken up; every floor is scrubbed, and all fittings are aired or sterilized. For the washing and scrubbing of a ship such as the Olympic, there is required in the course of a year nearly 20,000 gallons of liquid soap, 70,000 pounds of soft soap, 23,000 pounds of soap powder, and 10,000 pounds of soda.

All the paint work is gone over, and all the brass is cleaned. For keeping the brass of this one ship clean more than 5,000 pounds of polishing paste is needed in each twelve months.

Once a year the giant ship is laid up for a couple of weeks for the big spring-clean, and as a rule about four hundred men are put to work on the painting alone.

During the big annual clean the furnaces are overhauled. In one of the largest modern liners there may be as many as one hundred and fifty of these. (The Aquitania has actually one hundred and sixty-eight.)

Many of the cabins are re-floored; all upholstery is renewed, and it requires a small army of joiners, upholsterers, cabinet makers, and carpet layers to do the job in the required time. From kiel to funnel top the ship is made like new, and the cost is equal to that of building and equipping an ordinary tramp steamer.

When Speed Was Barred.

In Colonial days Boston rivalled in regard for the Sabbath even the early Scottish Christians. In 1737 the Boston city fathers declared that owing to "great danger arising oft-times from coaches, slays, chaises, and other carriages, on the Lord's day's as people are going to or coming from the several churches in this town, being driven with great rapidity, and the public worship being oftentimes much disturbed by such carriages, it is therefore voted and ordered, that no coach, slay, chair, chaise or other carriage, shall at such times be driven at a greater rate than a foot pace, on penalty to the master of the slave or servant so driving, of the sum of ten shillings."

Funny.

First Man (to entire stranger): "Surely I've met you before."

Second Man: "When?"

"Didn't we meet in Quebec?"

"Never been there."

"Funny, neither have I. Must have been two other men."

EARLY ONTARIO METHODISTS

An interesting document which has been unearthed by W. C. Mikel, K.C., of Belleville, in gathering material for his U. E. L. "Book of Remembrance", soon to be published, is a list of subscribers to the old Methodist Church built at Adolphstown in 1792 by the United Empire Loyalists, and which is still standing. It is unfortunate that the names of most of the 200 persons who laid the foundations of the Dominion are lost. The effort of Mr. Mikel to rescue from oblivion as many as possible of their names and the names of their descendants is commendable, and should receive the assistance of every citizen. The following is a copy of :

Adolphstown, February 3rd, 1792.

Subscription heading and list of subscribers to the building of the House on Paul Huff's lot 18, Con. 3, Fourth Town.

Dear Friends and Brethen—As Almighty God has been pleased to visit us in this wilderness land with the Light of a preached Gospel, we think it requisite to build a Meeting House or Church for the more convenient assembling of ourselves together for social worship before the Lord.

We do agree to build said Church under the direction of William Loaee, Methodist preacher, our brother who has labored with us this twelve months past, by following the directions of the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, or in his absence under the direction of any assistant preacher belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church of Great Britain or America sent from there by proper authority (such as the Bishop) to labour among us. We do further agree that no other denomination or society of people shall have any privilege or liberty to preach or teach in the said Methodist Church without the consent or leave of the assistant Methodist preacher then labouring with us. We do further agree to build said Church thirty-six feet by thirty feet, two stories high with a gallery in the upper story, said house to be built on the north west corner of Paul Huff's lot of land, No. 18, third concession, Fourth Town.

We, the subscribers, do promise to pay or cause to be paid to the above uses towards the building of the said Church, as it is wanted, the sum(s) of money annexed to our names underneath, where we have hereunto set our hands and seals the day above written.

Sunlight—for your Washing Machine

A WASHING machine is made to wash your clothes without rubbing or boiling — and it succeeds just in proportion to the value of the soap you use.

Sunlight Soap dissolves quickly and completely in hot water and works up into an abundant suds. This is very necessary so that its rich cleansing ingredients may search through and through the meshes of the clothes and dissolve the dirt and soil spots. Then, when rinsing comes, all dirt and soapy matter runs entirely away, leaving your clothes sweet, fresh and snowy clean.

Pare half a cake of Sunlight into hot water in your machine and stir into generous suds. Put in the clothes and operate the machine—your clothes will be clean.

The pure luther of Sunlight Soap cleanses the clothes naturally, not chemically. The $5,000 Guarantee of Purity is stamped on every tablet of Sunlight Soap.

Personality in Print

PEOPLE prefer to buy known goods from merchants whom they know. Advertising puts you acquainted with the buying public.

This "personality in print" is the great-est builder of confidence there is. It teaches the whole community to——Believe in you and your goods.

—To think they have a need for your goods.
—And to buy at your store.

Moreover, people expect to be asked to shop at your store. A message in the Napanee Beaver carries conviction right into the home. Let us show you the proof.

MINUTES OF LENNOX TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

The Fifty-first annual meeting of the Lennox Teachers' Institute was held in West Ward Public School, Oct. 9th and 10th, 1924.

The President, Mr. W. J. Trenouth, called upon Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.A., B.D., Napanee, to conduct the opening exercises. Rev. Mr. Wilson read I. Corinthians, twelfth chapter, and offered prayer. He then expressed his appreciation of the teachers' work, and reminded them that a deep responsibility rested upon leaders as they were workers together for the development of character, and of peace and prosperity. Mr. Wilson enlisted the teachers' co-operation in working for the O. T. A., not only because of its beneficial results upon children, but because its defeat would be a deep calamity, while its enforcement would help to make life worth living.

Later in the day, Miss Laura Rockwell presented to the teachers for their consideration, the following resolution, which was passed almost unanimously:—

"We, the teachers of Lennox County, in Convention assembled, wish to place ourselves on record as being in perfect accord with the O. T. A., and we most earnestly desire its continuance, as children come to school more regularly, are better clothed, and much better nourished now than formerly."

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

Communications from Mr. Chas. G. French re fee to O. E. A., and the French River's Water Competition, were received filed.

The Treasurer's Report was read, and found correct by the Auditors, Miss L. E. Boswell and Miss E. Anderson.

The following committee was appointed to consider resolutions to the O. E. A. and to Executive :—Miss M. Allen, Miss A. Akenhead, Misses Bath, Cram and Hawley.

The minute of the Nominating Committee was: Inspector Corkill, Miss Allen, Mr. Reid, Misses Affleck and Hawley, Mrs. Fairbairn.

The reports to the O. E. A. gave very full and comprehensive information.

Miss Blanche Hawley outlined her work in the Primary Department, and read several addresses given during the year. The Primer, Primary Reading, Arithmetic and Supplementary Reading in Primary grades; Writing, Spelling, and Mental Development. In the addresses Miss Hawley read the Hon. Dr. Eric Clark, of Toronto, showed how many of these unmanageable children are really suffering from a disease that renders them absolutely irresponsible, but how they are relieved and helped by special training in auxiliary classes.

Miss J. M. Denner outlined speeches given by such well-known men as Hon. L. A. Tacherean, Prime Minister of Quebec; Mr. Crawford, Technical Administrator for the Dominion; Mr. Kerr, President of the General Association, and Mr. Chas. G. Fraser, Secretary of the O. T. A. Hon. Mr. Tacherean desired a closer relation between his province and Ontario. He thought that a better understanding would exist between the provinces if each would respect the language and customs of the other. Mr. Chas. G. Fraser, in his address on "An Ideal Provincial System," gave some good points which would be a help to Secretaries.

Mr. Corkill, B.A., I.P.S., complimented the delegates on their explanative reports and said that when Miss Hawley mentioned Religious exercises, he was reminded of a school he once visited, where the pupils rushed out at 4 p.m., without any closing exercises, and he remembered saying mentally :

"Few and short were the prayers we read,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow."

The President's address was on Education. Mr. Trenouth defined education as the act of developing and cultivating the various physical, intellectual and moral faculties. He showed the importance of an education as illustrated by the difference between England and Turkey, and in the industrial condition in Italy to-day. Helen Keller is a good example of what education can do for the intellectual. The speaker showed the importance of an all round education and what such a path is expected from the schools of to-day. We have need of noticing whenever we enter a school, child's mental, moral, physical or mental training to be exercised. We have need of noticing the character of different ways in which teachers could train the three factors, as pleasing, harsh, fair, partial, lifeless, dull, games and physical drill. "An all-round education necessary" concluded the address and ended—

Then reach the pole,
Or grasp creation in my span,
I'll still be measured by my soul;
The mind's the stature of the man."

Thursday afternoon, Mr. A. MacGregor, Mayor of Napanee, cordially welcomed the teachers on behalf of the Town Council and the people of Napanee. He expressed his pleasure at meeting the teachers of Lennox, showed the importance of their work in the school, and in the community as leaders, and hoped they would unanimously and emphatically endorse the continuance of the O. T. A. to the children of their schools and of Ontario.

Mr. MacGregor expressed the hope that their deliberations would be both pleasant and profitable, and that the teachers could enjoy their sojourn in the town.

On behalf of the teachers, Mr. Trenouth thanked the Mayor for his presence and good wishes.

The afternoon session was enlivened by a musical selection, "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses", played by Miss Doris Anderson and Masters Billie Templeton and Gordon MacGregor. They very kindly responded to an encore, after which Miss Doris danced the Highland Fling, accompanied on the guitar by Master Gordon MacGregor.

Moved by Miss Mitchell, seconded by Miss Dennee, that a fee of five dollars be sent to the O. E. A. Carried.

Mr. Trenouth was appointed to take up subscriptions re "The Schools".

Mr. Corkill, in the Inspector's address, expressed his pleasure at the large attendance, due partly to the fine weather, and warmly welcomed the new teachers to his eighth Convention.

He asked the teachers to fill out two attendance report blanks, one for the attendance officer and one for himself. Mr. Corkill does not approve of doing away with homework as it links up home and school. He discussed Supplementary Readers, the New Course of Study and Grants to Libraries. He showed a copy of a book called "Country Life Reader", by O. J. Stevenson, Professor of Agricultural College, Guelph, Gen. J. McLeod, Publisher, Toronto. Price 60c. This he said would be helpful in Third Book classes.

The lecture on "Class-room Management" by Mr. Walker, Normal School, Peterboro', was very enjoyable throughout, and elicited warm expressions of appreciation from the Inspector and the teachers. Some helpful hints noted were :—

Have a time table; be on your job; be punctual.

Prepare every lesson, also seatwork.

Provide profitable work for every pupil every minute of the year; allow no loafing.

Examine all tasks.

As everything cannot be taught, select the things to be taught.

The typical thing is taught; details are studied out by the pupils.

Be observant of the comfort of the child.

Make him do the things he should. The eye is the best weapon in management. The personality of the teacher counts for much. Know thyself.

During the Trustees' Hour, Rev. R. H. P. Coleman, M.A., addressed the teachers. Taking as his text, Psalm 127, v 4, "As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth", Mr. Coleman explained the comparison, showing points of resemblance between children and arrows, and drawing many useful lessons therefrom.

Teachers should have the power of vision to see what children can become if the right kind of work is put upon them. Personality counts for much and there is need of force behind the arrow to give it power. Teachers need to keep in touch with the Divine, to seek guidance and strength for their professional duties; and a Resolve will follow as to true work is in vain. One reward always follows faithful work,—the satisfaction of having tried and made a contribution worth while to the world in which they have lived.

By a hearty clapping of the hands, the teachers expressed their thanks for Mr. Coleman's able address.

A reception was held for the teachers at Neely's Lounge, at the close of the Thursday afternoon session.

The evening entertainment was held in the Town Hall, at 8 p.m. The President, Mr. Trenouth, occupied the chair.

The musical part of the programme consisted of a violin solo by Mrs. C. Wilson; a vocal solo, by Miss F. Dwyer, and an instrumental by Miss May Hawley. All the artists kindly responded to encore.

The lecture, "The Making of Man", was given by Prof. Soumis Miller, Ph.D., Queen's University, Kingston.

Friday's work began at 9 o'clock, Mr. Lougland, Agricultural Office, Napanee, discussed Agriculture and School Fairs. He showed benefits to be derived and assured the teachers that all possible help would be given by the Napanee office.

"Art in Public Schools" was next dealt with by Miss Rockwell, who said the object of teaching art was not to produce an occasional artist, but to teach pupils to see beauty in common things. Several plans were outlined and methods explained. Miss Rockwell illustrated her way of conducting a picture study by a lesson on a picture of Sir Galahad.

Miss Rockwell thinks much help may be derived from The Normal Instructor and Primary Plans, F. A. Owen, Pub. Co., Dansville, N.Y.

Mr. Trenouth and Miss Dennee expressed their appreciation of Miss Rockwell's very helpful talk and lesson.

Mr. Walker's second lecture was on Arithmetic.

As a mark of appreciation of Mr. Walker's work, that gentleman was made an honorary member of Lennox Teachers' Institute.

The following resolutions were 'to be forwarded to the O. E. A. :

1. That the history course be shortened and that the present text books in history are not suitable.

2. That before any text books are changed, the teachers should be notified in time to express their opinion or make suggestions regarding new ones.

3. That the school register year be changed from September to June to correspond with the school year.

4. That no examination in Group 1 be held.

5. That the H. S. representative on the Entrance Board make the subjects which he actually teaches as far as possible.

6. That the Lennox Teachers' Association appreciate what the O. T. A. has done, and that it be continued in view of the improved condition of the pupils.

The committee also wished to ask the Executive to arrange to spend the two Convention days next year going to Ottawa.

The following officers were chosen for the ensuing year :

President—Mr. R. C. Earl, Bath.
Vice President—Miss R. Wilson, Camden East.

Members of the Executive—Mr. W. J. Trenouth, Napanee; Dr. G. W. Morden, N.C.I., Napanee; Mr. Forbes, N.H.S., Newburgh ; Miss M. Mitchell, Newburgh; Mrs. H. Fairbairn, Camden East; Miss A. I. Allen, Odessa; Miss Margaret Blair, Enterprise.

Delegates to O. E. A.—Miss Ila Alsen, Adolphustown; Miss M. Mackenzie, Collins Bay.

Secretary Treasurer—Etta Harrison.

Musical Committee — Misses B. Hawley, E. Anderson, R. Sheridan, and V. McLaughlin.

Miss Dennee was appointed as delegate to Northern trip if there is one next year.

The next Presidency, Mr. Earl, was called to the chair.

After Miss Mitchell's address on "Summer Activities", Mr. Corkill asked the teachers to write their opinion of the new course of study and send it to him.

Moved by Mr. Trenouth, and seconded, that a vote of thanks be tendered to Miss Doris Anderson and Masters Gordon MacGregor and Billie Templeton, for taking part in the programme; to all who took part in the evening entertainment, and to all who took any part in the programme, or in any way helped to make the Convention a success; to Mr. Neely's for the delightful entertainment at their Lounge, and to the Board of Education for the use of the Public School building. Carried.

The Secretary was instructed to pay all expenses of this Convention.

The President, Mr. Earl, congratulated Mr. Trenouth on the wonderful success of this meeting, which had been so very enjoyable as well as educative.

"After taking Two Bottles my wife made rapid progress back to health"

Carnol is one of the finest remedies ever discovered for nerve and the expectant mother. There is no time in a woman's life when it is so vitally necessary to safeguard her health. Not only should she protect her own health at a most trying period, but she must consider also the health of the unborn child. Read what Carnol did for Mrs. Perry.—"My wife, about two years ago, just before our baby was born, was suffering from anemia and indigestion. She could keep nothing on her stomach. We tried a great many so-called remedies phosphates and even beef, iron and wine tonics, but to no effect. One day I went into one of our local drug stores, Crawford's by name, and asked him to give me a reliable tonic for my wife. He handed me a bottle of Carnol, recommending it highly, and told me to give it a fair trial. After taking two bottles my wife made rapid progress back to health. The colour came back to her cheeks and her appetite was completely restored. We find Carnol almost invaluable for our baby. It serves as a useful medicine, especially at teething time, and we are never without a bottle in the house. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to recommend the merits of Carnol."—As a bodybuilder, nerve remedy and a wonderful restorative in all run down conditions, I don't think there is any medicine anywhere equal to Carnol."—Arthur I. Perry, 527-10th Street, Brandon, Manitoba. 5-24

"After taking Two Bottles my wife made rapid "pregress back to health"

Carnol is one of the finest remedies ever discovered for use by the expectant mother. There is no time in a woman's life when it is so vitally necessary to safeguard her health. Not only should she protect her own health at a most trying period, but she must consider also the health of the unborn child. Read what Carnol did for Mrs. Perry—"My wife, about two years ago, just before our baby was born, was suffering from anemia and indigestion. She could keep nothing on her stomach. We tried a great many so-called remedies phosphates and even iron, iron and wine tonics, but to no effect. One day I went into one of our local drug stores, Crawfords by name, and asked him to give me a reliable tonic for my wife. He handed me a bottle of Carnol, recommending it highly, and told me to give it a fair trial. After taking two bottles my wife made rapid pregress back to health." The colour came back to her cheeks and her appetite was completely restored. We find Carnol almost invaluable for our baby. It serves as a useful medicine, especially at teething time, and we are never without a bottle in the house. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to recommend the merits of Carnol." As a bodybuilder, nerve remedy and a wonderful restorative in all run down conditions, I don't think there is any medicine anywhere equal to Carnol."—Archer I. Perry, 527-10th Street, Brandon, Manitoba. 5-24

A., 1924", at the northwest corner. She was presented with a silver trowel by the Rev. Mr. Sharpe, and performed the simple ceremony. NAPANEE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The October meeting of the Napanee Women's Institute was held in the Agricultural Rooms on Tuesday, Oct. 14th, at 2.30 p.m. The usual order of procedure was observed and then came the paper on "Current Events", the magnitude of which is globe encircling. The political crisis, wars, rumors of war, the rise and fall of kings and leaders, activities of the sporting world, is all most interestingly woven into the history of the month.

The District President, Mrs. Haight and the District Secretary, Mrs. Young, were then introduced, and Mrs. Haight, who is a professional nurse, spoke very enthusiastically on the Temperance Campaign. She began by saying that the outcome of the present issue is a tremendous one. The O. T. A. may not be perfect, but it is the only law we have on temperance and temperance reform. If the law is not enforced it is not the fault of the law, but the one who should enforce it. Statistics show that it has kept thousands of Canadians out of gaol, which has meant the closing of many such institutions, therefore less expenditure; the saving of thousands of Canadians for home life and keeping them for useful occupations. Think of the hearts thus saved from misery and disgrace, the better homes, the better food, the better social life, the reduction of crime, the better citizens, the better business. Mrs. Haight spoke very feelingly of the misery and suffering, due directly or indirectly to alcohol, she had witnessed in her experience as a nurse. The effects of alcohol, no matter how procured, are the same when it enters the system. She spoke of the dozens of acute alcoholics brought into the hospital every week, their care and treatment. She attributed that 75% of the accidents were due directly to alcohol. The habitual drunkard receives greater harm than the one who gets drunk occasionally. The effects may be slow, but they are sure, and, when disease comes along, a system saturated with alcohol cannot throw off the disease. The organs are so weakened they cannot function, they have been impoverished. Lymph, that property of the blood which circulates where blood does not go—in the dense parts of bone, cartilage or tendon, minute parts of muscle or nerve, and in the white of the eye—is directly attacked by alcohol. Lymph works outside of the blood vessels, but it comes from the blood, carrying nutriment to flesh and bone by means of the white corpuscles, returning to the blood with waste and warnout tissue to be cast out of the system. When the lymph cannot do its work efficiently, how great must the system suffer. Insanity can often be traced to alcohol. Alcoholism in parents is often the cause of blindness and deformity in infants. In cases of surgical operations recovery is very slow if the victim is addicted to alcohol. Mrs. Haight implored all most sincerely to uphold the O.T.A., our security for home and country, for better health, better Canadians, for the sake of future generations, for the lessening of crime, insanity, and for better morals. We must have laws to benefit society. The Ten Commandments and the Laws of Moses are broken, and who does not call them good laws. Yet we hear no tremendous uproar to have them repealed. Kings must obey the laws of their countries, and even the sun, moon, and stars, which guide the heavens, have their courses mapped out through infinitude.

Mrs. Young spoke on "Home Management". The words "home" and "heaven" are from the same root word. What heaven is to the spiritual life, home, therefore, should be to the natural life. We cannot think of heaven without thinking of God, and God is love. So, in home management, nothing should surpass it in love. The home is the child's world and his heaven in his early life. In it he first learns to love and to obey. He learns the principles of truth and right. His mother's knee is his altar. He first learns of God and heaven. For the full development of character there must be free interchange of thought. High ideals should be maintained by every member of the home, in which each should be a factor in influencing for good in the minds and morals of those in the house. A child brought up under good environment has a far greater chance of being a good man or woman than the child brought up under reverse conditions. Home management requires much effort and self-denial, together with gifts and graces that not many possess. The home-maker must have time for study and thought in order to be able to discuss the questions of the day intelligently with their families, thereby gaining and holding their respect; thus the need of good books and papers. Books are said to be to the mind what blood is to the body, so how important it is that we have the best books. Flowers and music also have their influence for the best that is in us. Too close application to business crushes out much joy and opportunity for betterment, so is it worth while? We should learn to stop if we are to be the most efficient home-makers, for the success of a nation depends upon its homes. The home is the bulwark of a nation; a nation cannot rise to a higher level than its homes.

THE TABLE KNIFE.

Origin and Development Since the Stone Age.

The knife with which you cut your meat to-day is the result of a slow development from the rude knife of ages. The human race cannot long have existed before necessity prompted the use of a rude cutting instrument with which game might be killed and divided.

The knife was chipped out of flint or stone. Sometimes it was made from shell or the bones of animals or sharpened pieces of tough wood.

For ages the same implement served indiscriminately on the field of strife, in the chase and at table. Finally it took different shapes according to the use to which it was to be put.

When history opens, men are already using knives of copper. Some what later tin was added to the copper, and bronze instruments result ed. Bronze continued in favor until the time of Caesar, but iron had come into use a thousand years before. The steel of Damascus gradually took their places.

At the beginning of the Christian era table knives were still without fork. That they were used to a limited extent is indicated by the fact that ivory-handled knives were found in the Roman tombs, besides dishes of food. There are certain monuments depicting banquet scenes at which the guests were provided with knives, but ordinarily the food was cut before being placed upon the table. We learn from Clement of Alexandria that by the second half of the second century the use of knives at table had become common in the Roman empire.

But certain it is that until the 14th century the table knife did not appear in a class by itself. Up to that time the guests attending a dinner

A Popular Recreation

Billiards is a game the origin of which is lost in obscurity. By many it is thought to have been derived from the ancient game of bowls. When bowls could not be played out of doors because of the weather, a bowling green was set up indoors and as there was no fun in hurling the balls in such close quarters, they were struck with a mace, and later with a cue.

Many men believe that billiard was not an invention, but a growth while others maintain, most likely because of the name, that it was a French invention, and they contend that it was played by the Germans Dutch, Italians, and French long before it appeared in England.

But on this matter there is room for doubt. A number of literary references to the game may be found in Elizabethan days. Mary Queen of Scots was an enthusiastic billiard player, and Shakespeare seems to make some covert reference to this fact when in his "Antony and Cleopatra" he makes Cleopatra play at billiards. Ben Johnson uses the phrase "smooth as a billiard ball." Long after these men wrote Byron makes the "harmless game of billiards" rhyme with "billiards."

American pool was no doubt derived from a German game of billiards called "pyramid game," which was exceedingly popular in Vienna. It was played with twenty-one balls which were set close together in the form of a triangle near one end of the table. Early four-ball billiards was called in England "The American four-ball game." An old English writer says that it was played with two white and one red and one blue ball, and that "the game is 31 up and is scored by winning hazards and cannons."

Three-ball billiards was probably a French variation of the game called the "cannanbole game." One red and two white balls were used, and both cannons and hazards were counted. No doubt the cushion cannon gamet evolved from that form of billiards called the "bricole game."

In an old chronicle it is said of this game that "the player is obliged to strike a cushion and make the ball reverberate or rebound from it previous to hitting his adversary's ball. This is a great disadvantage, and is reckoned between equal players equivalent to about eight or nine points."

All billiard balls sent out by first-class makers are true when they start to market, but they do not as a rule remain so. The usage they ordinarily get is careless and indifferent. Sometimes a ball that is true in the beginning will become untrue even with the best treatment one can give it.

Change in temperature is an important factor, for the ivory may expand or contract more in one part than in another, and the ivory may be denser in one part of the ball than in an another, so that its sphericity is disturbed. Whe there is a difference in the specific gravity of ivory the makers aim to utilize that part of the ivory which is the heaviest at the centre of the ball. It is one of the nicest and most delicate operations in mechanics to turn out three balls all of which will be the same size, same weight, and at the same time shall be exact spheres and of the same degree of elasticity or resiliency.

In an old book, which was written when the game of billiards was young, it is said that great delicacy is required in the making of billiard balls, as the centre of the ball must be the centre of gravity, and this would not be unless a portion of the tooth from which it is made contained the common centre of the heavier part of the ivory. According to that old book, the mode of testing the sphericity of the ball was by means of a steel gauge, a hollow cone, or caliper-compasses.

It continues: "There are modes of testing its gravity besides propelling it in a straight line, such, for example, as dropping a marked ball through a transparent fluid, in descending through which, if perfectly true, it will retain its position, but the success of this experiment depends on very nice arrangement."

Instruments of precision of the most faultless nicety are now made, and a set of ivory balls that satisfy the tests for sphericity, weight and resiliency are reserved in perfection in workmanship and material. The matter of identical resiliency is important, because as resiliency differs so will the angle at which a ball will rebound or glance from other balls.

This is one of the reasons why great players of billiards own their billiard balls. They know when tuned balls will do. The balls must be true; the cushions must be true, and the table must be true.

Yorkshire Man on Top.

A Yorkshireman and an Aberdonian met at a house fair and adjourned to a nearby tavern. After several drinks the Aberdonian suggested that they should exchange ponies. The Yorkshireman demurred, but after more liquid refreshment decided to trade.

"You know, Bill," said the man from Aberdeen when the transaction was completed, "I am afraid I have got the best of the bargain."

"How's that?" queried his friend.

"Well, my pony's deid!"

"Is that so?" said the Yorkshireman. "Well, we's mine, and I've taken its shoes off."

A NEW LANGUAGE.

English Is Being Altered Here In America.

Can the new world develop a language of its own? Such a question is often asked in seriousness by a often asked in seriousness by a chance or, perhaps, regular readers of comic supplements having their origin across the border. In an effort to reach the youngest readers the language is often reduced to the simplest idioms, and spelled to suit the ear rather than the springs of much lure are hidden the imagination that flows through the imagination of American writers to-day. Into this stream have merged the tributaries, hardly conspicuous, from the sources of continental literature.

John Waldo, in 1812, said: "The new circumstances under which we are placed call for new words, new phrases for the transfer of old words to new pages. An American dialect will, therefore be produced." Such a hope, expressed in the early years of the republic, has scarcely been realized. One factor has been the vast improvement in communication across the ocean, a change scarcely in vision a century ago. Communication by travel is supplemented by the enormous growth in cable service, bringing the English-speaking world into a closer bond than the founders of the republic xpected.

Novelists like W. D. Howells have done much to spread the use of idioms, and it is done in a much less dignified manner by a section of the modern school of humorists. We have such colloquialisms as "havun" for "have them"; "haitn" for "have to"; and "gonna" for "going to"; and among more precarious speakers and writers there are many Americanisms, which, because of their vividness, have spread into general use. These include expressions such as "rubberneck," "rough house," "water wagon," "near silk," "nasbeen," "lame duck," "bell hop" and "chair warmer." In addition, of course, the language of this continent has been broadened and enriched from other countries and languages, by such expressions as "prairie," "bayou" and "portage" from French Canada; "shillelah," "colleen," "spalpeen" and "potcen" of Irish origin, and "sun street" and "yes-indeedy," probably from the same source.

Where Women Mustn't Whistle.

Numbers of things are taboo among the fisher folk of Cornwall, England. No woman is allowed to whistle or sailors will surely follow.

Taking a pasty to sea is another invitation to disaster, while bread must be carried on board either in slices or as a whole loaf. A half-loaf of bread in a fishing boat signifies that only half the usual catch of fish will be taken.

Animals are regarded with particular disfavor, and dogs and cats must not be mentioned when the nets are out.

Pilchards have been scarce in St. Ives Bay since the railway was built along its shores, and fishermen believe that the engine whistles frighten the fish away.

St. Ives peoples declare that fish are very "knowing." When dog-fish were doing damage to the nets some fishermen caught one, flogged it, and let it go again to tell its fellows what would happen if they did not clear out of the neighborhood.

Farming Fish Like Sheep.

Interesting new details regarding the age to which plaice live have been discovered recently. Owing to the increased demand for this fish, British trawlers are extending the field of their operations, and Iceland and the White Sea are being visited to find fresh supplies. In these regions the fishermen are finding large numbers of old, thin plaice.

Of every 10,000 fish caught, at least 2,000 are more than thirty years of age. The oldest was fifty-two.

In the North Sea the oldest was only thirty-eight, but this was a rarity, the plaice for the most part being under thirty.

The age of the plaice is told by the otoliths, or ear stones, and a scale of the full cover.

Plaice farming is being practiced on a large scale by the Danes, who are learning how many fish per acre can be put out to get the best results, just as the flockmaster farms his sheep.

Frogs for Bad Throats.

Even to-day many people have strange beliefs and superstitions. All sorts of quaint rites are carried out, particularly in connection with children.

Some mothers, for instance, believe in cutting their baby's hair at the waning of the moon. This ceremony dates back for thousands of years, in the days when people regarded it as a safeguard against evil.

Another silly superstition is that of giving children live frogs to suck. This is supposed to prevent and cure "thrush," or injury to the throat. Adults, there are still women who think that they will improve their children's health by eating raising and placing the stones on their baby's stomach.

Modern science is rapidly abolishing these old ideas, but they still hold their ground in certain places.

Iceland.

When Iceland was discovered and colonized, men made it fashionable to go there and settle, the name proved forbidding and promising of either a paradise or a hell. So when the larger island was found, it was named Greenland to make it more attractive to homeseekers.

Bagdad Is Primitive.

Crude simplicity marks the hotel and household conveniences in the ancient city of Bagdad in Persia. In that city of strange odors, the only European hostelry worthy of the name is the Hotel Maude. There are no baths in the Hotel Maude, but when one feels the need of bathing he has only to clap his hands whereupon a servant drops into the room a tin tub, large and round and shallow, which he fills with water. It warm bath is required the tin may be permitted to stand in the sun for a quarter of an hour, when the water becomes too hot to be without scalding.

A Popular Recreation

Billiards is a game the origin of which is lost in obscurity. By many it is thought to have been derived from the ancient game of bowls When bowls could not be played out of doors because of bad weather, a bowling green was set up indoors and as there was no fun in hurling the balls in such close quarters, they were struck with a mace, and later with a cue.

Many men believe that billiards was not an invention, but a growth while others maintain, most likely because of the name, that it was a French invention, and they contend that it was played by the Germans Dutch, Italians, and French long before it appeared in England.

But on this matter there is room for doubt. A number of literary references to the game may be found in Elizabethan days. Mary Queen of Scots was an enthusiastic billiard player, and Shakespeare seems to make some covert reference to this fact when in his "Antony and Cleopatra" he makes Cleopatra play at billiards. Ben Johnson uses the phrase "smooth as a billiard ball." Long after these men wrote Byron makes the "harmless game of billiards" rhyme with "millitards."

American pool was no doubt derived from a German game of billiards called "pyramid game," which was exceedingly popular in Vienna It was played with twenty-one balls which were set close together in the form of a triangle near one end of the table. Early four-ball billiards was called in England "The American four-ball game." An old English writer says that it was played with two white and one red and one blue ball, and that "the game is 21 up and is scored by winning hazards and cannons."

Three-ball billiards was probably a French variation of the game called the "cannabole game." One red and two white balls were used, and both cannons and hazards were counted. No doubt the cushion cannon game was descended from that form of billiards called the "brioule game."

In an old chronicle it is said of this game that "the player is obliged to strike a cushion and make the ball reverberate or recoil from it previous to hitting his adversary's ball. This is a great disadvantage and is reckoned between equal players equivalent to about eight or nine points."

All billiard balls sent out by first-class makers are true when they start to market, but they do not as a rule remain so. The usage they ordinarily get is careless and indifferent. Sometimes a ball that is true in the beginning will become untrue and with the best treatment one can give it.

Change in temperature is an important factor, for the ivory may expand or contract more in one part than in another, and the ivory may be denser in one part of the ball than in an another, so that its sphericality is disturbed. Whe there is a difference in the specific gravity of ivory the makers aim to utilize that part of the ivory which is the heaviest as the centre of the ball. It is one of the nicest and most delicate operations in mechanics to turn out three balls all of which will be the same size, same weight, and at the same time shall be exact adjoiners and of the same degree of elasticity or resiliency.

In an old book, which was written when the game of billiards was young, it is said that great delicacy is required in the making of billiard balls, as the centre of the ball must be the centre of gravity, and that would not be unless a portion of the tooth from which it is made contained the common centre of the heaviest part of the ivory. According to that old book, the mode of testing the sphericality of the ball was by means of a steel gauge, a hollow cone, or caliper-compasses.

It continues: "There are modes of testing its gravity besides propelling it in a straight line, such, for example, as dropping a marked ball through a transparent fluid, in descending through which, if perfectly true, it will remain in position, but the success of this experiment depends on very nice arrangement."

Instruments of precision of the most faultless nicety are now made, and a set of ivory balls that stand the tests for sphericality, weight and resiliency are marvels of perfection in workmanship and material. The matter of identical resiliency is important, because as resiliency differs so will the angle at which a ball will rebound or glance from other balls.

This is one of the reasons why great players of billiards own their billiard balls. They know what these balls will do. The balls must be true; the cushions must be true, and the table must be true.

A NEW LANGUAGE.

English Is Being Altered Here In America.

Can the new world develop a language of its own? Such a question is often asked in seriousness by chance or, perhaps, regular readers of comic supplements having their origin across the border. In an effort to reach the youngest readers the language is often reduced to the simplest idioms, and spelled to suit the most loose pronunciations. A great American newspaper once justified its "comics" because of the ability to reach and Americanize the great army of immigrants sweeping from Europe.

Only the other day the Boston Transcript spoke in a rather regretful way of the persistence of English poetry among American readers and said: "Back in English literature are hidden the springs of much that flows through the imagination of American writers to-day. Into this stream have merged the tributaries, hardly conspicuous, from the sources of continental literature."

John Waldo, in 1813, said: "The new circumstances under which we are placed call for new words, new phrases for the transfer of old words to new pages. An American dialect will, therefore be produced." Such a hope, expressed in the early years of the republic, has scarcely been realized. One factor has been the fast improvement in communication across the ocean, a change scarcely in vision a century ago. Communication by travel is supplemented by the enormous growth in cable service, bringing the English-speaking world into a closer bond than the idioms, and it is done in a much less dignified manner by a section of the modern school of humorists. We have such colloquialisms as "havum" for "have them"; "thats" for "have to"; and "gonna" for "going to"; but among more pretentious speakers and writers there are many Americanisms, which, because of their vividness, have spread into general use. These include expressions such as "rubberneck," "tough house," "water wagon," "near silk," "hasbeen," "lame duck," "bell hop" and "chair warmer." In addition, of course, the language of this country has been broadened and enriched from other countries and languages, such expressions as "prairie," "bateau" and "portage" from French Canada; "shillelah," "colleen," "spalpeen" and "gombeen," of Irish origin; and "no siree" and "go-lucky," probably from the same source.

Where Women Mustn't Whistle.

Numbers of things are taboo among he fisher folk of Cornwall, England. No woman is allowed to whistle or bad luck will surely follow.

Taking a pasty to sea is another institution to dispute, while bread must be carried on board either in slices or as a whole loaf. A half-loaf of bread in a fishing boat signifies that only half the usual catch of fish will be taken.

Animals are regarded with particular distavor, and dogs and cats must not be mentioned when the nets are out.

Pilchards have been scarce in St. Ives Bay since the railway was built along its shores, and fishermen believe that the noise whistles frighten the fish away.

St. Ives people declare that fish are very "knowing." When dog-fish were doing damage to the nets some fishermen caught one, flogged it, and set it go again to tell its fellows what would happen if they did not clear out of the neighborhood.

Farming Fish Like Sheep.

Interesting new details regarding the area to which plaice live have been discovered recently. Owing to the increased demand for this fish, British trawlers are extending the field of their operations, and feeding and the White Sea are being visited to find fresh supplies. In these regions the fishermen are finding large numbers of old, thin plaice.

Of every 10,000 fish caught, at least 2,000 are more than thirty years of age. The oldest was fifty-two.

In the North Sea the oldest was only thirty-eight, but this was a rarity, the place for the most part being well under thirty.

The age of the plaice is told by the otoliths, or ear stones, and by some of the gill cover.

Plaice farming is being practiced on a large scale by the Danes, who are learning how many fish per acre can be let out to get the best results, just as the flockmaster farms his sheep.

Frogs for Bad Throats.

Even to-day many people have strange beliefs and superstitions. All sorts of quaint rites are carried out, particularly in connection with children.

Some mothers, for instance, believe in cutting their baby's hair at the waxing of the moon. This ceremony dates back for thousands of years to the days when people regarded it as a safeguard against evil.

Another curious superstition is that of giving children live frogs to suck. This is supposed to prevent and cure "thrush," or injury to the throat. Again, there are still women who think that they will improve their children's health by eating raisins and placing the stones on the baby's stomach.

Modern science is rapidly abolishing these old ideas, but they still hold their ground in certain places.

Iceland.

When Iceland was discovered and efforts were made to induce people to go there and settle, the name proved forbidding and promising of climatic amenity. So when another larger island was found, it was named Greenland to make it more attractive to homeseekers.

MAPLE LEAF INSTITUTE

The August meeting of the Maple Leaf Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. B. Sharpe, Bath Road, on the last Thursday of the month. A large number of members and visitors were present. Opened by community singing, followed by ode and prayer. Miss Kellar, A.T.C.M., Bath, rendered a beautiful piano solo. The great topic of the day was then fully dealt with by Mesdames Smith and Miller, of Napanee, namely "Temperance", which surely should sink deep down in the hearts and minds of everyone present, which they explained in relation to our home town of Napanee, and our recent years. I am sure none of us want to see such conditions existing now, to tempt our boys and girls, that are coming up and will soon be stepping in and taking the places of many of us when we become older. Mrs. Miller, W. C. T. U., very clearly drew our attention to facts of other provinces which we are sure are very degrading in this present day and age. A few social remarks were then given by Mrs. Buck, on request of some more plans we were undertaking in our society.

A contest was put on of home-made candy. Many beautiful varieties were exhibited by the members, but our hostess, Mrs. Sharpe, carried off the prize in Patience candy, which she very kindly treated the gathering to.

Next, and best of all, came the roll call, answered by a humorous story, which was very laughable.

The meeting closed, the hostess served a beautiful lunch.

The September meeting of the Maple Leaf Institute was held the last Thursday, at the home of Mrs. Fraser Lampkins, Hanley. A good attendance of members were present, under the prevailing conditions of busy season, etc. A sing song was heartily enjoyed by all, followed by ode and prayer. A most instructive and educative programme was prepared by our worthy President, in which each member took a part, the Temperance movement. After this the roll call was responded to by some notable woman of the Bible. A demonstration was then given by our nurse member, Miss Hazel Cummings, R.N.H., of the cleaning of the sick bed. Sheets, pillow slips and towels were made for our room 17, Empire E. K. G. H.

The laws of Ontario pertaining to women and children are being read to our members each month. The marriage law was dealt with at this meeting. Lunch was then served by three members, namely Mesdames W. G. Ferris, J. Chambers and S. Fraser.

Next meeting roll call will be answered by the exhibit of some sample of a member's own handmade lace.

Address and Presentation.

On Friday evening, October 3rd, 1924, the friends and neighbors met to meet a very pleasant time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Loyst, before their leaving for their new home at Bath. After lunch was served Mrs. Gordon Young read the following address, and Mrs. P. Seeley presented the gift.

Mr. and Mrs. George Loyst:

Dear Friends,—It is a pleasure that we have met at your home to-night, but it brings to sadness when we think that you will no longer be our neighbours any longer. You have always made your home a welcome place to all, and whenever any acts of sympathy or help were needed you were ever willing to give it. Although your absence from our neighborhood will be greatly felt, still we are glad that you have decided to move to town, and we hope to still feel the same welcome in your new home as in the past. We trust you will always look upon us as your friends and neighbors, and that we shall see you in our midst often. We wish you every happiness and success in your new home. We ask you to accept this china cabinet as a token of our esteem, and hope that it will bring back only pleasant memories of the time gathered here to-night.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours,

MRS. GEO. SPRING,
MRS. P. SEELEY.

Mr. Loyst responded, accepting the gift, and thanking their guests on behalf of Mrs. Loyst and himself. He said that both Mrs. Loyst and he could never forget their old friends and neighbors, and that they would ever be glad to receive them in their new home, as the latch string would always be on the outside as a welcome to all.

The guests showed their appreciation of this welcome by a hearty clapping of the hands, and singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

ROD AND GUN IN CANADA

Every sportsman will be interested in the November issue of Rod and Gun in Canada. The stories and articles, based on a variety of subjects, will hold the attention of all who read. Raymond Thompson has an unusually good story entitled The Sins of the Fathers in this number. Some Wild Animal Trails and Some Adventures Along Them from the pen of Bonnycastle Dale is on a par with his previous contributions to wild animal stories, Hubert J. Black has written a humorous account of an English "tenderfoot" who is duped by an unscrupulous fur buyer in the West in his story called Peace. These are only a few of the interesting contributions to be found in this issue. Include an enlightening article on Moose Calling by Henry Braithwaite and A Fishing Trip to the Island Province, by A. F. Atkinson. The stories of F. V. Williams, Martin Gardner and W. Wilson, who are regular contributors to the magazine, are all up to the mark and the regular departments conducted by the departmental editors are beautiful of good and interesting reading.

FEEDS THAT TAINT MILK

Undesirable Flavors Given by Some Plants In Autumn

Ragweed an Offender—Rank Clover, Turnip Tops and Rape Also Make Taints—Oil on Perches Stop Hen Lice—To Remove Paint.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

One of the worst weeds for producing bad flavors in milk during the autumn season is ragweed. So says Prof. H. H. Dean of the Ontario Agricultural College. This gives a peculiar pungent odour to milk, which is very objectionable for both cheese and buttermaking. For condensing, powdering, and for city milk and cream trade such milk would be rejected and returned to the farmer.

A Bad Case of Ragweed Taint.

A case is known where a cheesemaker was obliged to leave the factory because the cheese was rejected by the cheese buyers on account of bad flavor. On investigation it was found that ragweed grew on many farmers' farms nearly as high as the fences. When pastures are short, as they frequently are in September and October, the cattle eat the weed. This taints the milk and causes no end of trouble for both cheese and butter makers. The remedy, of course, is to rid the farms of this noxious weed, or else prevent the cows from pasturing in fields where the ragweed grows.

Rank Clover Will Give Taint.

Sometimes very rank clover will give a taint to the milk. The remedy is to turn the cows into a fresh clover field for only a short time each day until they grow accustomed to the clover and the persons buying or using the milk become adjusted to the change in flavor.

Turnip Tops Give Offensive Flavor.

Among crops grown for feeding purposes, one of the worst flavored is turnip tons. As soon as the turnip crop is harvested some farmers turn their cattle into the field to clean up the tops, small turnips, etc. This practice is sure to result in badflavored milk and cream. Most creamery men warn their patrons against this, as it has been found impossible to prevent turnip-tainted butter where much cream comes from farms where "cows break into the turnip field unknown to the owner."

Rape Nearly as Bad as Turnips.

Rape is nearly as bad as turnip tops. In beef-raising sections, where rape is largely grown for fattening cattle and sheep, the cows, if allowed into the rape field, are almost sure to give tainted milk. If the farmer is using the milk and cream at home and likes the turnip or rape flavor, all right; but to sell this raw material for manufacturing purposes will spoil the cheese and butter. We advise all to be careful with the autumn foods for dairy cows. Prices are usually good, and we must produce milk of good flavor.—Dept. of Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

Oil on Perches Stops Hen Lice.

When I started to keep poultry I built a new hen-house, and the first year I had no trouble at all with mites, but the second year got me a lots of work. But one day I went out on a pleasure drive which took me close to a friend's house whom I knew to be a good poultry woman. I asked to see her flock, to which she gladly led the way.

The building was just a ramshackle affair to which new roosting beams had been added as her flock grew in size. She went right into the house, but I hesitated, for when I looked in I saw all sorts of boxes and barrels half full of straw with hens on them, the only thing provided for them to lay in. But she invited me in, and reluctantly I complied. She led off in conversation, I listening, expecting any minute to be set upon by mites. After a few minutes it dawned upon me there were no mites in there, so I asked her how she managed to keep such a place free from mites. She turned to the perches, pointed at them and said, "See those black perches. That is oil on them."

I went home and oiled the perches in my new hen-house and have had no mites since; that was three years ago. Each year, after the incubating season is over, I paint the perches heavily with the cheapest lubricating oil procurable, and now I don't think I have a mite on the place. Mites all leave the hen before daylight. The oil kills them, and enough of it is left on the feathers to kill the young as they hatch on the hen's body. Don't put the oil on till the hatching is over or you'll regret it.

To Remove Paint.

To remove old paint from woodwork or automobile body, wash with a strong, hot solution of concentrated lye. Dissolve one can of lye in every gallon of water used, and apply while hot. A wooden tub or bucket is an suitable container for the solution. An old paint brush or a heavy cloth may be used to apply the paint remover. The hands should be protected by wearing rubber gloves. After letting solution soak into the paint, which requires about ten minutes, it may be removed with a stiff wire brush or steel wool. A brush or wool becomes clogged with paint, rinse in a pail of clean water. In stubborn cases, or where there are several coats of paint, two or three applications may be necessary.

"At the head of all the sciences and arts, at the head of civilization and progress, stands—not militarism, the science that kills, not commerce, the art that accumulates wealth—but agriculture, the mother of all industry, and the maintainer of human life."—Garfield.

The little girl had been to church for the first time. Mother having a cold, her father had taken her. When they got back her mother said, "Well, and were you a good girl?"

"Oh, yes," answered the daughter. "A man offered me a big plate full of money, and I said 'No, thanks!'"

He left Friday to join the Prescott Royal Bank staff. To Excavate City of David.
The proposed excavation on the site of the City of David in Jerusalem, was discussed recently at a meeting of the Palestine Exploration Fund at the rooms of the Society of Antiquaries, London.
Dr. D. G. Hogarth, who presided, said that the occasion was epochmaking in their history, and they were on the eve of undertaking the excavation of the City of David, which had long been their ambition. He pointed out that there might not be much in it, because it was a rocky hill, but he reminded them that the excavation of the pockets of earth on the Acropolis Hill at Athens gave up a most interesting call etion to the Athens Museum.
The Dean of Westminster had written saying that he had the warmest hopes of the work. The Palestine Government assured them of its assistance, but had said that the fund should have £5,000 in its possession before anything could be done. They had themselves, and through the British Academy, £2,000, Mr. Charles Masterman had given £2,000, and Viscount Burnham £1,000.
They started thus under very fair auspices, and he gave a promise that no one's prejudices would be outraged.

A grateful couple who had received help from friends and neighbors in extinguishing a fire at their home, inserted an advertisement in the local paper expressing their thanks. It read thus: "Mr. and Mrs. Jones wish to express thanks to their friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted at the burning of their residence last night."

Fire at Tamworth.

Fire of unknown origin destroyed several large piles of timber at Tamworth at midnight Sunday. The lumber which was the property of Mr. P. J. Fitzpatrick, of Lancaster, was piled at the station in the C. N. R. lumber yards and was some distance from the main part of the town. For a time the buses occupied by Mr. Reuben Woodcock was threatened, but strenuous efforts on the part of the fighters, removed the danger. The C. N. R. station while in close proximity to the fire was in comparatively little danger.

War Memorial Unveiled.

Tuesday, Brigadier General A. E. Ross unveiled a War Memorial at Amherst Island, and made an address such as none but a man who had taken a very prominent part in the Great War from beginning to end, could make. It was indeed at once pathetic and inspiring to listen to the testimony which he as an eye witness bore to the bravery and fortitude of the Canadian soldiers. His message also to the bereaved was tender and comforting. Mr. E. J. Sexsmith, M.P., and Warden Milling were also present and made appropriate addresses. The Rev. Mr. Ware, Anglican Minister, read a portion of Holy Scripture and offered prayer.

Address and Presentation

On Tuesday evening, Oct. 14th, a number of friends and neighbours met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Gates, Gretna, to bid them farewell before leaving for their new home. Following an address, they were presented with a purse of money. Mrs. Gates, in a few well chosen words, thanked the friends for the money and also for the kindness shown them during Mr. Gates' recent illness. The following address was read by Mrs. Laura Parks:

Gretna, Oct. 14th, 1924.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Gates,—We, your friends and neighbours, have met here this evening to express our sorrow at your departure from our midst, after a life-long residence with us.

We have always found you good neighbours and good friends to all of us, ready with your help and sympathy at all times.

Our Ladies' Aid will lose one of its helpful members, and we will miss you in our other church activities.

We ask you to accept this purse of money and trust that God's blessing may go with you, and that you will find peace and happiness in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the Gretna friends.

Picton vs. Napanee.

The annual track meet between the Collegiate Institutes resulted again in a victory for Napanee. But the contest this year was much closer and the result was in doubt until the final event had been divided. Picton's good showing was due mainly to the work of W. Rorke and R. Church, especially the former.

The competition consisted of eight events, of which four were contested at Napanee Field Day on Oct. 10th, and four at Picton Field Day on Oct. 17th. The results were as follows:

Running Broad Jump—R. Church, Picton; A. Walters, Napanee; D. Fennell, Napanee.

Running Hop, Step and Jump—W. Rorke, Picton; A. Walters, Napanee; R. Church, Picton.

220-yard dash—W. Rorke, Picton; D. Fennell, Napanee; R. Empey, Napanee.

100-yard Dash—R. Empey, Napanee; W. Rorke, Picton; ——, Picton.

Running High Jump—A. Walters, Napanee; R. Cowle, Napanee, and W. Rorke, Picton, tie.

Half Mile—W. Rorke, Picton; Thompson, Picton; A. Walters, Napanee.

Pole Vault—F. Ballard, Napanee; W. Coates, Napanee; W. Rorke, Picton.

Relay Race—Napanee, Picton.

Points—1st, 5 points; 2nd, 3 points; 3rd, 1 point, except in relay race where only first place counts.

Score—Napanee 27; Picton 21.

The members of the Athletic Society desire to express their gratitude to those who assisted the contestants in this meet, in getting to Picton, Messrs. E. J. Pollard, M. P. Graham, Harry Garratt, Ralph Sills and C. A. Beaver Deserts His Mate.

A gross case of mate desertion has occurred at the London Zoological Gardens, the culprit being Harold, a Canadian beaver.

Harold, with Nellie, his mate, arrived at the Gardens last June and, to save a possible tragedy among the occupants, the beaver pond was divided by railings, Bertha, an elderly spinster lady among many years ago, being allowed to retain the island on which she had lived for so long.

The new-comers soon made themselves at home in a lodge built near an adjacent wall.

Though Harold used to spend much of his time in bubbling with Bertha through the rails it was thought he and Nellie had settled down in contentment.

"Love laughs at locksmiths," and so did Harold. All the time Nellie was zealously attending to her domestic duties, he was diligently tunnelling under the railings to Bertha's territory.

A few days ago the keeper, who had not noticed Harold's operations, found Nellie alone, looking very disconsolate.

Remembering Harold's behavior of late, the keeper, by the aid of a plank, invaded the island, and there, in Bertha's sanctuary, snugly ensconced, was Harold.

"As the tunnel is still there, perhaps it would be better to let Nellie discover how she lost her mate and go and settle the matter in her own way," said the keeper.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION AT ODESSA

The 42nd Annual Convention of the R. E. C. of Lennox and Addington assembled in the beautiful Methodist church at Odessa, on Monday, October 13th. The day was ideal and from the opening in the morning till the close of the enthusiastic session, after two splendid addresses of Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.A., B.D., of Napanee, and Rev. C. D. Baldwin, of Kingston. The opening devotions were under the direction of Rev. R. P. Dixon, the Pastor of the Convention Church.

Mr. S. W. Clarke, Superintendent of the Odessa School, welcomed the Convention on behalf of the Sunday School workers of Odessa. In the absence of the 1st Vice President of the R. E. C., Mr. J. E. Robinson, Mayor MacGregor responded. The welcome was not of words only, but was manifested by the care taken by friends of the local Sunday School to provide for every comfort and need of the visitors.

Rev. H. B. Neal, of Adolphustown, gave a very lucid address on the benefits of the O. T. A. noting that it was one of the ministerial Sunday School legislation ever enacted in Ontario. After Mr. Neal's address the morning session closed, and the basket of the church invited the convention visitors to dinner served in the basement. The dinner and supper were both daintily and appetizing. There was nothing lacking and there was everything that could be desired.

The visitors were shown the splendid Sunday School equipment, especially the Primary Department, where there are little tables and chairs quite suitable for the children of that class.

The afternoon session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev T. H. P. Anderson.

The service of praise was led in the morning and afternoon by Miss Pearl Hagerman, A.T.C.M., pianist, and Mr. MacGregor, cornetist. In the evening the praise service was led by the Odessa choir.

Mrs. MacGregor, the Secretary-Treasurer, gave the report for the year. That Secretary reported considerable advance made this last year. Camden and Sheffield reported two Normal Classes, viz., Hepworth and Newburgh. Richmond reported three Normal Classes, viz., Trinity, Grace, and Selby. There are three front-line townships, viz., Ernestown, Richmond, and Camden and Sheffield. The missionary contributions from the R. E. C. amounted to $362.00.

This convention was unique in that every departmental superintendent was present and gave a report for their special work. Mrs. MacGregor gave an excellent address on the teaching of the Old Testament. She stressed two very important factors in successful teaching, the use of stories and of drawings, which two things is the most forceful appeal to the children.

In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Brown, Rob Kingston, Daly St. Church, Baldwin, ex-President of the Montreal R. E. C., led the discussion on the reports and emphasized the Junior work in boys' organizations. The address by Mr. Allan Baldwin, brought the afternoon session to a close. The whole afternoon session created a splendid spiritual atmosphere, but the climax was reached after which the closing service which will appear in our next issue.

The evening session was well attended and enthusiastic as the morning and afternoon, what could describe the evening session. The church was filled, and never did the workers go more enthusiastic. The Rev. A. C. Hoffman, of Bath, opened the session by the service of praise and worship, after which the report of the Nominating Committee was presented and adopted. The installation was conducted by the Rev. C. B. Baldwin, and the following are the officers for the coming year:

Hon. Pres.—Mr. C. W. Neville.
Pres.—Rev. Mr. Allan Baldwin.
1st Vice President—Rev. W. R. Tanton.
Sec'y-Treas.—Mr. A. MacGregor.
Supt. Children's Division—Miss Ruth Wilson.
Supt. Boys' Division—Rev. T. H. P. Anderson.
Supt. Adult Division—Mr. J. F. Sale.
Supt. Home Department—Mrs. J. Sale.
Supt. Teacher Training—Mrs. T. H. P. Anderson.
Supt. Temperance Department—Mrs. John C. Hudgins.
Supt. Missionary Department—Mr. Vanness.

Mr. C. W. Neville, who for many years was the Secretary of the Association, was welcomed, and in a brief address, appealed for the hearty and liberal financial support of the Association.

The Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.A., B.D., of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Napanee, gave what was unanimously declared to be one of the clearest, and most thoroughly reasoned address on the O. T. A. and the failure of Government control. The resolutions Committee was presented and adopted. Briefly they were:—

1. The appreciation of the Convention to the Sunday School workers of Odessa for their thoughtful and generous hospitality; to the Pastor, Rev. S. Bird, to the choir and to the Convention Church; to the Choir and the Pianist.

2. The Convention expressed the appreciation of the devoted and consecrated labours of the county Officers during the past year, and pledge our loyal and hearty support for the coming year.

3. The attention of the Executive of the Provincial R. E. C. was requested to the present unfair apportionment because there are now quite a number of Christian organizations carrying on Sunday School work which make no contribution to the support of the provincial work.

The Convention was unique in that it was a splendid success. Every one was delighted with the splendid addresses of Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.A., B.D., of Napanee, and Rev. C. D. Baldwin, of Kingston. The opening devotions were under the direction of Rev. R. P. Dixon, the Pastor of the Convention Church.

Mr. S. W. Clarke, Superintendent of the Odessa School, welcomed the Convention on behalf of the Sunday School workers of Odessa. In the absence of the 1st Vice President of the R. E. C., Mr. J. E. Robinson, Mayor MacGregor responded. The welcome was not of words only, but was manifested by the care taken by friends of the local Sunday School to provide for every comfort and need of the visitors.

Rev. H. B. Neal, of Adolphustown, gave a very lucid address on the benefits of the O. T. A. noting that it was one of the ministerial Sunday School legislation ever enacted in Ontario. After Mr. Neal's address the morning session closed, and the basket of the church invited the convention visitors to dinner served in the basement. The dinner and supper were both daintily and appetizing. There was nothing lacking and there was everything that could be desired.

The visitors were shown the splendid Sunday School equipment, especially the Primary Department, where there are little tables and chairs quite suitable for the children of that class.

The afternoon session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev T. H. P. Anderson.

The service of praise was led in the morning and afternoon by Miss Pearl Hagerman, A.T.C.M., pianist, and Mr. MacGregor, cornetist. In the evening the praise service was led by the Odessa choir.

Mrs. MacGregor, the Secretary-Treasurer, gave the report for the year. That Secretary reported considerable advance made this last year. Camden and Sheffield reported two Normal Classes, viz., Hepworth and Newburgh. Richmond reported three Normal Classes, viz., Trinity, Grace, and Selby. There are three front-line townships, viz., Ernestown, Richmond, and Camden and Sheffield. The missionary contributions from the R. E. C. amounted to $362.00.

This convention was unique in that every departmental superintendent was present and gave a report for their special work. Mrs. MacGregor gave an excellent address on the teaching of the Old Testament. She stressed two very important factors in successful teaching, the use of stories and of drawings, which two things is the most forceful appeal to the children.

In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Brown, Rob Kingston, Daly St. Church, Baldwin, ex-President of the Montreal R. E. C., led the discussion on the reports and emphasized the Junior work in boys' organizations. The address by Mr. Allan Baldwin, brought the afternoon session to a close. The whole afternoon session created a splendid spiritual atmosphere, but the climax was reached after which the closing service which will appear in our next issue.

DR. WILSON HUFF CLAIMED BY DEATH

Prominent and Highly Esteemed Rome Veterinarian Has Passed Away.—City Meat and Milk Inspector for 20 Years.— Charter Member of State Veterinary Society and Pioneer in the Tuberculin Test.

Dr. Wilson Huff, V.S., for 30 years meat and milk inspector of this city, passed away at his home, 401 W. Liberty street, at 9.30 a.m. Sunday. Dr. Huff had been in poor health since he suffered a shock a year ago, and had been confined to his bed for the past four weeks.

Deceased was born in Napanee, Canada, September 18th, 1843, and was a son of the late Elaikim and Nancy Huff. He lived at Napanee until he was 19 years old and then moved to Titusville. He located in Rome about 40 years ago. In Canada, in 1866, he was married to Mrs. Delilah Pearsall, who died in Rome in this city in 1912.

Dr. Huff was a graduate of the Toronto (Ont.) Veterinary College. He was first appointed milk and meat inspector by the Board of Health of this city in 1893 and, with the exception of two years, when Dr. J. M. Curvie held the position, Dr. Huff acted faithfully and competently from that time until one year ago, when he resigned because of ill health. His record of 20 years in public service is one which he could well be proud of.

Dr. Huff was a member of the National Veterinary Association, and a charter member of the New York State and the Central New York Veterinary societies. He took a deep interest in his work and never failed to attend a veterinary convention, always striving for the advancement of his profession.

He was a pioneer in the promotion of tuberculin test for cattle and advocated it in papers which he read before the local Board of Health and at veterinary conventions. He met with considerable opposition in the beginning of the test when the idea was new to the people, but he never wavered in his contention that it was necessary to insure healthy cattle, and carried this theory into practice at every opportunity.

Deceased children survive to mourn his passing: L. Grace Huff, of Chicago, and Mrs. Harlow G. Hupp, 401 W. Liberty street; also two brothers, W. H. Huff, of Napanee, Canada, who has been confined to the past two weeks; three grandchildren, Delilah Hupp, Fanny Huff and Heath Huff, North Dakota, and Ferman E. Pearsall, Rome; and one niece, Mrs. A. A. Bartlett, of Napanee, Canada, who has been nursing for him for the past four weeks.

He was a member of the First M. E. Church and a man of sterling character, and his genial and earnest way endeared him to a host of friends who held him in the highest regard.—Rome Daily Sentinel, N.Y., Monday, Oct. 27th, 1924.

Peter Smith, Last Provincial Treasurer, Given Three Years in the Penitentiary

Aemilius Jarvis Gives Six Months in Jail. Fined $600,000

The jury late Friday afternoon returned a verdict of guilty in the conspiracy charge against Smith and Jarvis and a recommendation of mercy in favor of Aemilius Jarvis, Jr., and Harry C. Peters. The two were charged with conspiracy and theft in connection with the redemption of succession fees bonds in the Province while Peter Smith was Provincial Treasurer. On the theft charge all were found not guilty.

His Lordship said that the charge, simplified, was, that the four men had conspired to cheat the province. He asked what Jarvis, Sr., had done that he should get such a large sum of money. He had risked none of his own money in buying the bonds in England and the bankers there had done the real work. The banks, for doing the work, got three-eights of one per cent., while Jarvis got 8 per cent. "If he made that money legally then all we can do is to blame the government for being foolish," said His Lordship.

"Do you think any real business man would enter a proposition of that kind?" he asked. "If the money were made honestly, why were not the securities in payment of the Jarvis services sent to Toronto instead of New York?" He told the jury that it must be satisfied that Peter Smith got the securities or part of them.

"If he didn't get them, Andrew Pepall could prove it, but Smith has not the benefit of Andrew Pepall's evidence. If he received the bonds from Jarvis and Co., why has he not brought that someone else here to say so?" asked His Lordship.

Mr. Tilley said that Peter Smith went to the Government with "as line as lip and direct in his heart," and that he had been a stool pigeon, and had put over the transaction with Jarvis, Sr., as two friends would. The elder Jarvis, he said, was responsible for the whole deal. The younger Jarvis, if he were not in the original plot, he continued, knew of it later. Peter Smith, he said, had taken advantage of his position and that of a reputable friend to invoke the province in a loss of $520,000 in order to get one-third of the amount in his own pocket.

It is understood that the "fine" imposed on Peter Smith by Chief Justice Meredith was $600,000 in all, not $600,000 each as assumed in some quarters. The amount is to be paid, according to the Judge's sentence, before the man is freed after expiration of the prison term in each case. His Lordship's intention was to secure a penalty to the province of the amount lost to the public in the illegal transactions.

ADDRESS GIVEN BY REV. JAS. CUMBERLAND, M.A.

The following address was given by Rev. James Cumberland, M.A., at the unveiling of the War Memorial at Amherst Island, on October 21st, 1924:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—After an absence of four years, I assure you I am greatly pleased to meet so many former parishioners and friends among whom I spent forty happy, and I trust, profitable years. I am thankful for the privilege of being present to-day, because we have met to honour the memory of those eight Amherst Island men, who so nobly and willingly responded to the call of duty and gave their lives in the cause of justice and freedom, viz. James Bell, Ernest Bonnee, Maurice Glass, Thomas McFern, Ross Pringle, Stirling Pelley, Oswald Wemp, Frederick Willard. They formed a part of that great army of Canadians whose courage and self-sacrifice are revered throughout the Dominion, and whose fame shines undimmed through the passing years.

We are favoured to-day in having with us General Ross, who had such an important part in carrying on the war to a final and victorious issue. If during that strenuous time the Canadians were always ready it was largely because Dr. Ross as Chief of the Medical Corps, did so much to care for their health. The offer of a high command in the Royal Army Medical Corps, and his preference to remain with his own "boys", as he affectionately called them, is at once a tribute to his great initiative and executive ability, and a revelation of his sterling love and loyalty for Canada. I feel assured that you all highly appreciate the interest that Dr. R. Ross has shown in selecting these war trophies, which he now presents to you on behalf of the Canadian Government in recognition of your services during the Great War.

It was my privilege to be a fellow-citizen of yours in that eventful and trying time. I remember how well you did your part then in giving the first machine gun to Colonel Dawson's battalion, the unceasing efforts of the members of the Red Cross, and in how in various other ways you showed your devotion to the cause for which our brave soldiers were fighting. Where all did well I wish to make no distinctions, but with the memory of many former gatherings in mind, there are one or two whose interests in the soldiers and efforts on their behalf come especially into remembrance. We miss that veteran who took part in that long trying campaign through our northern wilderness, led by Colonel Wolseley, who later represented this municipality in various offices, and who closed an active and honourable career as Member in the Legislature for the County of Lennox. I need not tell you to whom I refer. Reginald Fowler, modest and unassuming, kind and courteous, public spirited and patriotic, was indeed a good citizen and true friend of every worthy cause. Nor shall we forget Dr. Alexander Kennedy, whose medical services were given, with distinction, to his country in the campaign of 1885, and who, though sixty years of age, volunteered for active service during the first days of the war. Fearless and patriotic, no man had the cause of the soldier more at heart, or followed the course of the war with more intense interest than he.

Almost six years have passed since the last gun was fired, and yet the world has not resumed its normal condition, so great has been the upheaval caused by that awful overthrow. You are all more or less familiar with the maze of disillusionment, almost of despair, which has followed the war. Has anything been gained for humanity? Will the world be better then it was? Or was the strife, the sacrifice in vain? These are questions that our statesmen have been asking; questions that every man should ask.

First, let us look at Europe. Where is the Emperor of Austria, the lord of a realm that opened the world earlier by thirteen the weight of its armies, against little Serbia? There is no Emperor. There is no Austrian Empire. The Emperor died in exile, and the subject peoples of the Empire have chosen their own forms of government. Where is the Kaiser, the War Lord, the All Highest? An exile compelled to flee or I ask shelter in Holland; whose soldiers for four years had guarded their borders lest their country suffer the fate of Belgium. And what of the generals who held Europe in their iron grip from the North Sea and the Baltic to the Mediterranean and the Tigris, who ravaged Poland and Belgium and Roumania and Serbia and the border lands of Italy and France? Their spell is broken and their power is vanished. Ludendorf himself supposed to be the most influential of them all, was last year arrested in Bavaria while attempting to lead an insurrection, and bound over to keep the peace. It is no small thing to see the mighty thus humbled, and the peoples whom they had threatened or enslaved, drawing once more the breath of freedom. Why should we not rejoice then and say that all goes well? Chiefly because the great end for which the Allies fought and claimed to fight has not yet been attained. We wished for a lasting peace based on justice and making an end of war. It was not humanly possible to attain such a peace when the Versailles Treaty was signed. Passions ran too strongly then and because of the consequent injustices which characterize a part of the Treaty, Europe has lost five years; years which might have taken all the countries concerned far on the road to recovery. There is not any question as to the moral obligation of Germany to pay for the damages caused by the war. No one disputes the right of the Allies to make all collections possible. The issue between France and England has rather hinged upon the question as to whether Germany should be kept in such a state that she cannot ever recover and make payments, or whether she should be allowed independent, orderly life of her own which would enable her in time to treat some of her debts. Fortunately Herriot, the head of the French Government, elected in May, and Premier Macdonald have been able to agree much better than their predecessors. The whole issue between France and England, however, is but part of a larger issue—the question whether international disputes should be settled by arbitration or by the sword? It was the greatest achievement of that great and high minded statesman, Woodrow Wilson, that he made the League of Nations his first great object while at Paris, and secured its establishment under the Treaty. Already within five short years the League has solved many problems which in themselves were probably the seeds of future wars. Amid all the confusion and distress which are the result of the past conflict, the League has done valiant service in establishing a new and better order. Of European nations, Germany and Russia alone are unrepresented. And Germany after five years of self government will be giving the surest pledge for her future conduct when she asks admittance. America stands aloof, but her leaders in thought are sympathetic, and the memory of her great President, fallen in the cause which he believed would triumph may yet become a tradition like that of Lincoln.

What of Canada? Her record is as proud in peace as in war. She has endorsed the League since its first inception, and two of her statesmen, Borden and Fowell, have been among its foremost advocates. And so through strife and conflict and doubt and all the baseness which seems to clog each upward step of humanity, we may yet see something gained. Had Germany triumphed, what vision could we have had of better days, or any days worth living? What could we have expected from the policy which carried the men of Belgium into bondage and enslaved the women of France? But because that power is broken the world has gained a breathing space, a respite which it can use to do better purpose than in devising means to avert wars new and more terrible. The people are for peace if their representatives can only find means to insure it.

Before closing, let me say a word or two about these gems that you will always treasure as sacred pledges of the bravery of our soldiers. It would be a bitter thought for those who made them and those who bore them, to know that they have been scattered here and elsewhere throughout the British Empire as the symbols of Germany's defeat. In them manufactured by hundreds and thousands and millions, her military leaders trusted. By them she hoped to cower the world and knew no other way of ruling it. Here they are, grim and deadly once, blind to all arguments of right or wrong. They are for us the sight of victory, a sum not cheaply bought, a victory that we dare not use unworthily.

And finally, I turn to the picture which you unveil to-day—the Memorial of those eight Island men who fell in defence of our liberty. As you enter this hall and look upon these portraits of our young heroes, so vivid, so bright and hopeful, you will not think of them as having lived in vain, or as having passed out into oblivion, but as having entered upon a fuller life, a brighter day, where sin shall not be down. "Vivunt immortales immortore"—The brave live on as comrades of the saints.

One thing more. If they were not unwilling to die that the world might be safer, freer and better, shall we not be unwilling to do that the world may be safer, freer and better, shall we have done enough by merely reading the Making wash day pleasant—

Just use Rinso where you used to use bar soap—for soaking, boiling, or in your washing machine.

THE hardest part of wash-day, rubbing, rubbing, rubbing, has given way to the new method of soaking the clothes clean with Rinso. This wonderful new soap gently loosens the dirt and a thorough rinsing leaves things white and glistening as you never could get them before.

Only spots where the dirt is ground-in, such as neck bands, cuff edges, and the like need a light rubbing, and a little dry Rinso rubbed on these spots quickly makes the dirt disappear.

OF COURSE DORIS WON OUT

What Was There for Mother to Say in the Face of Such an Argument?

They had been chatting since entering the bus, but the Woman, who sat opposite them on top, heard nothing really good until Grant's monument was reached.

Without taxing her hearing in the least the Woman learned that they were former schoolmates at the university (for university days were mentioned again and again) who were revisiting the city after a number of years.

"I don't think the girls of this century will ever stand for long skirts again," remarked the one in the green coat. "Because me of what Evelyn was telling me just before I came away. She was making a skirt for her daughter, Doris. Everything except the correct length had been decided upon. Evelyn wanted to make this a little longer than Doris' other skirts. She told her that the fashion was for increasing the length. But Doris was obdurate.

"Evelyn, you know, generally lets her have her way in matters of dress, but this time she argued and Doris burst into tears. 'Be fair, mumsy,' she pleaded. 'Honest Injun, now which do you think I should take—the advice of one mother or of twenty girls?'"

"And what happened?"

"Well, mother shortened the skirt, of course."—Exchange.

HISTORIC HOME FOR AMERICA?

Possibility That Dwelling in Which Miles Standish Was Born May Be Brought Here.

The home of Longfellow's poem, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," was a real historical character, who was born in Lancashire, England, somewhere about 1584. It is now suggested that the house where he was born should be transported to New England. It is even said that within six months the four rooms of the Standish house now located in the rocky old Standish, near Wigan, Lancashire, England, will be fitted into the house for some United States citizen whose family history goes back to Mayflower days. The Standish house has been occupied by the Standish family since the Norman conquest. One of the ancestral stately homes of England is just now being taken down and carried across the Atlantic to be set up stone by stone somewhere in the States. Now if history belonging to these ancient buildings could also be transferred to the United States, what a heap of renown that enterprising nation would collect and own!—Montreal Family Herald.

Rodent Was the Burglar.

A New York Chinaman sent an urgent call to detective headquarters complaining that $500 had been stolen from him. The Chink, who conducts a restaurant, told the detectives he suspected a colored employee, stating he had the money in his cellar, but could not locate it. A detective suggested a search of the cellar. The detectives made a careful survey, without results. As they turned to abandon their search, one of them battered a small bundle of paper money across the cellar floor. Springing upon the object, he placed his foot full upon it. The bundle refused to move, but its moving forces, a husky rat—vanished into a nearby hole. Nine hundred dollars in bills was in the bundle, thus accidentally clearing up what might have been a baffling mystery.

Diplomatic Corps Cared For.

Other Washingtonians may shiver with the cold this winter, owing to the coal shortage, but the administration has seen to it that the fine persons in the diplomatic corps will not suffer, owing to a lack of fuel. Many of the diplomats come from countries where artificial heat in homes is almost unknown and, indeed, unnecessary, and worried about their comfy coal bins. The State department has given them precedence over others; thus emphasizing the entente cordiale. It is only in recent years that the English and the Scotch have known the comfort de straus heat, the sea coal fire as they call it, burned in open grates, being the only method of heating their houses.—Washington Star.

Something He Can Teach Her.

"I simply couldn't teach my wife to drive the car. Have it up and let somebody else do it."

"Well?"

"Same with bridge. She wouldn't listen to me at all. Hired a tutor for her."

"Well?"

"Dancing was another art we learned separately. Always reminded when we tried the new steps together, but, at that, there's one thing she's willing to let me teach her."

"What is that?"

"She insists that I must teach her how to blow cigarette smoke through her nose."

Martens Raised in Captivity.

The raising of martens in captivity is now commercially possible as a result of the discovery of their breeding season by naturalists of the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. These valuable fur bearers mate late in July and in August, and appear to have a gestation period of eight months, much longer than most animals of the same group. It was formerly thought that their breeding season was in the fall or winter, the young being born in the spring.

With care one can make a lot of trouble out of very little material.

FATTENING POULTRY FOR THANKSGIVING

(Experimental Farms Note.)

There is no bird for the family table that equals the turkey. With the Canadian Thanksgiving so early, however, few turkeys are ready for that festival, and yet some of the early birds might better be prepared for this market than held until Christmas and New Years, picking out the largest ones, and giving them a week or two's special feed. Confine the birds for fattening in yards (not in crates), and give a mash of ground grains mixed with milk, twice a day. Feed just as much as will be cleaned up. If it is not convenient to confine the largest birds, it will do no harm to feed the whole flock the same feed and take out those that are fit for the Thanksgiving trade, leaving the others for later marketing.

Geese and ducks also will be used to a certain extent for Thanksgiving, but in all probability well-grown cockerels will be used more than anything else, and there are not many delicacies more appreciated than a well-fleshed cockerel. But it must be fleshed. It also costs less to have a plump, juicy and tender bird than it does to have a thin, dry and tough one. Crate feeding puts on the flesh, and now is the time to see about it. Two or three weeks' feeding make a big difference though a longer time is better.

It costs much more per pound to grow the frame than it does to put the flesh on the frame after it is there. To grow the frame costs anywhere from 10c. to 20c. per pound, depending upon the birds and the way they are fed, but by crate-feeding the bird for a few weeks before killing, a pound of flesh can be added for from 6 to 12 cents.

In experiments conducted at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa, it took but 2½ pounds of dry mash mixed with buttermilk to make a pound of meat, and the cheapest combination of feed was equal parts oats, corn and buckwheat, all finely ground. This was fed twice a day, just enough for the birds to quickly clean up.

Good stamp, healthy birds, weighing 4 to 6 pounds, are suitable, and best returns come from the American breeds. Care must be taken that the birds are healthy and free from lice—a good dusting of insect powder should be applied before putting into crates. They also should have a 24 hours fast before the first feed. This is essential if the birds are to be kept in condition throughout the feeding period. Another necessary precaution is to restrict the feed for the first two or three days, until the birds become accustomed to the confinement, after which they may have all they will eat twice a day. A dose of Epsom salts in the first feed, 1 pound to 100 birds, helps to keep them in good condition during the feeding period.

A slatted crate is best, but a packing box may be used over to do. Even an empty stall in the stable is better than nothing. But keep the birds clean and give them plenty of fresh air without draughts.

It never pays to market birds without the finishing, but it does pay to get any birds that are ready off your hands early. Usually there is a better price, for a limited number, at Thanksgiving than at Christmas, and to put some on the market then helps to keep up the price later in the season.

THE SCOTCHMAN--A BLEND

It's the land of the blue bell, the heather and thistle,
Where you do as you please, but on Sundays don't whistle,
Where a hill is a mountain, and a creek is a firth,
Where a penny looks always as big as the earth,
It's the land of the bold, of the strong and the free,
But they hanquat on porridge that would kill you and me.

They never were conquered, we're passed neath the yoke,
But never as yet understood a good joke.
They rave horses in plenty from Wallace to Bruce,
But never a one takes the place of corn juice.
To their glorious past our tributes we've paid,
But in a deal they're so canny e'en Jews are afraid.

Love for their country in their hearts has first place,
But they're out for the durats and to win in the race.
They sing "Annie Laurie" and the "Highland Fling" dance,
But parade bout streets and never wear pants;
They quote Bobby Burns with tears in their eyes,
But are first to pick up when someone else buys.

They will talk by the hour about the Duke of Argyle,
But always are sure 'bout his posts every mile.
They're strong in their sorrows, strong in their grief,
But will argue and argue 'till Hell's a relief.

They believe in the church, and on doctrine are nuts,
But never a live one said "yes" or "no" without buts.

Honor's their watchword, and a promise they'll keep,
Yet everyone knows a "Scot'll steal sheep".
We honor and love them, for they make the good fight,
Yet the Good Lord above us keeps them always in sight.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Roy Outwater, who passed away October 29th, 1918.
Softly at night the stars are shining
On a cold and silent grave;
Where thou lies!, our dearest one,
Whom we loved, but could not save.
Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in thy grave so low;
Better in heaven, far better than here,
Only we miss him, we loved him so dear.
Deeply mourned by Mother, Father and Sisters.

Nice and Polite and Modest.

A minister was recounting some of his amusing experiences in marrying people. "There's an old custom," said he, "that the bridegroom shall kiss the bride immediately after the marriage ceremony is over. It's a good, practical custom, for it serves more handily than anything else that I know of to dissipate the awkward pause that almost always follows a simple, informal ceremony. For this reason I keep the custom alive.

"One day a man whom I shall call Blank came to the parsonage to be married. Mr. Blank was a pompous, consequential little man. The prospective Mrs. Blank was a fine, winsome girl. After the ceremony Mr. Blank in spite of his pomposity, did not seem to know just what was the next thing to do, so, as is my practice in such emergencies, I said, 'My dear sir, it is your privilege to salute the bride.' He turned around and, extending his hand formally said, 'Mrs. Blank, I congratulate you.'"

The Legionaries.

No other regiment in any existing army undergoes such Spartan training as the French Foreign Legion of which a detachment is now in the fighting line. When at their headquarters, Sidi-bel-Abbes, the legionaries are marched off for occasional training trips of 300 miles or more, in continuous daily stages of 24 miles, with only five minutes' halt every six miles. Gen. De Negrier, who commanded them in Madagascar, said: "Some soldiers can fight, the legionaries can die." Their record shows how they fall in action. In the Crimea, in Mexico fighting for Maximilian, and in Spain, their losses were enormously heavy. Of 4,000 legionaries sent to aid Queen Christina in 1836 against the Carlist, only 500 returned to Algeria.

Household Hints.

Roll biscuits thin and use two cuts for each biscuit, laying one on top of the other. They are dainty and break evenly.

When frying cornmeal mush dip each slice in cracker dust. This makes a brown, crisp crust and also prevents the fat from splashing over the range.

Before using tea spread it on a sheet of paper and place it in a warm—not hot—oven for a quarter of an hour. This improves the flavor and strengthens it, making the tea last longer.

Two Irishmen met in the street one day.

"Sure, I met a man last week, and, bedad, I'd have sworn it was yourself."

"And wasn't it?" asked the other. "Never a bit," replied Pat. "But he was your very image, barrin' he was a trifle grey. I suppose, now, ye haven't such a thing as a twin brother a few years older than yourself?"

On the Mountain

By Susan E. Claggett

(Copyright, 1924, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

From the railroad a faint path stretched upward to a cabin high on the mountain above Horseshoe Bend. The same path continued downward to a cluster of houses, broadened into a narrow road, and came to a full stop before a rough porch, upon which several men were seated in varying degrees of comfort.

They were listening to one of their number. He was reading, with a trace of impatience—as if compelling himself to be neighborly when his desire was to hasten away—the market reports, the sporting page and the stock market. But what interested him, the war news, apparently did not hold their attention. They turned deaf ears to news from the front, but were absorbed in the Army and Navy ball game that had taken place the day before in Philadelphia.

With a sigh of relief, Willy Warren at last folded his paper, wished them good-day and, walking rapidly away, was soon lost to view upon the higher path. As he disappeared from sight the chair of Uncle Johnny Peyton came down on its front legs with a thud, and the old man said, addressing no one in particular:

"Tears like Billy's mighty low in his mind. He's in a heap of trouble I'm thinking."

"What sort of trouble, Uncle John?" a girl asked casually, as she came through the door of the post office and general store.

"Now, Miss Ma'y, y'know he's 'fisted an' don't know what'll become o' his leedle gal. He's feared he'll have to go 'fore he kin place her."

"I had not heard; but things right themselves in time, and this will be straightened out."

"Maybe, Miss Ma'y, maybe. But y' know Billy's got no one, leastwise down hyar. There's an old aunt in Ioway, an' I guess he's writ to her, but hain't seen fit to answer, so I reckin she's dead. Course, we-alls 'll luk arter her, but he's the pa her diffrunt. She's a pretty leedle gal.

"Billy don't b'long hyar, y'know. He jest come. Somethin' the matter with him. Never hearn tell of his wife. Jest came with that gal an' she was a baby. Hired that cabin up yonder an' didn' make fren's till the fever tuk we-alls, then he come down an' tuk kyar of Jim," nodding toward a mountaineer sitting on the steps, "then he tuk hold o' me. Reckin we'd both be in the boneyard if he hadn't."

"So he made friends, after all," said the girl. "I think the child will be taken care of, Uncle Johnny."

"Sure. But thot's not the p'int, Miss Ma'y. She's riz diffrunt." His voice took on a wheedling tone. "I jest wonder if you couldn't think up some way to help Billy? He sartinly needs it!"

"That would be unwarrantable interference, Uncle Johnny. I scarcely know Mr. Warren."

"Don't take no stock in sich talk," said Uncle Johnny, reaching for his twist of tobacco and cutting off a piece of goodly size. "When it comes to doin' things, an' thinkin' up things, Miss Ma'y, you're right smart. You didn' know we-uns when you come to the mountains, but you now has us trained to eat from your hand—almost."

She threw back her head and laughed heartily. "Almost is well put, Uncle Johnny; but I do not see how I can help you in this."

"T'won't hurt to think erbout it, anyhow, an' p'haps you'll see light," was his concluding comment, as, with a glance toward the faintly outlined path she turned from the group and walked away.

She had been in the mountain three years—at first for her health, then because it claimed her. She had heard all about Billy Warren, had occasionally met him, but save for the merest courtesy no word had passed between them. For some reason he had not impressed her pleasantly. This was probably due to the fact that he had made no effort to know better one who had made friends with all the mountain people.

But the talk of old John Peyton, or some subconscious sense of trouble in the man himself as he stood silently beside her that morning, waiting for his mail, influenced her in the direction of her walk that afternoon. Yet she was not aware that she had been so influenced until she found herself watching a child dabbling bare feet in the rushing water of a tiny stream the while she hushed a coaxed doll to sleep.

There was no fear in the child's eyes as she raised them to the woman beside her. Instead there was a whispered "hush; you'll wake her. She's been real sick and is just going to sleep."

Mary Hilton dropped upon the ground, and in an equally low voice asked what was wrong.

"Daddy's says it's a case of mumps or measles, he's not sure which; but she's been so awfuly cross and has tired me so, he says there is no living with either of us."

"Betty, to whom are you talking?" The voice came from the shadow of the cabin.

"A pretty lady, honey?"

"Don't tell me fairy tales, child; pretty ladies don't climb the mountains."

"She looks real, daddy. Shall I pinch her and find out?"

"I wouldn't. I'll come and find out for myself. There was a rustle of leaves, and Mary Hilton raised her eyes to Billy Warren's face.

She did not move, and the child, with steadily advancing fingers, again asked: "Shall I pinch her, daddy?"

He did not reply. Instead he drew his hand across his eyes as if uncertain as to the reality. When he did speak his voice was sadly unsteady.

"Thank God! Hereafter I shall always believe in prayer."

Mary looked at him thoughtfully. "You have been praying, and I am an answer to your prayer? In what way, especially?"

"You have come."

"You wanted me?"

"Yes."

"Then why did you not come to me?"

"I want help. I could not ask for it unless as a last resort. Offered, it is different."

"And you think I will offer it?"

"Judging from your goodness to the mountain people. You give comfort to them."

"That is different. They are poor. In my humble way, I give help where it is needed. Years ago I took a course of training in an eastern hospital. It has stood me in good stead in my life here. But my work does not approach yours. You are a physician?"

"An army surgeon, retired on account of ill health, which I have regained on the mountain. You know what that means at this time. I am ordered to Fort Oglethorpe by the 15th. That leaves me but two days and I feared I would have to ask for that which I hope will be offered."

"And that is?"

His gesture toward the child was eloquent. "I am all she has."

"If I do this thing, do you surrender her entirely, or will you claim her upon your return?"

His eyes held hers with an expression quickly veiled. "I will not return."

"I do not quite understand," she replied slowly. "We are strangers. You must have friends who would gladly do this for you."

"Yes, but I would choose you from all the world."

There was a certain controlled emotion in his voice that affected her strangely, and she rose to her feet.

"Again I say that I do not understand."

"That is natural." He walked the length of the level in front of the cabin and back. "Upon the eve of a great upheaval a man can allow himself a certain latitude of expression, especially when he knows it can do do harm," he said gravely. "I do not expect to return. Because I am convinced of this, I can say to you what under other circumstances would be little short of impudence, for, as you say, we are strangers. But I began to care for you when you first came to the mountain. I want you to know this, and to believe it. I could not let you know before. My wife—I do not wish to speak of her. She is dead, and I offer you not affront when I tell you that I love you. It is because of this I wish to leave Betty in your care."

With troubled eyes Mary looked toward the child. "I did not imagine this."

"How could you? My effort has been to keep you from knowing. Will you do this for me, now that you do know? It will be my comfort when my time comes, 'over there.'" He turned from her, looking out into the limitless space. "It will be my comfort," he repeated.

"Why are you so sure you will not return?"

"There would be no incentive, with Betty cared for."

Then it was that Mary surprised herself by saying deliberately. "Mr. Warren, if I told you that my interest—"

"Interest! I would want something more than interest," he interrupted.

"Would that not do for the present?"

"No. It must be something more definite."

For long she hesitated, then said stendily. "I think it is more than interest. I am not sure. But it an overwhelming anxiety for your safe return is an evidence of a deeper feeling, it is yours."

He took her hand, raising it to his lips. "In that case, Mary Hilton, God willing, I will return to you and Betty."

Goat Milk is Valuable.

Milk from the goat has probably been used for food purposes ever since the advent of the first "Mrs. Gotee," and the chances are that it will until time is no more. In Europe the milk goat is one of the most popular of domestic animals, and more and more its popularity is growing in this country. What thoroughbreds we have are kept on feather mattresses, almost, and fed the best and choicest that the market affords. We are just beginning to see what the "boa bas" can really do and what it is actually worth.

The Irish "Long Car."

There was a time—and it was only as long ago as the last century, too—when the Irish traveled about their country on odd little cars. They were called "long cars" and they were not very different, really from the "outside cars" which are still commonly used in Ireland. But the outside car carries no more than two persons on seats, while the long car carried sometimes as many as sixteen passengers in all. The luggage was piled up in the middle.

"To get up in the morning and make your own coffee and boil your own egg and make toast for yourself is all very well and good for a girl when she is single, but to have to do that sort of thing is quite different when one is married," Caroline had said with a very definite air five years ago on the memorable afternoon when Horace Blair had proposed to her. "I don't in the least mind living here in this two-room apartment now and I suppose you are quite comfortable in the boarding house, but to have to live in three or four rooms or to have to go to boarding after we are married would be really quite impossible."

Horace fondled the hand he held and looked dejectedly at the graceful finger that Caroline had just permitted him to measure for the engagement ring.

"You are a very sensible girl, Caroline," he said, "and I suppose you are right."

"Of course, I'm right," she agreed. "At twenty I might have been foolish and romantic. Then I might have supposed that I could be happy and make you happy on my thousand-dollar-a-year income and your salary of three thousand—"

"Twenty-eight hundred," Horace corrected with a sigh.

"With an occasional picture I could sell that would come to no more than forty-five hundred." She sighed and shook her head.

"I'm sorry, Horace, but it can't be done. I've seen other girls try to do it and—well, perhaps they are happy—but we couldn't live the way we do. You wouldn't want to try. It would mean living in a suburb somewhere with an incompetent maid and wearing ready-made clothes—yes, I know I have to now, but I won't always be young. At thirty I would look a mess in a ready-made suit—and we would have to keep eternally counting the money, and if we went to the theater we'd have to sit in the gallery—"

"We've had rather good fun that way, haven't we?" Horace murmured.

"Yes, Horace dear, but doing it now is one thing and doing it then is quite another matter. You'll thank me some time for the stand I am taking."

"Then—you mean you won't marry me?"

"Not in the least. I simply mean that I can't marry you till our income is doubled at least!"

Horace took out an envelope and pencil from his pocket and began to figure.

"Nine thousand—that means that I must have about seventy-five hundred."

"I'll relent a little," smiled Caroline "I'll marry you when you are making six thousand. You can work up to that—"

"It may take five years," sighed the unhappy suitor.

"What if it does? We love each other, and we can go on quite nicely this way. You know that marriage is something to be entered into emotionally."

"You are a very sensible girl," said Horace accepting his sentence grimly. "I think I see your point of view."

And so it was settled and Horace and Caroline began their long engagement. There were never any quarrels —Caroline was too sensible for that and never once did she weaken from her wise decision that to make toast for yourself was one thing, but to have to do it for two was another. Even in his most impatient moods Horace had to admire the lofty ideal that Caroline maintained toward marriage. It was something that had to be undertaken on a dignified, rather grand scale or not at all.

And a day or so ago Caroline was still making her own toast and drawing an occasional picture that sold, quite content on her small income and Horace was working as patiently with the concern with which he had begun ten years ago, grimly waiting for another chance ahead that would bring him the coveted six-thousand dollar income. It did not seem then that there would be long to wait, for already he had reached the fifty-five hundred mark and he had saved enough to make possible the prospects of starting in life with a rather more pretentious abode than the suburban cottage that Caroline had held in such contempt.

Caroline worked at her drawing board as patiently and eagerly as ever and her ability as an illustrator had not become impaired but owing to war conditions, as the editors told her, there was less demand for her particular kind of talent than in years gone by. When she did get an order it meant a smaller check than formerly. She did not flinch at the economies this necessitated. Single poverty was one thing, she insisted, and married poverty another.

Then a day or so ago Horace came to spend his usual Sunday afternoon with her but instead of hurrying up the two flights of stairs to her apartment when he reached the house where she lived in spinster sedateness, he hesitated and then walked dejectedly around the block. Again he started to enter and with a heavy sigh retracted his steps around the block. It took considerable courage finally for him to ascend the steps he had trod so many times and to give his accustomed knock at her door.

So well did Caroline know his every expression that it was plain that he attempted to dissemble his depression.

"I'll have to tell you some time," he began, when he had settled back in his favorite wicker chair with Caroline sitting opposite to him by the window. "If ever a man had reason to be discouraged I'm that man—after five years. Oh, Caroline, it is too cruel of fates—". He hurled his head in his hands, and if he had been anything but the every inch American man that he was he would have shed a tear or two.

Caroline was not the young woman to put carrassing terms about his neck and assure him that everything was lovely whether it was or not, and Horace liked her better because she was not. She simply waited for him to tell the rest of the story.

"I have to tell you, Caroline," he said, "because I know you will feel the blow almost as much as I do. I am sure of your love; if I weren't, I couldn't endure this terrible calamity. I'm sure you'll wait—perhaps five years more." He winced as he thought of another long sentence of waiting.

"It's just our share of the war conditions, I suppose. The shipping tie-up has knocked our business sky-high. I've been hoping against hope we'd find a way out. But we've had to close down one of our plants—and that means that the salaries of men at the top will have to be cut in half. If I put out and start in some other line I'll have to begin at the bottom—every business in our line is crippled—it may mean two or three years after the war ends even before things are back on their feet."

Caroline was still calm. "That leaves you with just about twenty-seven hundred, doesn't it?" she asked, and the surprising bluntness of her reply served as a bracer to Horace's wilting spirits.

"Now listen to the sequel. My income has been dwindling. My little money is all in K. and B. and that is worth about half what it was before the war. I've been meaning to tell it. Caroline, you've more pluck than any man I ever knew." He knelt beside her, looking with infinite tenderness and admiration into her unflinching blue eyes. "Have you thought what you are—are going to do about it?"

"There's only one thing to do," she said slowly. "I'll have to give up this place and I suppose you'll have to live some place cheaper than the Hotel Bradford."

"Yes, of course."

"Well, why couldn't we both live here?" Caroline's usually firm voice faltered a little as she made the suggestion.

"You don't mean—Caroline—how could you? You don't mean that we can be married? Don't you know what you said about making toast and frying eggs for two? You don't have to very often that you couldn't—Caroline don't let me hope if you don't really mean it."

"I've thought it all out," she said, resuming her calm manner that Horace thought the finest thing he had ever seen in any woman. "It is one thing for two persons to live separately on two small incomes—and it is another thing for those two people to live together on their joint incomes. Don't you see how simple it is. It's just a matter of plain arithmetic. We can pay rent for one apartment instead of for two; we can read by one light instead of two, and we don't have to go out to the theater and places for amusement, because we'll be married and can just stay home. It's such a simple solution, Horace, that I'm surprised we never thought of it before."

Enemy Quickly Disappeared.

An officer of a railway which passes through Philadelphia, I am told, was in the habit of expressing his war sentiments without restraint to his private secretary. Girard writes in the Philadelphia Ledger. These sentiments were derogatory to the allies and favorable to Germany. One day at the end of a particularly vehement tirade the secretary said: "I trust, sir, that what you have said does not represent your real feelings on the subject." "I mean every word of it," said his employer. It was just after a fire had broken out in a nearby city and the responsibility had been laid at the doors of German hirelings whose enterprise the railway man extolled. "Then I shall be obliged to resign, too," said the secretary, throwing open his coat and showing the badge of a secret service agent. The indiscreet official is now supposed to be in a place where what happens have to say in praise of kultur will reach a severely limited audience.

By Twists Teacher's Words.

A Greencastle young woman teacher in Penn (Ind.) high school a few days ago had a vision of her job slipping because of a violent protest lodged against her by a patron. The teachers were at a meeting when the protest came up. The patron accused the teacher of using the word "a scurvy elephant." The teacher was dumfounded when she heard the charge, and could not recall having any such remark. The members of the board went to work to attempt to unravel the mystery. Finally it was solved. The teacher had told the boy "He was a disturbing element," and the boy mistook what she said for "A scurvy elephant."—Indianapolis News.

Mrs. M'Intee had sent to the grocer's for oatmeal. It was a long time in coming, so she looked through the window and saw a boy coming along with a parcel.

"Is that for M'Intee?" she called.

"No," came the reply. "It's for makin' porridge."

"I was badly run down after having 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy," writes Mrs. Baxter

To have 'flu alone is surely bad enough, but to have 'flu with pneumonia and pleurisy is in most cases fatal. Even 'flu itself after it has run its course leaves the system in a weakened, depressed, nervous, run-down condition, but few are able to fight 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy, and live to tell the tale. No wonder Mrs. Baxter was given up when she had 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy. No wonder after having had these dreadful afflictions she was terribly run down. The mystery is how she ever survived. But we will let Mrs. Baxter tell you her story in her own way:—"I want to tell you what Carnol has done for me and mine. I was badly run down after having 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy. My sister advised me to try Carnol. She used it both for herself and her daughter and both were completely relieved. I have now taken five bottles of Carnol and can say I never enjoyed better health. My daughter is also taking it for a spring tonic. I advised a neighbour to give it to her little girl who has had bronchitis from birth and she is getting well. We all praise your wonderful medicine and only hope it will do as much for others as it has done for me and mine. A long life to Carnol"—Mrs. E. E. Baxter, R.R. No. 2, St. John County, New Brunswick.

Carnol is a wonderful tonic and gives marvellous results in all weakened and run down conditions, because its ingredients are the finest tissue, nerve and blood builders, and are known to every doctor in the medical profession, full particulars of which will be found in every circular accompanying a bottle of Carnol. 6-24

Tom Callahan got a job on the section working for a railroad. The superintendent told him to go along the line looking for washouts.

"And don't be as long-winded in your next report," said the superintendent. "Just report the condition of the road. Write a business letter, and not a love letter."

Tom proceeded on his tour of inspection, and when he reached the river he wrote this report to the superintendent: "Sir: Where the railroad was, the river is."

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY

The Liberals, especially the Right Honourable Mackenzie King, criticise the Right Honourable Arthur Meighen very severely, but on some questions of policy they have to accept his position. Take the question of freight rates, the Conservative leader has always said that these should be fixed by the Railway Commission specially created for this purpose as the only body competent to do so. This position he took in 1922, and he has maintained it.

The King Government has not had the courage to follow such a course, it has had its eye on the political side of this matter just as much as on any other. With it the question has not been what, in the eyes of competent experts, is a fair rate, but what will get by politically. This explains why the Government has been dodging the freight rates' issue since it entered office.

It was lack of courage to take a stand on this subject that got the country into all the trouble over the Crow's Nest Pass commodity rates this year. The Government was told what would happen, but it took a chance and the business interests of the country suffered. During all this time the Government did not offer a single constructive idea for the solution of this vexed problem. They acted as though it was no concern of theirs.

But the Right Honourable Arthur Meighen did not dodge the issue. He met it squarely. In effect he said:

"You can't afford to allow the situation as regards freight rates to continue, for it will be fatal to business. We have a Railway Commission appointed to deal with freight rates, and the only course to take is to turn the whole matter over to it. Until this is done there will be nothing but dissatisfaction. In the meantime you will have to cancel the rates that are causing all the trouble."

The shippers recently took the question to the Railway Commission which promptly adopted the course which Mr. Meighen said would have to be taken. The Commission ordered the withdrawal of the rates that have been causing the trouble and asserted its right to deal with the whole subject of rates.

Do we or he might The Right Honourable Mackenzie King and his Government have had to face this problem. They have done all the dodging they can get away with, and now they have to face the music. And what did the Premier say at Vancouver recently? Why, he had to take the position assumed by the Right Honourable Arthur Meighen long ago, and admit that the Railway Commission was the only body competent to deal with railway rates.

This is another tribute to the Conservative Leader's courage in meeting a problem face to face. Like a wise counsellor, whose advice is sought, he frankly tells the country what will have to be done. Sometimes the advice may be rather unpleasant, but he would rather tell the truth and run risk of disappointing, than act the part of a hypocrite. After all, such a policy will win out with the country, for those who have important interests at stake cannot afford to take chances on an artful dodger.

The use of Miller's Worm Powders insures healthy children so far as the ailments attributable to worms are concerned. A high mortality among children is traceable to worms. These zap the energies of infants so that they are unable to maintain the battle for life and succumb to sickness. This preparation gives promise of health and keeps it.

PUT SAFETY LAST

British Sailor Reversed the Usual Order of Things.

Much to Be Said in Commendation of the Change, Says Writer in Eastern Magazine.

Captain Campbell, V. C., royal navy, hero of mystery ships, used to put in his night order book as a closing admonition, "safety last."

Time and again Captain Campbell took a chance and came through, while the cautious took their caution down to Davy Jones' locker.

America was discovered because Christopher Columbus dared to jump across the sky line. The restless and audacious enterprise which advanced the frontiers of American business was put a carrying on of the explorer and the pioneer.

The sheltered-life theory means either premature demise or an oversupply of weaklings. The street that breeds strong men is not Easy street. Danger and risk are as essential in molding strength as air and food are, observes the Saturday Evening Post.

America would do well at this moment to call back something of the devil-may-care bravado of her cattle kings and her clipper captains. They were strong men with strong vices, but also with strong virtues; pungent characters in a pungent age.

The life of Sir William Van Horne is a great sermon on the text "Safety last." Donald Smith and his colleagues had a vision of clamping all British North America with an iron band. They came to Minneapolis to consult with James J. Hill.

"You need," said Hill, "a man of great mental and physical power to put the line through. Van Horne can do it."

From the first the scheme was problematical. The railway men who undertook it was ridicule his career. Van Horne had before him an assured success in the United States, but as a friend put it, "He went off chasing rabbits into the wilderness." The task which called him was the execution of the greatest railway project in the world. The natural obstacles to be overcome were unparalleled. Undaunted he turned his back on the easy places and ventured forth.

Said one of his engineers, "He always acted as if nothing were impossible. He was not always right. He was the kind that would go out on the side of a mountain and say 'Blow that down.' He would not ask if it could be done. He would say, 'Do it!' Sometimes the thing was impossible under ordinary circumstances, but he had such luck. Some accident or other would happen so the thing could be blown up or torn down without any harm. His luck, his daring and his fearlessness just carried him through." Or, to put it more clearly, pluck carried him through.

Physical obstacles were the least of the opposition met by Van Horne and his colleagues. "On one fateful day in July," writes Professor Skelton, "when the final passage of the bill was being tensely awaited, the Canadian Pacific, which can borrow $50,000,000 any day before breakfast, was within three hours of bankruptcy for lack of a few hundred thousand dollars."

Optimism is a nice word, but right now pluck is a thousand times more what we are needing. Amid the softness of today we need more stoutness of heart. There is a Gaelic phrase, "sgiurd fear ferrail," which means "the sons of manly men." On the floor of the stock exchange, on the floor of the rocking foundry, wherever there is hesitation there is a call for the sons of manly men, a call for those who are possessed of that good old-fashioned Anglo-Saxon virtue of pluck.

Slangy but Sincere.

Without my knowledge son asked his gang to come over for a Halloween party. Neither amusement nor food had been arranged for, but we made an impromptu party, rolled back furniture, turned back rugs, and gave them the house. I unearthed the material for Halloween games, raided the ice-box, and afterward took them out to the kitchen, where we cracked nuts and made fudge.

When they said good-night, son bethought himself.

"Why, say, kids," he said, "mother did not even know you were coming. I'll say she's some Sheba!"

And the boys said, "I'll say she is!"

Paper That Can Be Washed.

Many possible uses suggest themselves for a special paper recently produced and patented by a Japanese inventor. This paper, according to an illustrated article published in the Popular Mechanics Magazine, is remarkably strong and can be crumpled up and washed with soap and water, much as one would wash clothes. So durable is this paper that it can be used as a covering for umbrellas, and when soiled can be easily cleaned at home.

Watching Forests.

New York is the first state in which a reinventory of the wood-using industries has been made, says the American Forestry Magazine. Several other states have now engaged in similar work, the value of which from an educational standpoint alone cannot be overestimated. The more states that will hold the stop watch, so to speak, on forest depletion, the more clearly will we be able to gauge the rational effects of its progress.

For Frost Bites and Chilblains. — Chilblains come from undue exposure to slush and cold and frost bites from the icy winds of winter. In the treatment of either an excellent preparation is Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, as it counteracts the inflammation and relieves the pain. The action of the oil is prompt and its application is extremely simple.

The old-fashioned wife used to sing softly: "Abide with me".

The modern wife demands flatly: "Divide with me, or abide with somebody else."

After 10 Years of Asthma Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy proved the only relief for one grateful user, and this is but one case among many. Little wonder that it has now become the one recognized remedy on the market. It has earned its fame by its never failing effectiveness. It is earning its way as it has done for years. It is the greatest asthma specific within the reach of suffering humanity.

Rev. A. H. Creegan For Chaplaincy?

The latest report is that Major (Rev.) A. H. Creegan, of Deseronto, is likely to be named to the Protestant chaplaincy in the Portsmouth Penitentiary. Major (Rev.) W. E. Kidd's name has also been mentioned, but in view of his present position as curate of St. George's, it is believed that the appointment will go to an outside man, and that Rev. Mr. Creegan, a former Kingstonian, and a very popular clergyman, will get the appointment.

Presentation.

On Thursday evening last, about forty friends of Mr. and Mrs. James Blythe gathered at their home, and presented them with a beautiful mantle clock before their departure for Toronto, where they purpose making their home. The presentation was made by Rev. Father O'Connor, who in a few well chosen words, expressed the regret of all at the loss of this highly thought of family from the parish, and wished them God speed in the future. Mr. and Mrs. Blythe very feelingly replied. The remainder of the evening was spent in music and the singing of old time songs, etc., and the serving of a tasty lunch.

Masquerade Party.

A jolly good time was spent at a masquerade party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vandebogart, on Friday night last. The members of the A. O. T. S. Bible Class of Grace Church gathered shortly after eight o'clock, and the costumes were worn both striking and unique. An interesting program had been prepared, consisting of music, readings, games, etc., followed by two dialogues which were highly interesting and laughable. After a short business session was held, refreshments were served, consisting of pie, cake, sandwiches, home-made ice cream and coffee. Before leaving for their homes a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Vandebogart for their kind hospitality.

Strathcona Orioles.

"Do noble things not dream them all day long." This must have been the slogan of the Orioles on Saturday last at Newburgh. Tamworth were out to win in basketball and so were "The Birds", hence the clash. Chance of victory was equal as both teams were on unfamiliar grounds, which were kindly loaned us by Newburgh for the day. Tamworth, as usual, showed they were by no means behind when basketball skill was handed out, but the Orioles held their own through the game. The playing is perhaps best told by the score, 20-6, in favour of the Orioles. Miss Redden, of Tamworth, showed herself to be a capable umpire. We are glad to relate the game ended with no broken bones, though one of our Birds had her wing badly bent. As usual we found our opponents good sports and hope to have a chance of playing them again.

LARGE SHIPMENT OF "BEE-KIST" HONEY

Napanee is fast becoming an important centre for the production and distribution of honey. On Wednesday of this week a carload, made up as follows, was billed for Montreal, where it will be re-shipped to Europe for the European trade:

212 boxes, containing 120 lbs. each, gross weight 28,620 lbs.
279 boxes, containing 60 lbs. each, gross weight 18,135 lbs.

A total of 46,755 lbs.

This honey was produced by the Apiaries of Fred. Hanna, Milton Pringle, Harold Thompson, E. H. Robertson, Henry Rook, Chas. Thompson and A. J. Wilson.

It is a growing evidence of the gross of co-operation and the satisfactory handling of the honey crop that practically all the large producers in the locality and many of the smaller ones have become members of the Ontario Honey Producers' Association.

Under this organization strict grading rules are observed, the trade name "Beekist" is adopted, the cans are uniform, and the honey of a guaranteed texture and quality.

So popular has the "Beekist" become that now, in October, practically all the honey crop has been marketed.

The success of the movement in this locality is now assured, and for that much credit must go to Mr. Harold Thompson, the efficient and diligent agent.

The Victorian Order of Nurses.

The regular monthly meeting of the Executive Committee will be held in the Public Library, on Tuesday evening, November 4th, at 7 p.m. All members of the Order, as well as the Executive, are requested to attend.

Secretary.

A. Y. P. A. at Camden East.

The members of St. Luke's branch of the A. Y. P. A. held their opening meeting last Friday evening. A service was held in the church at 8 o'clock, which was largely attended by parishioners and friends. The Rev. C. E. Clarke, Rector of Christ Church, Belleville, was the special preacher, and delivered a very forceful and helpful address to the young people. During the offertory, a solo was effectively rendered by Mrs. Ferrier. After the service the congregation adjourned to the Parish Hall, where refreshments were served by the A. Y. P. A., and a short programme rendered. The instrumental number by Mrs. Hilton Robinson, and the vocal solos by Mrs. Ferrier, were greatly enjoyed. The Rector outlined the programme for the winter months, and the Rev. Mr. Clarke also spoke on the various phases of the A. Y. P. A. organization and its work.

Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.

UNIQUE FILM TO BE SHOWN AT WONDERLAND THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6th

How a change remark may lead to an expenditure of thousands, of dollars and cause hundreds of miles of travel is strikingly illustrated in the cases of Mr. Hugh D. Wilson, General Manager of the 65 Theatres comprising the New Zealand Theatres Trust, and Mr. W. Leonard Howe, the famous Australian Actor, both of whom arranged in Toronto Canadian premiere of their almost Internationally famous entertainment founded on "The Story of My Life", written by John Lee, the only man who three times faced death on the scaffold and lived to again move, a free man, among his fellow beings, having meanwhile earned world wide renown as "The Man They Could Not Hang".

Seated in Mr. Wilson's office, some eight years ago, a chance reference to Lee brought from Mr. Howe the remark "What a subject for a moving picture". The idea was too good to shelve, for fiction holds no more thrilling story than this absolutely truthful narrative of John Lee, convicted, sentenced, even placed upon the scaffold while vehemently protesting his innocence. The financial genius of Mr. Wilson, with the artistic ability of Mr. Howe soon made possible the seven reeled feature now on a world tour, with over 25000 miles of water travel alone to the credit of its personally piloted existence. The picture completed, the promoters took a Theatre in Sydney, New South Wales, and achieved there one of the biggest successes ever known. For seven years countless companies played it all over Australia and New Zealand, followed a trip to South Africa with equally pleasing results; two years ago Mr. Wilson and Mr. Howe first set foot in London, England, where they sent out twelve companies playing the country from end to end, seven are still touring their itinerary this year, including Brighton, Margate and Sneetwick. On Thursday next the picture, with its graphic incidents related personally by Mr. Howe, its appealing special music interpreted by Mrs. Doreen Thompson, its atmospheric prologue staged by Mr. Howe, and performed principally by Miss Doreen Thompson (as Lee's Mother) and George Villiers (as Lee himself) will be presented for the first time in Napanee, on Thursday night, Nov. 6th. Two performances at 7 and 9. This picture has been a success in every town played in Canada. 44a

ADOLPHUSTOWN WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The Adolphustown Women's Institute held their October meeting on Wednesday, October 22nd, at the home of Mrs. W. D. Roblin. The President, Mrs. J. S. Johnson, and Vice President, Mrs. C. F. Curlette, were unavoidably absent, and the meeting was presided over by Mrs. C. F. Allison.

A substantial sum was put aside of the funds on hand for the maintenance of the old U. E. L. cemetery. It was also decided to add more books to the Institute library.

Miss Lillian Carr gave a very excellent paper, which was much appreciated.

It was pointed out by a member that as our motto is "For Home and Country", we stand for the broadest Canadianism in every way. Politically and unswervingly place the Province of Ontario as the "Banner Province", by giving the O. T. A. a handsome majority, and ten dollars was voted the O. T. A. Campaign Fund.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the home of Mrs. W. H. Duffett, on Wednesday, Nov. 12th, at 2.30 p.m.

HENRY J. ALLISON CALLED SUDDENLY

The very sudden death of Henry J. Allison, which occurred Saturday forenoon, at his home, startled his neighbors and those with whom he had been conversing within a few minutes of his death. Mr. Allison had been at the market purchasing supplies and had returned to his home. He was out in the yard when he was stricken, and although a neighbor saw him collapse life had fled before he could be carried into the house. Mr. Allison was a well known and highly respected citizen. He was born in Lennox County of U. E. L. parentage, but had been a resident of Picton for upwards of forty years. Mr. and Mrs. Allison, (before marriage Annie M. Losee, daughter of the late Wakeman Losee), celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on September 21st of this year. Mr. Allison had served the Corporation as Councillor and Assessor, and for many years assisted the Prince Edward Agricultural Society in handling finances at various events and as Auditor. He acted as local treasurer of the Patriotic Fund in war time. He was an Oddfellow of long standing and an official of the Bay of Quinte Lodge. A brother, Mr. John Allison, resides in Napanee on the Palace Road, and a sister, Mrs. Jacob Allenbrack, lives in Belleville. Oddfellows and citizens turned out largely to the funeral on Tuesday. Rev. J. J. Mellow conducted the church service. The pall-bearers were Andrew Welbanks, T. Y. Hess, E. C. Garbutt, W. V. Pettet, Dr. A. C. Demille, F. W. Martin. Interment was made in Glenwood. Those from a distance attending the funeral were Mr. Marshall Bogart, Mr. and Mrs. John Allison, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allison, Napanee; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Allenbrack, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Dagblish, Campbellford; Mrs. W. A. Johnson, Toronto.—The Picton Times, Thursday, October 30th, 1924.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Alfred McCutcheon.

Mrs. Alfred McCutcheon died on October 29th, following a life of delicate health and suffering. Six months ago she became very ill and it was apparent that she could not survive, but on the 28th of October she passed peacefully away, closing her earthly career. She had remarkable literary talent and did much writing under pen name wishing to be obscure, but she has passed beyond this veil of tears, where there is no more pain, neither sorrow nor sighing.

Everything was done that loving hands could do to alleviate her suffering, but her work over she passed to be where loved ones gathered home. She was a loving wife and mother, and was esteemed by all who knew her, having a kind word for everyone.

She was the only child of James McKeown and Margaret McKeown, the former predeceasing her twelve years ago, and mother still living at the age of ninety years. She was born in the Village of Croydon in the year 1850, and was united in marriage to Alfred McCutcheon, in the year of 1882. Besides her sorrowing husband she leaves to mourn her loss five children, Fred, Carman, Manitoba; May, of Toronto; Frank, of Robliu; Mrs. A. Graham, of Roblin, and Mrs. G. Cook, of Selby.

The funeral services were conducted by her Pastor, Rev. C. J. Wilson, at the Methodist Church, the Choir singing the hymn she liked so well, "That Will Be Glory For Me". The remains were laid to rest in the family plot at Roblin cemetery, there to await the great resurrection morn.

Mr. John McLaughlin.

The death occurred Monday at his late home, in the Township of Richmond, of Mr. John McLaughlin, at the advanced age of 78 years. The deceased had been in ill health since April, having suffered a stroke at that time, and although the best medical aid was procured, it was found that owing to his great age nothing but temporary relief could be given. He was an honored and esteemed resident of the Township for many years and leaves a wide circle of friends who sincerely regret his passing. He leaves to mourn his loss his devoted widow, three sons and three daughters.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNUAL SALE AND CONCERT

The annual St. Andrew's Hallowe'en bazaar and concert was held in the church building on Thursday afternoon and evening last. The afternoon was given over to the sale of fancy and useful articles and cooked foods of various kinds. The Sunday School room, in which the sale was held, was prettily decorated for the occasion in colors and trimmings which carried out the hallowe'en idea. Yellow and black candles dotted the tables, witches in various postures formed the curtains and the walls, while the proverbial black cat was everywhere in evidence, and yellow lights and flowers combined to give the room a decidedly attractive and pleasing appearance.

A large table from which afternoon tea was served, occupied the centre of the room, and around it was grouped an art table, a plain goods table, a candy and food table and a candy booth. On the Art table was a goodly quantity of articles artistically designed and worked, suitable mostly for gifts. Alongside this and a little to the right was a stand from which might be purchased goods of a more utilitarian character. On the other side the cooked food table and the candy booth were bountifully filled and entirely arranged, the latter, needless to say, was especially popular, especially with the young folk.

In the evening the concert was held in the auditorium of the Church and was of a decidedly sacred character, and was arranged and conducted by Mrs. E. Madden, the popular and talented local musician. A mixed chorus of forty voices, chosen from the various Church Choirs, sang as a first number a cantata, "Penitence, Pardon and Peace", by Maunder. The harmony was well sustained throughout and the parts well balanced. The solo parts were taken by Mrs. Burritt and Mr. Marvin Rathbun, Mrs. Burritt is always a favorite in Napanee. It was as a special favor that she was persuaded to take part at this time, and her work was especially appreciated by the audience. Napanee, too, is fortunate in having so good a man of the male quality and training of Mr. Rathbun, who is a master in his own range, and delighted the audience with his solo work. Miss Dwyer and Miss Georgie Robinson lived up to the reputations that they have won for themselves in this district as popular and talented singers. Their solo work added much to the beauty and perfection of the cantata. Mrs. A. Winters presided at the organ and as well conducted the chorus. Miss Helen Vanluven accompanied at the piano. The perfect time of these two instruments and the sympathetic and artistic rendering of the duetts were something that will long be remembered by those who heard them.

During the evening Mr. Waite, of the Bethany Bands, sang "Rest in the Lord" from the Elijah. He has a pleasing tenor voice and is a great acquisition to the musical talent of the town. Mr. Reg. Wiseman rendered "Lovely Are Thy Dwellings" by Liddle. Mr. Wiseman has a voice of excellent range and tone. He sang the difficult song with a fine feeling and sympathy. He will undoubtedly be heard from in the future as his voice matures and develops.

The closing chorus was "Psalm 150" rendered by Prosser, and the Mendelssohn Choir numbers and was a real triumph by the local organization. In rhythm, attack, and tonal qualities it was all that a most exacting audience could require.

It was unfortunate that so many counter attractions were on against a full house, but the rapt attention of the audience and the many requests for a repeat, show full deep appreciation on the part of all those who were privileged to hear this most splendid production.

UNIQUE MEMORIAL UNVEILED AT BATH

Ceremony in Honor of First Steamboat Launched in Canada.

The village of Bath was the scene of a very unique and interesting ceremony Tuesday, when a memorial to the first steamship launched in Canada was unveiled near the wharf in the historic place.

The memorial has been erected by the Canadian Historical Society, and there was a notable gathering of people for the event. General Cruikshank, of the Department of Archives, Ottawa, attended the unveiling on behalf of the Federal Government; while others present were Col. W. N. Ponton, Mr. Donald G. Bleecker and Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, of Belleville, and Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C., of Napanee. Rev. Royal Dean Swayne, formerly of Christ Church, Belleville, is Rector of the Parish at Bath, and took part in the ceremony.

It is a queer coincidence that on the farm of Col. Ponton stands the trunk of a tree known as "the steamboat limb," up which his grandfather and friend climbed to see the first steamboat pass up the Bay of Quinte.

The vessel in honor of which the memorial was erected, was the steamer "Frontenac," launched in August, 1816, costing $160,000. It was built by Lt.-Colonel Bleecker Finkle, widow of Henry Finkle and sister of Squire John D. Bleecker, who was the great grandfather of Mr. D. G. Bleecker.

MEMBER OF HALLOWE'EN PARTY SHOT IN ODESSA

Percy Clarke, Son of Mr. S. W. Clarke Odessa, is in a Critical Condition Was Shot Through Right Lung While Masquerading in the Village —Mr. U. V. Snider is Under Arrest—Faces Charge of "Shooting With Intent to do Bodily Harm".

Percy Clarke, the fifteen year old son of Mr. S. W. Clarke, Odessa, was shot through the right lung about eight o'clock Friday evening by a revolver alleged to have been in the hands of Mr. U. V. Snider, while dressed in a masquerade costume for Hallowe'en night and engaged in a serenade in the village. The wounded boy was rushed to the surgery of Dr. Munro where a first aid dressing was applied and the hemorrhage checked, afterwards being taken by ambulance to the Kingston General Hospital where the bullet was removed by Dr. R. J. Gardiner, assisted by Dr. Munro.

On Saturday morning Dr. Gardiner stated that the bullet, probably a .38 calibre, passed completely through the top of the right lung, being removed from under the skin of the boy's back. "Complications may set in," said the doctor, "and it is impossible at this stage to forecast the effects of the wound. The patient is in a critical condition."

Mr. Snider, who, it is alleged, did the shooting, was arrested at about 9 p.m. by Chief of Police Barrett of Napanee, who took charge of the case, and was arraigned before Magistrate Hutton of Napanee Saturday morning in the Police Court, being charged with "shooting with intent to do bodily harm."

Information in connection with the affair has been given by several youths who were with the boy Clarke to the effect that they were dressed in costume for Hallowe'en night, and as to the usual larks, and it is alleged, that on approaching the residence of Mr. Snider, who has charge of the Odessa telephone exchange, a shot was fired by Mr. Snider, wounding Percy Clarke.

BOXING TOURNAMENT

One of the most successful boxing bouts which have taken place in Napanee in recent years, was held in the Armouries Friday night, when under the auspices of "D" Company, Frontenac Club, nine events were pulled off, which drew rounds of applause from the spectators. This event had been eagerly looked forward to by a large number of sporting fans for some time, and as a result there was a fairly large attendance. A regulation size ring had been erected in the centre of the Armouries, which provided a good viewpoint for the spectators.

The several bouts were as follows:
Ballard (Napanee) vs. Fraser (Napanee).
Smith (Napanee) vs. Deschane (Napanee).
Fraser (Napanee) vs. McGowan (Kingston).
Bentley (Napanee) vs. Plagord (Kingston).
Berk (Kingston) vs. Bartelle (Kingston).
Ellis (Queen's) vs. Pettitt (Queen's).
Walker (Queen's) vs. Bartelle (Queen's).
Smith (Queen's) vs. Red Legion (Kingston).

Each and every bout was keenly contested and the large crowd enjoyed themselves to the full.

Mr. Billy Hughes of Kingston refereed in a very impartial manner. The officers of B. Company are to be congratulated on bringing such a splendid event to Napanee, and standing as it will be a precedent to all other similar events to be staged in the near future. At the conclusion of the events the participants with the officers and members adjourned to the club rooms, where refreshments were served.

A pleasing interlude in the program was a presentation of a handsome gift by the officers of B. Company to Mr. W. Masters, who is retiring from the active work of looking after the Armouries. Mayor MacGregor, who presided at the opening of the program, made the presentation.

Address and Presentation

On Tuesday evening, Nov. 4th, seventy friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Manion, River Road, to bid them farewell before leaving for their new home in Toronto, and presented them with a purse of money. The address was read by Mrs. John Carle and the presentation made by Mr. Jas. Doyle, to which Mr. Manion replied in a few well chosen words for his thankfulness to his kind neighbors and friends. Games and dancing, etc., were enjoyed until the wee sma' hours, everybody bidding farewell by singing "They're a jolly good fellow".

Mr. and Mrs. James Manion and daughter, Margaret.

We, your neighbors and friends, have met here this evening to express our greatest sorrow at your departure from our neighborhood, after being a life-long resident with us.

We have always found you good neighbors and friends to all, and always willing to lend a helping hand in time of need, of which we are showing our appreciation by asking you to accept this purse of money as a small token of our remembrance. We kindly ask you to buy something with it in your new home in remembrance of your old neighbors.

We hope our loss to be someone else's gain.

Signed on behalf of the neighborhood.

Washerwoman Owns Car.

If you lived in Topeka you would often see a long seven-passenger touring car gliding down the street, the back seat piled high with baskets of washing and a colored woman at the steering wheel, says Capper's Weekly. The enamel finish of the car glistens brightly, but not more brightly than the smile of the woman at the wheel, for she is the owner of the car and bought and paid for it with washings such as now heap the back seat. Last summer, when the days were long and hot, "good drying days," her favorite washing machine often accommodated as many as nine family washings in one day. If you want anything bad enough you can get it.

Claim Electrical Cure.

An electric cure for headache is one of the electrical appliances used in the medical world. The ornamental head band is equipped with wires which carry current from a battery. The slight tingle of electricity has a curative effect, according to its inventor.

Another electric device is a little electrical rod carrying a powerful ray, which is used in the treatment of toothache. This device is used to treat diseased gums and abscesses, and is said to bring relief in severe pain.

Six May Listen In.

Six persons may listen in to radio concerts simultaneously and with rubber-tube ear pieces instead of the more expensive amplifiers and loud-speaking horns. A Pennsylvania man has designed a six-headphone attachment, shown in Popular Mechanics Magazine, that fits into the ear apertures of two receivers and possesses six branch tubes, to which the half dozen listening contrivances are affixed.

Worthy Citizens.

It was one of those overheard conversations:

"Yes, they're a fine couple, regular 100 per cent Americans. They're doing pretty good now, too, and they're saving so's the boy can go to college later on."

"What business is he in?" the second talker inquired.

"Oh, didn't you know?" the first one replied. "He's in the bootlegging business."

Wise and experienced mothers know when their children are troubled with worms and lose no time in applying Miller's Worm Powders, a most effective vermifuge. It is absolute in clearing the system of worms and restoring those healthy conditions without which there can be no comfort for the child, or hope of robust growth. It is a most trustworthy worm exterminator.

POETS OF MORE IMPORTANCE

What Ambassador Page Discussed With Sir Edward Grey During Most Serious Crisis.

Ambassador Page's letters sufficiently reveal his fondness for Sir Edward Grey and the splendid relations that existed between the two men. The sympathetic cogs which they struck upon their first meeting only became stronger with time. A single moment of the war illustrates the kind of fellow-feeling that drew them together. It took place at a time when the tension over the blockade was especially threatening, according to "Life and Letters of Walter H. Page," in the World's Work. One afternoon Page asked for a formal interview; he had received another exceedingly disagreeable protest from Washington, with instructions to push the matter to a decision; the ambassador left his embassy with a grave expression upon his face and his associates were especially worried over the outcome. So critical did the situation seem that the most important secretaries gathered in the ambassador's room, awaiting his return, their nerves strung almost to the breaking point. An hour went by and nothing was heard from Page; another hour slowly passed and still the ambassador did not return. The faces of the assembled staff lengthened as the minutes went by; what was the ambassador doing at the foreign office? So prostrated an interview could portend only evil; already, in the minds of these nervous young men, ultimatums were flying between the United States and Great Britain, and even war might be hanging in the balance. Another hour drew out its weary length; the room became dark, dinner time was approaching and still Page failed to make his appearance. At last, when his distracted subordinates were almost prepared to go in search of their chief, the ambassador walked jauntily in, smiling and apparently carefree. What had happened? What was to be done about the detained ship?

"What ships?" asked Page, and then suddenly he remembered. "Oh, yes—those." That was all right; Sir Edward had at once promised to release them; it had been settled in a few minutes.

"Then why were you so long?"

The truth came out; Sir Edward and Page had quickly turned from intercepted cargoes to the more congenial subject of Wordsworth, Tennyson and other favorite poets, and the rest of the afternoon had been consumed in discussing this really important business.

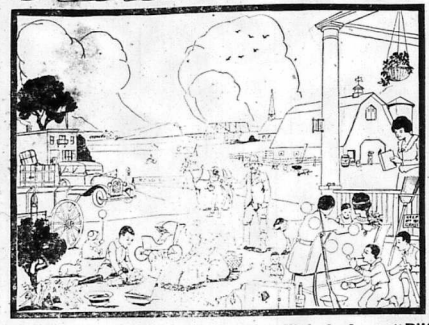
THREE OPPORTUNITIES TO WIN $1000

$1,000 $1,000 $1,000



How Many Objects in This Picture Begin With the Letter "B"?

The above picture contains a number of objects beginning with the letter "B"—like "boy", good look at the picture above and see how many you can find. Begin with the letter "B"—like "boy", "bunny", "baby" and so forth. Nothing is hidden; you don't have to turn the picture upside down. Make a list of all the objects in the picture the names of which begin with the letter "B". Have the whole family join in—see who can find the most. Don't miss any. Fifty cash prizes will be awarded for the neatest correct list of words submitted. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of visible objects shown in this picture starting with the letter "B" will be awarded first prize; second best, second prize, and so forth.

Young and Old Join in the Fun

Napanee and Eganville announces to-day another puzzle game which all can participate in—from the tiniest child to grandfather and grandmother. No effort is too small but that the poorest eyesight can see it. It is a test of skill. Your ability to find "B" words determines the prize you win. Right after supper this evening, gather all the members of your family together, give each of them a pencil and a sheet of paper—and see who can find the most "B" Words. You will be surprised to find how little a list of words you can get with a few minutes' study. Sit down NOW and try it—Then, send in your list and try for the big prizes.

OBSERVE THESE RULES

1. Any man, woman or child who lives in Canada, and is not a resident of Toronto, and who is not an employe of The Mail and Empire, or a member of an employe's family, may submit an answer.

2. All answers must be mailed by November 22nd 1924, and addressed to Puzzle Editor, The Mail and Empire, Toronto.

ROBBING PROVIDENCE OF THE CREDIT

It is amusing to hear Honourable J. A. Robb pointing to the favourable balance of trade as a proof of the good that the King Government is doing the country. And yet this is what he actually did recently at Trenton. He said that on the 12 months ending September, exports exceeded imports by $260,000,000. Then comparing this with an excess of imports over exports amounting to $26,000,000 during the 12 months ending March, 1921 he said, "See what a great change we have wrought since the days of the Meighen regime".

Mr. Robb did not tell his audience that the heavy exports of the trade period he referred to, were due to the fact that last year Canada had the largest wheat crop in her history. She raised about 500,000,000 bushels or 70,000,000 more than she ever had done before. This enabled us to export 294,000,000 bushels.

What had the King Government to do with the producing of that great crop of wheat? Absolutely nothing. It was the work of Providence alone. But Honourable J. A. Robb claims the credit for it. This is the inference to be drawn from his remarks, if they mean anything.

But if the King Government is to claim credit for the record crop of 1924, it must also be charged with responsibility for the light crop of the current year. The Government's own figures show that instead of raising 450,000,000 bushels of wheat, as they did last year, this year the prairie provinces are only credited with 267,000,000 bushels, or about 175,000,000 bushels less. Of course a government can't be praised for a good crop or criticized for a bad one, which goes to show how ridiculous is Mr. Robb's claim of credit for the large favourable trade balance that followed the big crop of 1923.

Nor did Mr. Robb make mention of the fact that to a very large extent the large favourable trade balance was one also in part to the jump in wheat prices. Just now wheat is selling for at least 50 cents a bushel more than it was at this time last year. No wonder that the export figures are higher, but Mr. Robb says nothing about this.

Turning back to the year 1920-21 with which Mr. Robb makes his comparisons, what does one find? Instead of a crop of over 500,000,000 bushels of wheat, it was only 267,189,000 bushels. If during that year of Mr. Meighen's administration the crop had been anything like as big as it was last year, the trade balance would have been higher than it was during the year that has recently closed.

The truth is that the members of the King Government, in their efforts to argue to prove that the country is prosperous that they have been compelled to claim credit for the credit that rightly belongs to Providence for the crops.

For Catarrh.—It is one of the chief recommendations of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil that it can be used internally with as much success as it can outwardly. Sufferers from catarrh will find that the Oil when used according to directions will give very prompt relief. Many sufferers from this ailment have found relief in the Oil and have sent testimonials.

Jaundice Invades Country.

Acute infectious Jaundice is now epidemic in this country for the twentieth time in seventy-two years. The New York state department of health announced in January that this prostrating and distressing malady had appeared in virtually every section of the state, says the New York Times.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, local health commissioner, issued a statement to the effect that jaundice had made its appearance in this city and asked physicians attached to the hospital service, as well as those in private practice, to co-operate with his department in ascertaining more fully the facts with reference to the disease by reporting any cases that had come to their attention in the last two or three months and submitting important facts regarding the clinical histories of their cases.

Dictaphone Serves Many.

Connecting ten hearing tubes to one dictaphone, so that the same number of pupils can take dictation simultaneously, is the method employed by a typewriting school in New York city. The single dictaphone is placed near a table, around which are grouped the students, and the machine has a pipe, or metal tube, extending from it for the connection of the earpieces. —Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Mrs. Leeman says: "Carnol saved my life—many thanks to Carnol"

But read her letter. It tells her story better than we can. "I feel it my duty to write you about your wonderful medicine Carnol. In January I had an operation for appendicitis. The pain I suffered before the operation and the loss of blood afterwards left me so weakened and run down that I was unable to go about on my feet. I just had to be around all the time. The doctor said I must try to take iron for my blood for it was so thin. I had anemia and folks said I had only a short time to live. Carnol saved my life —many thanks to Carnol. I have gained about ten pounds in three months. After every meal I used to have indigestion and heartburn so bad that the pain was intense." A dose of Carnol would give me immediate relief. Now I am absolutely cured of both. I had severe headaches and pains across my back and they have also disappeared.

This is how I started using Carnol. I asked a friend about Carnol. She said it was awfully good. Her doctor had recommended it to her to take after she had been in bed for months and she was completely cured. I called up our druggist and asked him about Carnol. He recommended it but said he was just out of it and wanted me to take a bottle of beef, iron and wine, but I said, No, I want Carnol. So he said he would send and get me some. Just as soon as it came I commenced to take it and it has renewed my blood and given me a wonderful appetite. I never have to take a laxative with this medicine. I cannot recommend your medicine highly enough. It is just exactly what the system needs."—Mrs. Wilson H. Leeman, Ivanhoe, Ont. 9-24

ONTARIO TO HAVE TAX ON GASOLENE NEXT YEAR?

Much To Be Said in Favor of the Proposed "Gas" Tax, Provided It Is Not Imposed as a Surtax on the Present Motor Vehicle License Imposts, Say Motor League Officials.

The commendatory allusions of the Provincial Treasurer, Hon. Col. Price, to the proposed "gas" tax in the course of recent speeches, in addition to what has been said on the subject by the Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Public Highways, would seem to indicate that the Government of Ontario has made up its mind to bring in a bill during the coming session of the Provincial Legislature that will enable it to impose a "gas" tax.

Much is to be said in favor of a "gas" impost provided it does not increase the already heavy incubus of taxation that the motorist is required to bear, as Officials of the Ontario Motor League have pointed out.

If the license tax is reduced on an average by the amount of the gas tax paid by the average motorist of this province, then the Government will derive a revenue considerably in excess of that secured from the present license system by reason of the enormous and rapidly augmenting annual increase in motor tourists.

Last year a million United States motor cars entered this province. This year approximately two million will have done so by the end of December — a 100 per cent. gain in a year. Approximately three million (a fifty per cent increase) is not an unreasonable estimate of the number of United States motor tourists' cars that will visit the province during the coming year. This much-to-be-desired invasion through a "gas" tax will very greatly increase the Government's revenue from motor vehicles without increasing the tax on local motorists' one penny. On the basis of the consumption of gasoline in Ontario last year, a one-cent-per-gallon "gas tax" would yield a revenue of a million dollars per annum. The Government, of course, is in receipt of the increment from the ever increasing number of cars in the province.

The gas tax, if not imposed as a surtax on the present license tax, is an equitable means of assessing motor vehicle owners for the use of the roads in that, approximately, the weight of vehicle and its mileage determine the extent of its road as well as its "gas" consumption.

Speaking at a meeting of the Ontario Motor Truck Owners' Association a year ago, Hon. Mr. Henry stated that a "gas" tax with a lowered license fee appealed to him "as a fair proposition".

Needless to say, the motorists of the province would be a unit in resenting the imposition of a "gas" tax as a surtax on the present license imposts, and that the Motor League and the seventy Affiliated Clubs would vehemently oppose it.

Forty of the States of the Union now impose a "gas" tax, as does also Quebec.

While a direct tourist tax would prove a very effective barrier to the entrance of United States motor tourists—our third greatest source of revenue from natural resources—a "gas" tax would not prove even a deterrent. The latter revenue derived from the tax on the sale of gasoline to the United States motor tourists would be "found money".

It has a high favor throughout Canada and its excellence has carried its fame beyond the seas. If it were double the price it would be a cheap liniment.

"I simply have to use Long Distance"

"I have sold as many as 32 customers in one morning by Long Distance. There is little difference in the cost of personal letters and Long Distance messages, and the advantage is all on the side of Long Distance. Competition in our line is too keen to take any chances."

When good customers are not too plentiful, why run chances by taking the time to write a letter that may have to be followed by another to straighten out some unexpected difficulty?

Be master of the situation. Call up your prospects by Long Distance and settle things immediately.

OLD MAN IN LOVE

Foolish Idea That Makes Him Object of Derision.

Fact Is That the Aging Are Much More in Need of Affection Than the Young.

Many men are as prone to fall in love in the October years of their lives as they were in the April period. There are numerous instances of hoar December marrying rosy May, asserts January Mortimer in the Continental edition of the London Daily Mail.

In the interest of racial vigor such unions are discouraged by public opinion, not only among civilized but also among primitive people. The children of aged fathers often possess marked intellectual qualities, but they are rarely very robust physically.

It is generally recognized also that marriages between old men and young women often prove unhappy for both partners. There are, however, notable exceptions to this rule.

The old man in love is a subject for banter and often an object of derision among his pequaintances. The dotard was a favorite butt for the humor of the old English comedy writers.

It is a common view that middle-aged persons ought to have "got over" amorous susceptibility. Highly practical, unsentimental people are wont to appraise love somewhat lightly, or to regard the passion as a species of malady or the folly of youth, which should be outgrown at fifty at latest. Very few elderly men have revealed their emotional experiences of love in the autumn of life. The thoughts and the sentiments which are considered natural and normal in early manhood are deemed unnatural and abnormal at the approach of the seventh age. This is the outcome of the tendency to determine age by dates.

It is well proved that only a proportion of men begin to feel "winter in the blood" at, fifty-five, and that the decline of the tender emotional feeling toward the opposite sex is a very gradual process in a vast number. It is also shown that marriage tends to lengthen the span of life in both sexes, to favor health and well-being, and to postpone the physical and mental signs of old age.

The lonely aging man may not renew his youth by falling in love and marrying, but a peaceful conjugal life will undoubtedly add to his chances of enjoying the last stage of his journey. For the old are even more in need of love than the young.

But the old man must steel his senses against the fascination of youthfulness. He should seek a companion in a woman not more than ten years his junior at the most.

"Trying" as Path to Success.

Trying, in a scientific sense, means years of labor and experiment. But if one new principle can be laid down as a result, or if one useful invention can be given to the world for all time, the labor is never in vain.

It is not true that anything can be done by trying. A stone-dust man could try his life out and never become a philosopher.

A man without a feeling for words could expend vain years seeking to become a writer.

But trying accomplishes many results that have long been deemed impossible.

It has brought mediocrity to real accomplishment and it has given talent a reputation for genius.

It is because trying is nothing but hard work and hard thought (for both of which the average man has a distaste) that it is not employed more often as a means of success.—John Blake in Chicago Daily News.

Remarkable Memory of Indian.

A native Indian of the Yakima tribe is said to have the most retentive memory in America. His brain cells register everything he hears or sees. During the war he served with the army in France, and was of much value in carrying long messages, observing positions, or checking supplies, according to report of the Indian bureau. When he was in camp he could call off a regimental roster and catalogue every item of equipment without any note or memorandum. On one occasion, after making a full report of observations to the extent of a thousand items or more, he repeated the full text of a lecture he had heard the night before. This was in the presence of the lecturer himself, and was pronounced perfect.

Radio and Crewless Vessels.

It is now possible to send a crewless vessel as far as radio impulses will carry. The same means can be used in sending a giant torpedo against a foe, regardless of how far distant the enemy might be, provided he is within reach of the radio. In vessels the device is attached to the fuel engine, the water engines and the steering mechanism, making it possible to guide, fuel and water by radio.

Damage for "Barnacle Bite."

The first claim paid by one of the leading insurance companies in 1886 was to a man in Galveston, Texas, who wrote that he was "bitten by a barnacle." Investigation demonstrated that he was from the fresh water state of Wisconsin and had merely clung to an iron post in the water when tossed by a comber and was sadly lacerated, about $37 worth.

I am twenty-six years old, have a nice farm and am thinking of taking a wife. What would you advise? I would advise you to be careful about whom wife you take.

During a lecture a well-known authority on economics mentioned the fact that in some parts the number of men was larger than that of women, and he added, humorously:

"I can therefore recommend the ladies to emigrate to that part of the world."

A young lady seated in one of the last rows, got up, and, full of indignation, was leaving the room rather noisily, whereupon the lecturer remarked:

"If did not mean that it need be done in such a hurry as that."

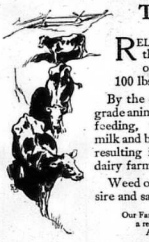
One Good Cow is worth Two Poor Ones



RELIABLE statistics show that the average cow produces only 3,000 lbs. of milk and 100 lbs. of butter in a year.

By the careful selection of better-grade animals for your herd and better feeding, the yearly production of milk and butter can be doubled easily, resulting in increased profit to the dairy farmer.

Weed out the culls, breed by a good sire and save your best heifers.

The Board of Commerce is handling the arrangements for Napanee's Poultry Days, and this year's event promises to eclipse all others. The dates set are Wednesday and Thursday, November 26th and 27th. Communications have been received from the following firms, in which they say they expect to have buyers at Napanee on the above dates: Mount Royal Creameries, Montreal; C. A. Mann & Co., London; Harris Abattoir, Toronto; Swift Canadian Co., Toronto; White Packing Co., Brockville; Poulin & Co., Montreal. It is altogether likely that other firms will be represented by local buyers.

Sixtieth Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Grass, one of the oldest couple in Hanover, New Hampshire, both in point of years and of the duration of their married life, quietly observed the 60th anniversary of their marriage in their home, on Reservoir Road, on October 22nd. The elderly couple were married Oct. 22nd, 1864, in Centreville, Ont., by the Rev. J. Ash, and always lived near there until 1900, when they with their son and family moved to New Hampshire. Mr. Grass will be 82 years of age Dec. 8th, while his wife is nearly ten years younger. Both are enjoying good health, Mr. Grass being a familiar figure in town, going nearly every morning to the creamery. Mrs. Grass attends to all her own household duties and is as active as a person many years younger. Friends called to congratulate them and left many beautiful gifts. Their good wishes follow them through all the coming years.

Sudden Death.

On Saturday afternoon, Ernest E. Smith, one of Napanee's young business men, passed away quite suddenly at the Kingston General Hospital. Some days ago he was taken ill with appendicitis and taken to the hospital for an operation. The operation was performed, but the poison had permeated his system and his case was hopeless. Mr. Smith came to Napanee some years ago as an auto mechanic and was for some time a partner of Mr. R. H. Paul, later starting in business for himself as an auto electric service station. He was working hard and making a success of his business. He leaves to mourn his loss, a heart-broken wife, but no family. The funeral took place from his late residence on Tuesday morning. Services were held in Trinity Church and interment at Glenwood cemetery, Picton. The Oddfellows' Lodges, of which deceased was a valued member, attended the service in a body.

Hallowe'en Party.

Dr. and Mrs. Cameron Wilson were At Home on Friday evening of last week to a number of weird-looking creatures who appeared to have been gathered from the four corners of the earth, Gipsies, witches, ghosts, and people of many nationalities were admitted to the house by a gloomy looking death's-head whose clanking chains and ghastly face were enough to make the visitors flee in terror. Instead of that they proceeded up a darkened staircase, at the top of which a ghost received them with an outstretched bony arm, joining the maskers in the living room, which was lighted only by pumpkin lanterns and the glow from a grate fire. The only sound was the dance music while a number of silent dancers moved gracefully (?) about the floor.

At midnight, a "Hallowe'en Supper" was served, a prettily decorated table being presided over by a witch clad in becoming orange and black, and served by a dainty little Hallowe'en lady who also carried out the predominating color scheme. The rooms were all draped in pumpkin yellow and black cats, witches and skeletons ornamented every wall. The lady's prize of a beautiful cup and saucer was presented to Miss Nellie Herring, who was dressed as a Romany fortune teller, and richly deserved first place. Mr. C. V. Davy, representing "Grandma", created the greatest amount of merriment, and was voted the gentlemen's prize.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BANQUET

The Committee on Sports and Recreation have arranged a Father and Son Banquet to be held in the Masonic Banquet Hall, on the evening of Friday, November 14th, at 6.30 o'clock. Judge Mott, of the Juvenile Court, Toronto, a jurist of Dominion-wide reputation, has been engaged as the speaker of the evening. The underlying reason for holding this banquet is to present to the men of this community the necessity for undertaking some practical scheme for furthering boys welfare work in its various branches. There is no doubt that Judge Mott is the best qualified of any man in this work in Canada to outline a working plan.

A father should bring his son to the banquet, and those having no son are requested to take this opportunity of affording some boy the privilege of hearing this famous man and becoming familiar with the work carried on in other centres.

RECEPTION TO THE GOVERNOR GENERAL

The Committee having charge of the reception to the Governor-General, Lord Byng and Lady Byng, of Vimy, on Monday, November 24th, have about completed their arrangements.

Their Excellencies and party will arrive at 10 a.m., and will be immediately escorted to the Armouries, where the Band and 254th Overseas Frontenac Regiment will be stationed. "B" Company will form a Guard of Honor. After receiving the address, His Excellency will be escorted through a line of Boy Scouts via the main entrance in the platform, where an Address of Welcome will be read. After the reply of Lord Byng, on his own behalf and on behalf of Her Excellency, opportunity will be given for presentation of His Majesty's representatives.

It is expected there will be a very large attendance from the town and the whole surrounding country as this is the first occasion, we believe, that has ever been given to greet and welcome so exalted and distinguished a visitor at Napanee. The whole ceremony will not exceed by 11 a.m. when the party will immediately entrain for the West by special train.

The entrance to the Armouries will be by the side entrances, and it is expected that everyone will be at the Armouries promptly at or before 10 o'clock, so that there may be neither delay nor interruption.

A more detailed advice in respect to the programme will be published in next issue. It is hoped the Armouries will be filled to show that our welcome to the Vice Regal visitors is a hearty one.

ODDFELLOWS' VENISON SUPPER

The beautiful and well accommodated banquet hall of Napanee Lodge No. 86, I. O. O. F., Harshaw Block, was the scene of one of the most enjoyable evenings of the season on Tuesday evening. The occasion was a venison supper, which was served at seven o'clock. The members of Napanee Lodge No. 86 and their friends are deeply indebted to Messrs. Blake Huyck and Harry Oldham, who supplied the venison; also Mr. Albert Steacy, who kindly looked after the roasting of it in his fine oven. Between eighty and ninety gathered round the festive board, and everyone seemed heartily pleased with the venison was the best they ever partook of.

Rev. Mr. Tanton asked grace, after which the assembly stood in silence for about a minute in memory of the Oddfellows and other Canadian lads who are lying their long sleep in Flanders fields in France.

After all had done full justice to the sumptuous repast, a very pleasant hour was spent in short, appropriate addresses by prominent Oddfellows and others.

Bro. Frank Bell, who was the chairman of the evening, in his opening remarks made references appropriate to the anniversary—Armistice Day—by referring to some of his personal experiences during the war in France. He referred particularly to conditions and incidents in connection with the Paschendale "scrap".

E. J. Sexsmith, M.P., gave a very interesting talk on the League of Nations.

Rev. W. R. Tanton dealt with the subject of "Oddfellowship, and its Relation to the Social and Industrial Problem".

These two addresses were the necessary features of the evening and were listened to with rapt attention, and at their conclusion were greeted with hearty sounds of applause.

Other speakers of the evening were Mayor A. McGregor, Bro. Bro. Graham, G. F. Ruttan, K.C., and U. M. Wilson, C.C.A.

At the termination of the banquet adjournment was made to the lodge room proper where the business of the evening was transacted, followed by the exemplification of the Third Degree.

WELCOMED TO STELLA

Rev. Mr. Ware and Family at St. Allan's Parish, Stella

"A very pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent by the members of St. Allan's parish, Stella, Amherst Island, when they met at the home of their Rector, Rev. Mr. Ware, on Monday evening, Nov. 3rd, for the purpose of extending their good wishes and hearty welcome to him and his family. The happy gathering of both young and old was especially honored by the attendance of two of the oldest and most esteemed members of the parish, Mrs. James Howard and Mr. Wm. H. Moutray, who have both passed the four-score mark.

The sentiments and hearty welcome extended to Mr. and Mrs. Ware were appreciably brought forth in the address of welcome, read by Mr. L. R. Neilson and signed by the Wardens on behalf of the members of the parish :

"Mr. and Mrs. Ware and Family,—We have gathered here this evening to offer you welcome on coming among us, and to further our acquaintance which we feel is bound to develop into warm friendship. We sincerely hope that your ministry in this parish will be most pleasant to you. Those of us who have been already in contact with you feel strongly assured that it will be most pleasant and beneficial to us, your parishioners, and that our relationship will be a happy one.

"We ask you to accept the humble gifts we have brought as a token of friendship and we assure you of our earnest desire to co-operate with you in the work of the church in this parish.

"Signed on behalf of the people of St. Allan's,

J. RICHARDS,

The evening train had filled rapidly. Three commuters, each of whom had a seat, were loudly boasting what they'd do if they wanted a seat, and all became one-other man had jumped on the train, turned over double seats and was holding them—the only unoccupied ones in the entire car—for three persons who had not yet put in their appearance.

"I believe we said one of the former three, "if I needed a seat I'd sit right down there with him."

"Well," said the second, "he wouldn't bar me from sitting there."

And still the third spoke up: "Say, if I had no seat I'd go right back there and turn them over in double-quick order."

Two business girls, acquaintances of the three brave, outspoken men, had arrived late and were standing in the aisle near the three, debating where they'd sit.

One of them spoke up and said to the men: "Say, go back and turn them over for us, will you?"

But not one of the men moved. All smiled sickly and tended to their evening papers, while the two B. G.'s sought seats in another car.—Chicago Journal.

Getting Her Reward.

I have always made it a practice to wear dainty house dresses in the morning and afternoon frocks at home no matter what happens.

When my son was eight we moved to a small town where the women were far from up to date in dress and, to be brutally frank, not always neat.

In a few weeks son had become acquainted with other boys near his age, and had been to most of their homes.

One evening he came in as I was getting dinner.

He paused just inside the kitchen door and studied me for several moments. Then he burst out: "Mom, why don't the other boys have young, pretty mothers like you?"—Exchange.

Capital's Monumental Churches.

Among the great capital cities of the world Washington alone has no monumental church. Two, however, are building. The corner stone of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception has been laid, and the apse of the new Protestant cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul is already completed. The protestant cathedral is at the summit of Mount St. Alban, overlooking Washington and the situation one writer calls "the noblest site of any cathedral in the Old World or the New."—Youth's Companion.

Corn Loaded in Cars by Air Blast.

Loading ear corn into box cars has been facilitated by the production of a portable air blast outfit, which is manufactured by an Illinois concern. It is described and illustrated in Popular Mechanics Magazine. When the front end of a wagon is elevated by a jack, its contents fall upon an endless belt that conveys the grain to a powerful blast of air, which blows the corn inside the car.

Strike of the John Kelly Local

By James Gardner Sanderson

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

Annie raised her hand menacingly, but the quick dark and upward, fending swing of Johnny's arm failed to follow. Instead of this usual maneuver, her son caught the hand and held it, looking angrily and fearlessly into her eyes. Annie gasped in bewilderment and struggled weakly. The significance of the resistance became suddenly clear, and she cast herself into the low chair beside the window.

"Wurra!" she sobbed. "Wurra! Oh, Johnny! Oh, Johnny boy!"

She rocked her body to and fro, and the walls lost nothing in volume by reason of the apron over her head. Her son eyed her in disfavor.

"Aw, cut it out," he muttered uneasily. "I'm thirteen and big enough to be me own boss, I guess!"

"Kapin' company wid a cross-eyed girl in Oliver Street!" interjected Annie sharply.

"She ain't cross-eyed!"

"You'd ought to be glad of th' good home I've give ye since your father died. God have mercy on his soul! It's not other cross-eyed girls he'd be playin' wid, neither," wailed Annie.

"She ain't cross-eyed!" snarled Johnny, stung by the repetition. "If I likes a girl I likes her, and it's not even me mother's business, understand?"

"Me wid my rheumatismatics! Many's th' time I've stood in th' snow earnin' a living to support you! If I was Nanny th' mother, I'd bat you across th' face for talking back t' me," reproached Annie.

"You'd only bat me once, then," retorted Johnny stoutly.

Mrs. Kelly's grief broke forth afresh. Her son surveyed her sullenly and reached for his hat.

"I'm goin' out," he remarked.

Mrs. Kelly gave no sign of having heard.

"I'm goin' down to Oliver street," he added tauntingly.

Then Mrs. Kelly removed the apron. "You go down to Oliver street and you can stay there," she said, trembling.

"All right," replied Johnny. "I'll stay there. And you can be getting some one else to help sell your papers," he added shrilly. "I won't!"

The slam of the door closed the discussion, and Mrs. Kelly sat by the window alone. The fountain of tears evaporated swiftly in the heat of her gathering wrath.

"Shtruck, has he!" she muttered aloud to the silent room. "Readin' him coal mine stories, it's like. And he'd be livin' me f'r a red-headed hussy—th' divil sind her joy of him! All right, let 'm! I'll not take 'm back, not f'r Priddent O'Roosevelt and th' whole crowd of arbitrarties. I know me business!"

With the final sentence Mrs. Kelly rose and set about her evening's work. The vigor with which she banged the iron frying-pan upon the table beside the kitchen sink spoke volumes for the earnestness of her resolve.

"Me wurrkin' me hands to th' bone an' him lettin' me! It's on a grotting he can sleep this night," she said savagely, at the end of two hours of unassisted toil.

As she flounced from the kitchen, outraged motherhood caused her to lock the door viciously, and to indulge in the hope that the autumn night might be cold.

During all the following day Annie stood at her post in front of one of the newspaper buildings on Park Row. Annie had been selling papers at this particular stand for more than ten years, and in the crowds streaming to and from the bridge there were denizens whose days would not have been fully begun or ended without a cheery word and a hurried purchase as they passed before her. And usually as cheery a word had been tossed back to them. On but one occasion—when Johnny, as a baby, lay very ill with diphtheria—could her customers recall such depression.

It chanced that one of the oldest, who remembered, and who now noticed Johnny's absence, made inquiries.

Annie told her woe volubly. The man shook his head.

"Better arbitrate it," he said gravely. "Seems the only way to do business nowadays." Then he dashed around the corner for a trolley car.

Johnny remained obdurate, and in the tenement on Cherry Hill dust gathered for three days upon his bed. Mrs. Kelly ate desolate breakfasts and did all the work. At dusk on the third day she followed an insistent impulse and went for a little walk. Totally oblivious footsteps carried her stout and rotund figure down into Oliver street. She happened to notice the cross-eyed girl sitting on her doorstep in close and unabashed converse with a boy who was not Johnny. Shortly afterwards she returned home, and the haste with which she opened the door meant hope as plainly as the subsequent look in her old eyes meant disappointment. The room was still empty.

At the moment in which she plodded wearily to her work on the next morning, Johnny crawled forlornly from a packing-box in a Thirty-first street area, and denounced upper Broadway vigorously. He was hungry and business was bad.

Towards four in the afternoon he shifted his bundle of unsold papers under his arm and despairingly caught on behind a truck that was rattling towards the Battery. As he swung off at the city hall his heart grew suddenly light, and he ran across the park in elation. At the foot of the city hall steps he sprang with a joyous whoop upon the back of an acquaintance who, in company with a group of other newsboys, was beguiling the tedium of the afternoon's slack hours by pitching pennies. The acquaintance leaped to his feet and said things until a policeman scattered the ring.

On native soil the lifeless insipidity of upper Broadway fell rapidly into the dim recesses of memory, and Johnny heaved a sigh of relief.

By six o'clock he had dodged guiltily into Park Row to get the extras, catching a glimpse, on the way, of his mother's back as she stood in her regular place and cried her wares. There was something about the lines of her figure which made Johnny uncomfortable, but he ducked behind the nearby Franklin statue and commenced business hurriedly.

From time to time he peeped around Ben Franklin. He noticed the tactics of the piratical outsiders as they boarded Annie's customers, and his blood boiled over. When restraint ceased to be a possibility, and while his mother's attention was engaged, he crept up behind the intruders and cuffed one of them soundly. The others fled, and it was noised swiftly abroad that Johnny had returned to his own.

Mrs. Kelly got the news at last, and an absurd wave of something shot from her ankles to the top of her head, leaving her trembling and weak, but happier than she had been for three days. A wisp of iron-gray hair falling over her eyes caught a drop that trickled down the side of her weather-beaten nose, and two customers each bore away a cent too much in change before she discovered its blinding influence.

When greater self-possession came she hastened asthmatically to a spot from which she might catch an occasional glimpse of Johnny. Because he looked dejected, her heart smote her, and she sent out newsgirl scouts to see how many papers he was getting rid of.

Johnny, after cuffing his mother's competitors, went back to the Franklin statue and tried to shout "Extra!" In an overwhelming rush of emotion his voice choked. He counted up his day's receipts, and drew his coat sleeve across his nose as he found that his profits amounted to but twenty-seven cents. The image of the half dollar which his mother had presented to him every night rose swimmingly before his eyes when he gazed miserably into space and thought of supper time.

"Hey, kid," he called to another newsboy in wistful bravado, "ask me another if she's goin' t' look for me in the house tonight."

"I don't want to ax her," replied the boy. "She might soak me. Dere's me sister talkin' to her; w'en dey brenks away I'll ax her to ax you."

Meanwhile Annie was grimly requesting the little newsgirl to ask her Johnny how long he intended to stay on strike.

"I don't want to ax 'im. He might swat me. I'll ax me brudder to ax 'im," said the girl.

The two negotiators met, and, leaning on the subway fence, talked for a moment or two in whispers, while two pairs of eyes, old and young, watched them in anxious suspense.

"Sure!" said the little boy. "I'll bring up him an' you get Annie, an' we'll make 'em shake. We'll be the arbitrators' commissarlat, what settles strikes."

"Sure," echoed the little girl.

Annie furtively wiped away a tear upon her apron. Johnny surreptitiously felt back again upon his sleeve. Then mother and son shook hands.

"You fool you!" said Annie.

"As much as that?" asked Johnny, ducking and fending, as a matter of course, the swing of Annie's palm which followed.

Then they hucked up to Annie's place beside the wall and threw their stocks together.

"Dyze need any Wall street Newses?" asked Johnny.

"Dyze want yer supper money?" asked Annie.

"Yeh," they answered in chorus; and at the cheerful note in their cries of "Extra!" a customer here and there in the hurrying crowd paused, looked backward, and smiled.

Why Percy Sobbed.

Reference at a social affair was made to the subject of conjugal infelicity, when this anecdote was flittingly related by Representative Frederick H. Gillette of Massachusetts:

One afternoon two tramps knocked at the back door of a farmhouse and meekly asked the farmer's wife for something to eat. Instead of giving them bread, she seized a convenient broomstick and began to beat them over the head with such good effect that they precipitately fled for the gate. A mile down the road one of the tramps stopped running and sobbingly dropped beneath a tree.

"Why, Percy," exclaimed the other, solicitously turning to his comrade, "did she hurt you?"

"No," answered Percy, with another burst of sobs; "fortunately, most of the blows went wild."

"What's the matter then, old fellow?" queried the second. "Why those tears?"

"Tears of sympathy," answered Percy. "Sympathy for the lady's poor husband."—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Elmer A. Bradshaw, who passed peacefully away on Nov. 11th, 1923.
Elmer's name is dear to memory,
Tis graven on our hearts;
His kindly smile is with us yet,
Lingering loath to part.
Often do our footsteps wander,
To a grave not far away;
Where we laid our darling Elmer
Just one year to-day.
Deeply mourned by Mother, Brothers and Sisters. 46ap

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear husband, Elmer Archer, who died November 11th, 1923.
Then all the more because he cannot hear,
Poor human words, of blessing will we pray.
O true, brave heart, God bless thee, wheresoe'er
In God's wide universe thou art today.
A beautiful memory of a true and loving husband and daddy left behind. Sadly missed.

You Buy Merchandise of Merit Honestly Priced At Robinson's

THIS IS DRESS-TIME. YOU'LL FIND GOWNS FOR ALL OCCASIONS IN OUR DRESS CABINETS

Never have one-piece Dresses been so much in demand by women the country over. For formal occasions, for informal dress-wear, for sports-wear, for business, for home or schoolwear they are officially endorsed by Fashion, and enthusiastically worn by women. The straight slender silhouette disgruised by various tunics and mandarin effect, is still the vogue. Tailored gowns demand long wrist length sleeves, afternoon gowns favor both short and long sleeves, while evening dress sleeves are conspicuous by their absence. As each dress is an individual creation, a personal inspection is desirable. We invite you to view our present assemblage at your first opportunity.

CREPES, FAILLES AND VELVETS ARE USED IN AFTERNOON DRESSES. PRICED FROM $15.00 TO $47.50

We believe that these Dresses provide that something different effect that most women demand from these dresses. Variety will be found in materials, in colors, as well as in styles.

Laces, Beads and Furs are used on the newer numbers for ornamentation.

Sandalwood, Oakwood, Brown, Navy, Grey, Copen and Green are fashionable shades. All sizes.

FOR EVENING WEAR ARE GOWNS IN GEORGETTE, CHIFFON AND VELVET

If simplicity is the keynote for evening styles, then richness is the watch-word in materials. Never, we believe, were fabrics so attractive in design or so perfect in color.

Fancy jewelled ornaments and furs constitute all the trimming necessary on these luxurious gowns.

While straight tunic lines are featured, yet many gowns are charming in narrower bodies with fuller skirts.
Priced from $27.50 to $79.50.

FOR WARMTH, CHOOSE DRESSES IN POIRET, CHARMEEN OR TRICOTINE

Many women claim that these dresses are the back-bone of their wardrobes, because they can be called upon for so many different uses. We are now exhibiting a very fine collection which includes gowns in both coat and slip-over styles.

In wool gowns, Fashion gives preference for tailored styles and uses buttons, braids, cordings and furs for ornamentation.

Navy, Brown, Black, Mocha, Green and Rust are best selling shades. Priced from $15.00 to $55.00.

Dresses in Flannel range at $7.75, $8.50, $9.00 and $10.00.

WHEN THE LARGE WOMAN COMES TO CHOOSE A DRESS

She will find that we have prepared for her requirements. Our present assortments were chosen from a manufacturer who specializes on suitably styled dresses for larger women.

All garments are skilfully drafted on the cutting table, sizing is obtained by proper adjustments of measurements and not by changing of tickets.

You will like these dresses because there are no freak models—no sensational styles, and no strained effects. At the same time they conform rigidly to the requirements of Fashion, long, slender-line silhouettes ornamented by tunics and panels.

Superb quality in materials has been used in all of these dresses. Obtainable in Silk or Wool.

STRATHCONA

A very welcome rain came on Wednesday morning, which was a great help to those who have not yet finished their plowing. The ground is reported to be somewhat softer. — Mr. Jack Milne and Mr. Mac. Thompson have gone north on a deer hunt. We do not yet know exactly what kind of a "deer" these fellows are hunting for, and it might surprise us if they brought home two-legged ones. — The new bridge is almost completed, and the concrete is being laid. This bridge is a great improvement on the old one, and adds much to the general appearance of the village. — Miss Bernice Murphy, who has spent the summer in Detroit, Mich., has returned to Strathcona. — Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Finlay took tea at Mr. Hoare's on Sunday evening. — Mr. and Mrs. Pybus.—Mrs. D. M. Parks, of Napanee, spent the week-end at Bruce Finlay's. — Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Wilson, Napanee, were at Jas. Wilson's for Thanksgiving. — Miss Flora Eklund has been renewing old acquaintances in this vicinity of late. — Mrs. A. H. Hoare has returned to her home in the village. — The meeting of the Mission Circle is to be held at the home of Mr. Bruce Finlay this (Friday) evening at 7.30 o'clock. All members are especially urged to attend this meeting. Visitors cordially welcomed. Make an effort to be present. — Service in the church this Sunday at 10 a.m., Sunday School at 11 a.m. Be on hand.

Automobile Library.

In an article, "Books That Gather No Dust," in St. Nicholas, G. F. Thomson describes the distribution of library volumes in country districts. One of the most interesting of these wagons operates out of Hibbing, Minn. This village, known as the richest for its size in the world, because of the wealth of copper ore deposited there, has a book automobile which makes a daily trip through the township, distributing on the average 150 books. This is the most complete wagon of its kind. The wardrobe is lined with inside shelves, filled with as many as 1,000 books. There is also a librarian's desk, and six people may be accommodated inside the "library" at one time. The car generates its own light and some heat, but a coal stove is installed for midwinter trips, since the thermometer gets down to around 40 below zero. The librarian and his patrons, representing about fourteen different nationalities, are thus able to select and exchange books in comfort. When the drifts of snow pile high the car travels the main roads, and deliveries to schools and homes off the beaten track are then made by children with their sleds.

Artful Explanation.

The milliner looked at the sign she had ordered and observed it ran: "Mrs. J. Blank." When she called the sign painter's attention to the error he calmly replied: "Madame, you have had two husbands. You were a 'Mrs.' when you lost the first. Do you think a woman can go on marrying and not lengthen her title? 'Mrs.' means a married woman or a widow. 'Miss' means a woman who has been married twice and is young enough to marry again; and only yesterday a rich old party told me that if he had any idea you were heart-free he'd come and—"

"Oh, well, you can nail up the sign," she interrupted.—Boston Transcript.

Government-Owned Railroad.

The United States still owns one railway that it took over during the war. The road has 12 miles of track along the water front of Hoboken, N. J., and with an operating equipment of three steam locomotives and two electric engines hauls freight cars of other roads to and from the steamship piers. The road recently declared a cash dividend of 62½ per cent on its capital stock of $400,000. The government has held it to prevent it from falling into the hands of speculators, but has reached a tentative decision to sell it to the port of New York authorities.—Youth's Companion.

CONWAY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The November meeting took place at the home of Mrs. Eph. Fitchett on Tuesday, with an attendance of eighteen members and visitors. The meeting opened in the usual way, followed by a couple of fine selections on Mrs. Fitchett's player piano. The Secretary gave the minutes of the October meeting, and the Book Committee reported a large list being made out very carefully for purchase. All agreed that the books must be of the highest order, and anyone who gets a book from the library which has damaging literature, as some of the old ones may have been, are requested to hand it in to the library and notify the librarian, who has the power to destroy it.

Next came the report of the delegate, Mrs. Spearing. This was very thorough, and took up each subject discussed at the convention, and aroused a considerable amount of enthusiasm from all who heard it. Mrs. W. Haight moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Spearing for the painstaking way in which she composed her report.

Mrs. W. Haight also brought before the members a plan by which all members who wish to do so may take lessons in First Aid and Home Nursing. This was left over for discussion when we have a larger attendance.

It was decided to have a debate in the near future on the subject: "Resolved, that the young girl or to-day is destroying higher ideals than she is creating". This will be advertised soon.

As the afternoon was drawing to a close, the National Anthem was sung and the hostess served refreshments.

If you did not hear "The Blanchards", ask anyone about them who did, then come to Trinity Church, Monday, Nov. 17th, and hear "The Kenmore Girls". You will be sure to be entertained by them. 46a

These are the good old days we will be longing for a few years from now.

"Owe my life to Carnol," says Mr. Sinclair

Following a railway accident, after other medecines failed, he got relief from two bottles of Carnol.

The following letter needs no comment from us. We leave Mr. Sinclair to tell you about his experience in his own words,—"I was very much run down and nervous following a railway accident some years ago. Medicines failed to give me any real help, so I decided to try Carnol. I did not have any faith in patent medicines, but a friend of mine said Carnol was far superior to any other of the so-called patent medicines. Well, I gave it a trial, for 'and let me know the results.' I am glad to say this wonderful medicine has done for me what no other medicine has done, and it therefore gives me great pleasure to give this evidence in favor of Carnol. I would advise all business men who feel, after the strenuous life of the world, that they need a building up tonic, to take Carnol. It is only by giving it a fair trial that they will know its splendid qualities."

After using the first bottle I noticed a marked improvement. My appetite improved and after the second bottle I could eat like a horse, even raw potatoes and onions could be as welcome as apples. I slept like a log and after a refreshing sleep, I was able to take up the strenuous work of the hustling insurance agent. This work calls for considerable nervous energy in closing business and I can say, with confidence, Carnol has no superior in the medicine line. I would suggest that your company give this letter a most conspicuous place, so that everyone may know what a great medicine is before the public as a restorative tonic and flesh builder. I say, with all confidence, I owe my life to Carnol. Nothing equals this medicine."—Gordon M. Sinclair, Chatham, N.B. 1-24

Larry's Grandmother

By ANNE O'HAGAN

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

Old Mrs. Doherty's eyes had looked on sorrow, but always dauntlessly. Thus it happened that there humor was as undimmed, their friendliness as unquenched, at seventy as half a century earlier. Out of a network of wrinkles they sparkled cheerfully, their blue luster heightened by the parchment brownness of her weather-beaten skin. And whenever they dwelt upon her grandson, Larry Doherty, they took a new depth of kindness and brightness.

She accounted herself a very lucky woman, she was wont to tell her neighbors. To be sure, her husband, when they had been married only a little over a year, had been killed in an explosion in the old country; but he had left her Larry, her own son Larry, the baby in arms, who had grown to be the best and most stalwart of sons. She dwelt upon Larry's memory with great tenderness, for he was only a memory these many years now. The ship that was bearing him to America with his mother, his pretty wife, and their rosy children, had been wrecked on the Banks. Only one of the lifeboats had ever been heard of again. That one a schooner from Falmouth Cape had sighted and saved; and on it was old Mrs. Doherty with her youngest grandchild, the baby Larry, in her arms.

To some the chronicle would not have seemed one of good fortune; but Mrs. Doherty translated calamity to blessing in her own fashion.

She was a busy creature even after the dreadful struggle of her early years in the new country was past. Her cabin on the hill shone with a cleanliness matching that of her New England neighbors. She was a dairy woman of note, albeit but two cows composed her stock. She had a chicken yard overseen from her small vegetable patch and flower bed.

Larry, of course, had no conception of the fact that she was a miracle among grandmothers, but he loved her and depended upon her and imposed upon her and took her as an everyday matter—until the Downings came to Falmouth Cape. Then his eyes were opened to the fact that his relatives were not as other women are. Myrtle Downing, blonde, given to giggling, and admitting tweely-three years, enlightened him.

"My!" she said, when their acquaintance had progressed to the point of personalities, "ain't your grandma funny?"

"What's funny about her?" demanded Larry, startled as if it had been suggested to him that some fact of nature was out of the natural order.

"Now, who did you ever see dress like that?" retorted Myrtle unanswerably.

Whereupon Larry, recalling the difference between the customary dress of the community and his grandmother, got garb which his grandmother had never discarded, blushed for her. Later he sought to make the harmless cute and pathetic old woman over in accordance with his Downing assured him was correct.

Mrs. Doherty was outwardly grateful, though unbeguiled. To herself she said shrewdly and sadly:

"He never found out for himself what I was wearin'. No! An' it's little he'd have cared for annywan's feelin' him, unless—unless"—she sighed heavily, "Well, I could have wished it another!"

And the more Larry's grandmother saw of Miss Myrtle Downing, the more she wished that it might have been another.

She was much alone in her cabin during the days of Larry's wooing; and the light went out of her eyes as it had never gone in all the years of her labor and sorrow.

"It's not his lovin' me for another," she used to say some hours when she was largely attended.—A number of the young people attended the party at Mr. Dan. Gray's, — A large number from Robin attended the fowl supper at Ebenezer last Tuesday night, Mrs. Arch Cook taking part in the programme.—The sale by the Ladies' Aid has been postponed until a later date.—Mr. and Mrs. Adam Scott and Mr. and Mrs. F. McConnell at Chas. Kimmett's, Jr., on Thursday evening.

An' if I go, who's to take care of him?—for that baggage hasn't it in her. Thank I am' she doesn't make him happy even now"—which s'he true enough, as the most casual could observe.

Myrtle, exhausted by the witcheries of slavery, achieved pertness and a habit of nagging, and kept her lower lip state of irritation for enough reserved both from the blissful uncertainty which she intended and the comfortable assurance which he regarded as his right.

By and by the March gales began to bent along the coast. The setters of hay rose and lashed themselves with oceanic fury. The winds threatened the houses, the piers, the railroad. One morning there came a telephone report to the station that the trains from the region west of Falmouth Cape would be unable to reach the cape station and to go on to Falmouth Town on the other side of the bay. Floods had washed away bridges and roadbeds in the interior, and for at least, at least, there would be no traffic. Falmouth Cape settled itself to the excited security of a mere watcher of exhaustion; but in two hours it ceased even to watch, for the storm had wrought havoc with the telephone wires, and it was cut off from the world.

Two things drove Larry stubbornly to the conviction that morning. One was a boyish pride in the fact that he had never missed a day's work since he obtained a position; the other was that Myrtle had been uncommonly trying the night before with her weak coquetries and her bad temper, and he wished to escape her neighborhood for a while. He harnessed the old horse, hitched himself well and drove across the road bridge that paralleled the railroad bridge across the bay and into Falmouth Town.

In the afternoon the section of the road bridge next to Falmouth Cape succumbed to the strain of the winds and the rising billows. Crackling and crashing, it was swept away, and the flooring of the structure terminated abruptly over the seething, tar-black waters an eighth of a mile from the cape shore. The arch still stood, and the wooden girders on which the flooring had been laid.

All that afternoon Mrs. Doherty rushed about beseeching some one to go and save her boy. Every one answered that her boy would not attempt to make the journey in the evening. In the morning, perhaps, the wires would be working again, and the town end of the bridge could be warned of the damage at the cape end. Any way, they said, there was no practicable way of reaching her grandson.

Myrtle, to whom the old woman went in the final appeal, scoffed at the notion of Larry's attempting to return in the evening.

"He wouldn't be such a fool!" she said conclusively.

"Fool!" cried his grandmother, in anguish and exasperation. "It ain't he knows the bridge is broke, not him. All was safe an' well whin he went over this mornin'. An' what makes him be comin' home tonight? He'll start, all in the dark an' the wind, an' he'll drive, an' thinkin' he's on the cape side, an' where ye goin' to do nothin' at all, at all?"

"What could I do?" demanded Myrtle, sullen, but sufficiently reasonable.

"If it was the man I was goin' to marry," declared the old woman, reaped spots in the wrinkled hollows of her cheeks, and glittering points in her eyes, "I'd crawl along the broken wood, over the pillars there, till I could reach the boarded part of the bridge. An' this I'd walk an' run, an' run an' walk, till I came to Falmouth Town, an' there I'd stand to wait an' warn him!"

"La, Mrs. Doherty, you certainly do make me tired," retorted Myrtle. "I ain't so dead set on keepin' a beau as you'd be, if you had one!"

Something in the brutal egotism which she had uncovered silenced Mrs. Doherty. She started and shook her head in dumb uncomprehension, then turned and walked back to the cabin.

"Maybe I was meant for the ary'ther all," she said, as she moved about putting the cabin to rights. Then she went out, a spunk and energy further with her tight, white cap, her apron, quilted shirt, and her red shawl crossed on her bosom and tied at her waist in the back. Down to the place where the bridge had been she trudged. Later, one of the children came home screaming that old Mrs. Doherty was walking along the girders that remained on the demolished section of the bridge—he had seen her red shawl.

* * * *

"A nice notion of lovin' you've got," stormed Myrtle, angry tears in her eyes. "Throwin' me over for an old woman—an old woman that you know wouldn't put up with it! They'd make you suffer, you an' her, too. But I don't believe I don't believe you'd have brought myself to marry you, any way. Don't talk to me! I don't want to hear any more about the wind an' the blackness an' the water, an' how the voice was like a ghost's or a banshee's! But I'll tell you this: you're never going you were a baby, an' you're goin' to make me happy as long as she lives! Well, she'll live forever, an' get more an' more unreasonable every minute, as' I hope—"

She broke off. Down the road a cheerful old laugh was sounding in the spring sunshine. Larry turned from her to listen to it, his eyes alight. A mellow old voice spoke.

"Ah, there was small danger after all, ma'am! Thim that's born for hangin' ye can't drown, ye know! Sure it was safe enough; but Larry—he might've been!"

TELL OF VICTORY

Inscriptions Record the Passage of Conquerors.

Ancient and Modern Times Connected by Tablets Put on Record in the Holy Land.

More than three thousand years ago on the face of a cliff in the Lebanon hills Ramesses II, King of Egypt, ordered his stone carvers to inscribe a tablet setting forth his conquest of the land. The figures of the ancient Egyptian and his men are still visible. A few feet away one may see, carved in the same rock by a British stonecutter, a record of the coming in Septmber, 1918, of Field Marshal Sir Edmund H. Allenby, G. C. B., commander of the allied forces in Asia Minor. And the passage of the centuries from B. C. 1300 to A. D. 1918 is recorded by various other carvings, in all not less than twelve, each describing the march of a victorious army.

The cliff selected for the carving of these historic records is at the mouth of the Dog river, ten miles northeast of Beirut in Syria. This strip of country lying between the Lebanons and Egypt has been the bridge between the ancient empires of the valley of the Nile and Mesopotamia, and ever it have passed the armies of the ancient, medieval and modern worlds.

The narrowest point is where the Lebanon mountains come closest to the sea and at this place Ramesses II set the precedent of commemorating his conquests by hewing out a panel on the face of the cliff. These carvings are cut about four or five inches deep, from five to nine feet high, and from two to four and a half feet in width.

Several Assyrian conquerors led their armies through this pass, including the great Sennacherib, who threatened Jerusalem, but whose army was smitten by "the breath of the Lord."

Alexander the Great led his conquering hosts through the same defile on his way to Egypt, and Greek and Latin tablets tell of the conquests of the great kingdoms of southern Europe when the march of empire passed from Asia to Europe.

Coming down to recent history, a tablet tells of the coming of the army of Louis Napoleon in 1860, when the massacres in the Lebanons called for European interference and France first set her foot in Syria. Nearly sixty years passed by, and then the English army, led by General Allenby and assisted by the French, swept like a whirlwind from the south four years ago and ended the rule of the Turk in the southern part of the Levant.

A panel has been cut in the cliff near those of the ancient Egyptians, telling of that great victory and bringing the wonderful cliff record of history up to date.

Impulsive "Uncle Billy."

Uncle Billy Middlecorn, founder of one of the leading houses at the stockyards, was much beloved and respected. But in his later years he developed a highly nervous disposition and would occasionally jump to wrong conclusions. Once he got it in his mind that he had got the best end of a trade with big, double-jointed Mike Sells, always square as a die and one of the most successful dealers at the yards. One morning Uncle Billy met Mike in the big corridor of the exchange and cut loose in his high-pitched, nervous voice. Such a clash of the "big fellows" at once drew a highly interested crowd. Sells listened with a grim scowl until Uncle Billy ran out of breath and had ranged. Then he broke into a pleasant grin.

"All right, Uncle Billy, can you let me have a chaw?"

"Yes—you — —," replied Uncle Billy, his voice still trembling from his fast-failing rage, as he handed an enormous "plug" from his left pocket. "But I want you to understand I'm givin' it to you, too lovin' it. I wouldn't trust you as far as I could see you—dear old scoundrel!"—by which time they were shaking hands and patting each other's backs.—Indianapolis Star.

Humidifying the Air.

Humidifying and conditioning the air in a home, theater, hotel lobby and similar places, may be efficiently and economically done by the use of ice once which operates as a miniature fountain. It resembles the new fashion commonly seen electric fountains, except that instead of a score of water jets, it throws 50 fine sprays of moisture into the air. The height of these sprays is regulated by a small centrifugal pump, driven by a one-thirtieth horsepower motor which in turn is controlled by a rheostat. The entire outfit weighs only 15 pounds.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Death Rate Falls.

Figures for practically all states within the death registration area of the country show a decreased death rate in 1923.—Taking account of the adjusted figures, the differences in the sex and age distribution of the population give Montana the lowest rate, 8.8 to 1,000 population, and Missouri sets the highest, 13.4. For cities of 100,000 or more population, Akron, O., had the lowest registered rate, 9.2, while Memphis had the highest, 19.

Impulsive "Uncle Billy."

Uncle Billy Middlecorn, founder of one of the leading houses at the stockyards, was much beloved and respected. But in his later years he developed a highly nervous disposition and would occasionally jump to wrong conclusions. Once he got it in his mind that he had got the best end of a trade with big, double-jointed Mike Sells, always square as a die and one of the most successful dealers at the yards. One morning Uncle Billy met Mike in the big corridor of the exchange and cut loose in his high-pitched, nervous voice. Such a clash of the "big fellows" at once drew a highly interested crowd. Sells listened with a grim scowl until Uncle Billy ran out of breath and had ranged. Then he broke into a pleasant grin.

"All right, Uncle Billy, can you let me have a chaw?"

"Yes—you — —," replied Uncle Billy, his voice still trembling from his fast-failing rage, as he handed an enormous "plug" from his left pocket. "But I want you to understand I'm givin' it to you, too lovin'. I wouldn't trust you as far as I could see you—dear old scoundrel!"—by which time they were shaking hands and patting each other's backs.—Indianapolis Star.

Humidifying the Air.

Humidifying and conditioning the air in a home, theater, hotel lobby and similar places, may be efficiently and economically done by the use of ice once which operates as a miniature fountain. It resembles the new fashion commonly seen electric fountains, except that instead of a score of water jets, it throws 50 fine sprays of moisture into the air. The height of these sprays is regulated by a small centrifugal pump, driven by a one-thirtieth horsepower motor which in turn is controlled by a rheostat. The entire outfit weighs only 15 pounds.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Death Rate Falls.

Figures for practically all states within the death registration area of the country show a decreased death rate in 1923.—Taking account of the adjusted figures, the differences in the sex and age distribution of the population give Montana the lowest rate, 8.8 to 1,000 population, and Missouri sets the highest, 13.4. For cities of 100,000 or more population, Akron, O., had the lowest registered rate, 9.2, while Memphis had the highest, 19.

TURIST WITH UNIQUE RECORD

Lord Coleridge Is Eldest Son of Silver-tongued Lord Chief Justice.

Lord Coleridge, whose retirement as Judge of the High Court of Justice (King's Bench division) at the age of 72, is announced in London, Eng., after sixteen years on the bench, can boast of a legal descent almost, if not quite, unique.

He is the eldest son of the "silver-tongued" Lord Chief Justice who died in 1894, and the grandson of Sir John Taylor Coleridge, a judge of Queen's Bench. There is also a great literary strain in his pedigree, for the Lord Chief Justice was the grandson of the poet, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, whose father was the rector of Ottery St. Mary, in Devonshire, and the author of the Latin grammar known for many generations of schoolboys, which was first published in 1772.

Though the present Judge, who he was elevated to the bench in 1907, was the first peer of the realm bearing that distinction, he was by no means the first Coleridge to become a High Court judge.

The Hon. George Duncan, second son of the first Lord Duncan, K.C.J., was appointed a judge of the Common Pleas in 1873. Another son to take legal peer to become a judge was the Hon. Thomas Erskine, whose father was Lord Chancellor in "The Government of all the Talents" in the early part of the last century.

Like his father, who was Gladstone's Attorney-General in 1871, Lord Coleridge was a strong Radical in his prejudicial days. Before he succeeded his father in the House of Lords he was for nine years M.P. for the Attercliffe Division of Sheffield, and he resented his "elevation" so much that, like other heirs about that time, he made an unsuccessful attempt to divest himself of the obligation.

As a judge Lord Coleridge has been very careful and patient, and the records of the Appeal Court show how good a lawyer he is.

Many parents are satisfied that the health of their children is due to a great extent to the constant use in fall and winter of Howard's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. Easy to take and does not "repeat." 25c., 60c. and $1.00 bottles at Wallace's.

The teacher wanted some items in order to give an object lesson during school hours, and, calling one of the small boys, gave him a sixpence and dispatched him to the fruiterers.

"Before you buy the plums, Willie" she cautioned, "you'd better pinch one or two to make sure they are ripe."

Little Willie went off. Soon he came back and smilingly put a bag on the teacher's desk.

"Thank you, Willie," said the teacher, taking up the bag. "Did you pinch one or two as I told you to do."

"Did I?" was the gleeful reply of little Willie. "I pinched the whole bagful, and there's your sixpence."

A Little Child

"Yes, sir," Miss Prue said oracularly. "You hear my racket! Sompt'n in the wind over to Barton's—shore's I'm knee-high to a grasshopper."

"How come you to be so shore?" Widow Allan demanded, settling her knitting-sheath more firmly against her plump side. Miss Prue half shut one eye—a devout church member of course could not wink—set her arms akimbo, advanced a large foot, and said still with the oracular intonation: "I'd tell ye—only I'm main afraid ye'll go strowin' all up and down Brush Creek neighborhood, and gittin' me the name of tattlin' scandal."

The widow smiled broadly. Miss Prue was known already for the head and front of all gossip—especially of the more lurid sort. "Suit yerself," she said tranquilly. "Tell bit or keep yer mouth shut. I know and you know I ceint possibly want to hear things half as bad as you want to tell 'em."

Which fact rudely stated. Miss Prue magnanimously ignored it. "I know you're a sensible person," she began. "Besides—I'n'lately must have somebody ter take counsel of. This yere business is too much for one lone woman's wgastle with—"

"How many other ones have ye done told a'ready?" the widow interrupted. Miss Prue looked down: "I jest sorter sketched things to Nan Wickfield and Joay Crimes—" she began. The widow threw up both hands, shaken with gusty laughter. "Ye had better wrote bit to the county paper," she said. "But I wonder at yo' choosings. Nan and Joe won't rest tell you've told the whole neighborhood, not leavin' you nobody but me."

"They come in on me in the middle of things—while the young man was here, taking the way—acti nakin' out like he hung on admirin' my 'dominecker pullets." Miss Prue protested. "They was him—also heard. So I jest had to tell 'em—partly—the rest."

"Stop beatin' the bushes, for goodness sake! What is the rest?" the widow demanded. Miss Prue drew a long breath. "Eh! I but knowed the whole full of bit; 'twould be worth money—a heap of money. Five hundred dollars?"—in an awed voice; "enough to send a missionary clean to China."

"If I didn't know folks calmt git surer'n death by jes-fer fall, I'd think your head was tetched," the widow exploded.

Miss Prue looked at her loftily, severely. "Make light of bit all you wanter," she said, "but that's the reword. Here! Look at the handful o' money—a heap of money. Five hundred dollars?"—in an awed voice; "enough to send a missionary clean to China."

Death of Mrs. J. D. Wagar.

One of Enterprise's most esteemed ladies passed away on Tuesday, Nov. 4th, 1924, after a few weeks' illness, in the person of Mrs. J. D. Wagar. Deceased had not been in very good health for some time, and had been confined to her bed for the past month. She was a charter member of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church and also of the Woman's Missionary Society, where her valued services will be greatly missed. The funeral was held at the Methodist Church on Thursday, November 6th, her Pastor, Rev. R. J. Merriam, conducting the service. Four sons and two daughters are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother: S. D. Wagar, Enterprise; W. S. Wagar, North Bay; W. H. Wagar, Enterprise; F. E. Wagar, Lone Beach, Cal.; Mrs. Ole Gillette, South Porcupine, and Mrs. H. A. Carscallen, Enterprise. Her husband, the late J. D. Wagar, predeceased her about seven years ago.

A Reception.

On the return of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Martin from their trip to Toronto and Western points, a reception was tendered them at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. McGill, Centreville, about thirty of the immediate friends and relatives being present. The bride looked charming in a rose crepe de chene gown with trimmings of silver, while the bridesmaid, Miss Pauline Thompson, was very becomingly dressed in pale blue with touches of silver. The house was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, as was also the tea table, where all the delicacies of the season were served. The esteem in which the bride and groom are held was attested by the many beautiful presents given them. On the Friday previous to the wedding, a number of the attentive bride's younger friends met at her home and presented her with a great variety of beautiful and useful articles of linen, and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Thirtieth Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ball, Wilton Road, entertained a number of their friends to dinner on November 5th, celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of their wedding. About twenty-five relatives and friends were present from Coal Lake, Camden East, Violet, Maple Avenue and Wilton Road, who partook of an elaborate dinner with bride and groom at the head and foot of the table. After dinner was over Mr. L. Hartman proposed a toast to Mr. and Mrs. Ball, that they might long be spared to enjoy many more anniversaries. The guests then went to the parlor, where music and a social time was enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Ball received some fine presents from their friends. It was also the twentieth birthday of their only son, Willie, and about fifty of his friends gathered to spend the evening. He also received several birthday gifts. May Mr. and Mrs. Ball and son, Willie, live to enjoy many more social gatherings. May God bless their home and keep them till their earthly work is done.

Passed Away at Enterprise.

There passed peacefully away at his old home, near Enterprise, in Camden Township, on Nov. 6th, 1924, a highly respected resident, in the person of Hamilton Michael Wagar. He was born on August 7th, 1849, on the old homestead where he died, and passed away in the same bedroom where he was born seventy-five years ago. He was the youngest of ten children, and the last one of the family to depart this life. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Lusk, Free Methodist minister, at the house, and the remains were interred in the Methodist burying ground at Centreville, Camden Township, to await the resurrection morn. The text for the occasion was taken from the 6th chapter of St. John's Gospel, and the 40th verse. The pallbearers were R. Dopking, W. Dopking Geo. Nelson, C. W. Clark, Arthur Brown and Earl Raymond. He was of a kindly disposition, and will be greatly missed from the neighborhood, but what is our loss will be his gain. There remain to mourn their loss a host of relatives and friends, together with one sister-in-law, Mrs. Phillip Wagar, in her 90th year.

UNIQUE BAPTISMAL SERVICE

An interesting and unique baptismal service took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Black, on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day, when their infant daughter, Margaret Elizabeth, was baptized by Rev. W. R. Tanton, Pastor of Trinity Church, Napanee.

The sacrament was administered with water from the River Jordan and the font consisted of a china bowl out of which two generations of the Black family have been baptized in various parts of Canada. The words of the service were read from the ritual owned and used by the great-grandfather of the child, the Rev. John Black, one of the saddle bag preachers of early Methodism, and afterwards the first pastor of Trinity Church.

An interesting fact was the presence of three grandsons of Rev. John Black, Mr. C. D. Black and Mr. Byrne Black, of Napanee, and Mr. John Black, Art Editor of The Montreal Standard. There was also present a granddaughter of Barbara Heck, mother of Methodism in Ontario.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. B. Black, Mr. John Black, Mr., and Mrs. C. Hawley, Dr. and Mrs. Cowan, Rev. and Mrs. W. R. Tanton, and Mrs. Fuller.

THE "COVERED WAGON" IS A MOST ROMANTIC PICTURE

One of the most romantic pictures ever screened is "The Covered Wagon," a Paramount photoplay coming to Wonderland Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 17th and 18th. The story deals with Molly Wingate and Will Banion, a former army officer, portrayed by Lois Wilson and J. Warren Kerrigan respectively, who meet in a wagon train on their way to Oregon and fall in love with each other. Sam Woodhull, played by Alan Hale, is the fiance of Molly, and he becomes insanely jealous of Banion. This brings on many complications filled with drama, tragedy and thrills. The picture abounds with many novel features. 46a

NEELY'S

AN ADVENTURE.

Looking ten last half century to the future by the "up-to-date" present.

In the treasures unearthed in the Henry Bookstore the visitor is carried back to the "70's", and a review of the novelica and literature is handed by a Bookstore from that date to the present is superalitively interesting.

In the first place one is impressed with the high standard of the literature of the 19th century as compared with the thrillers of to-day. Next, one is struck by the difference, not only in dress, but in the expression, as the pictures of famous characters of either sex pass in panoramic view or placed side by side.

The quaint Stories, Toys, Boudoir ornaments, Pottery, School Supplies, Stationery, Picture Moulding, Bookbinding, besides the hundred and one novelties, brings the "Old Curiosity Shop" vividly to the imagination of all lovers of Dickens.

There is also a fine assortment of modern merchandise on with confidence, we invite all and sundry to "come and browse around" and share with us the pleasure and interest we find in the revelations that come to us daily.

Just a word, almost superfluous, regarding our store, south side of Dundas. The very kindly remarks and liberal patronage convince us that we "Have Arrived", and to our many friends who have appealed to us not to move across the street, we can assure them that we will remain in the home of our own conception and creation. The only change of major importance being the elimination of our Dinnerware Department and continuing the Wall Paper and Picture Framing business formerly carried on by Mr. Henry, but now moved to our store, south side of Dundas St.

P.S.—We again extend to the women who bring their poultry to Napanee on "Turkey Days", Nov. 26th and 27th, a cordial invitation to accept our hospitality on the afternoon of each day, when tea and lunch will be served.

Address and Presentation

A number of the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. John Scanlin assembled at their home on November 9th, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. In the course of the evening Miss Mary Dillon read the following address :—

Mr. and Mrs. John Scanlin.

We take this occasion of your twenty-fifth anniversary of your wedding to tender our heartiest congratulations on your having reached this milestone on life's journey and to offer the tribute of our deepest affection and heartfelt felicitations.

The recurrence of such anniversaries as this must naturally place one in a reminiscent mood. This day recalls to you pleasant recollections when you first at the altar and rose enriched with God's blessing to begin life's work together as husband and wife. Yours are, indeed, proud and enviable achievements. As a result of your labours you have erected your beautiful home in which you can in the future, take comfort and ease. Your prosperity has enabled you to visit your relations in the sunny south and taken many enjoyable excursions elsewhere. But life is not all sunshine, and your trials and difficulties have but served to vanquish it with Christian fortitude.

Hence, we have assembled to-day,—brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles, nieces and nephews, and relatives—to enjoy as we have done so often during this quarter of a century, your happy kind hospitality. Your amiable disposition, suavity of manners and your loving consideration for others's enjoyment and your unselfishness in sparing neither zeal nor energy, have characterized you as model entertainers.

Time has not been idle during these years, and we regret that a few of many of our beloved ones who were parties to your first twenty-five years ago and who have now gone to their reward. Both your parents and our community among the absent ones. However, we who are now again all gathered in this manner present him but here to-day, are very happy indeed to be with you.

As a tangible expression of love, we ask you to accept this purse, not for its intrinsic value, but as a slight token of our esteem and affection.

Let us hope that the celebration of this golden anniversary may be a fitting prelude to the festivities of your golden wedding, in which we all hope to participate. And when fifty years is set, may we all meet in the Great Beyond.

Enterprise, Ont.
November 9th, 1924.

Mr. Scanlin made a suitable reply.

After spending a most enjoyable time, all departed to their respective homes, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Scanlin many more years of happy wedded life.

THE BEAVER SANTA CLAUS FUND

At this season of the year when all are busy making preparations for the festive season, one wonders just how much thought and time are spent on those in the community who will not have as happy a time as the rest of us. Even in a small town like Napanee there is always a proportion of the community to whom the visit of Santa Claus is a grave doubt. A good many citizens would like to be sure that this visit does take place, but there has been up to the present no general agency through which this may be accomplished. Now The Beaver desires to put itself at the disposal of the community for this purpose, and it hereby announces that it has inaugurated "A Beaver Santa Claus Fund." Week by week the amounts received will be acknowledged in the columns of The Beaver. The money will be spent by a carefully chosen committee, and all the proceeds will go to cases which have been personally enquired into by the town's social service worker. At the close of the season an audited statement of receipts and expenditures will be presented to the public through The Beaver. Make all payments payable to "The Beaver Santa Claus Fund", or drop into the office and pay them in passing and leave the donation. Remember the kiddies.

NAPANEE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular meeting for this month fell on Armistice Day, Social functions and the Thanksgiving holiday made it impossible for many to be present. Those who were able to attend feel very much indebted to our townsman, Mr. W. S. Herrington, for his enthusiastic address on "The Empire". The speaker's theme was not of its vastness, its great resources, its population, etc., but "Why is there a British Empire and the Atlantic seaboard. Then came the Seven Years War, in which the French lost Canada. Soon the American colonies revolted and England lost America. Had the French joined the Republicans there would be no Canada to-day; we would be a state in the Union to the south of us. Then again in 1812 the French were given an opportunity to throw off the British yoke, but they remained loyal when the odds were greatly against us. We have much to thank them for, too many speak lightly of them, more would be in love with them if we knew them better. Why were the French loyal to Great Britain? Two-fifths of Canada's population to-day speaks a language different from the English. What binds us?

We went next to Australia and saw its early penal settlements beginning in 1788, just four years after the honoured U. E. Loyalists came to Canada. Bad years in England and the discovery of gold and copper in Australia induced free settlers to the colony by 1864 the population had so increased that Western Australia refused to receive any more convicts. Her government, her home troubles, her part in the Great War were briefly considered. We crossed to New Zealand, early explorers recognized its wonderful advantages for flocks and herds. It was settled by missionary effort, mainly Presbyterian. Ninety-five per cent. of its population is British, the remainder, the native Moors very difficult to control. Her government is similiar to our own.

The Union of South Africa was dwelt upon, beginning with the early settlement by the Dutch at Cape of Good Hope. It became a British possession in 1806 and is the motherstate of the four provinces which now form the Union of South Africa. We find them good British subjects with a government similiar to our own, but with their own peculiar troubles especially with the native blacks.

We go on to India, a long way from home, so it cannot be proximity which is binding us. British interest, in India began through commercial enterprise in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, who granted a charter in 1599 to a company of London merchants allowing them to trade in the far East. This was the beginning of the East India Company. Many and various have been the problems here among these strange, excitable, illiterate, superstitious and fanatical tribes. The East India Co. was the ruling factor until 1858, when the territories of India were transferred to the Crown of England. Their strange manners and customs have been respected as far as understood and we find about three hundred British rulers to a population of about 200,000,000. However, matters are very excitable at present. There seem always to be an Eastern question.

What binds us? No treaties, no form of legislation. We recognize the land. It is not geographical, nor political, not racial to any great extent, not religious, not trade—for the United States and France gets most of our trade. What is it?

The outstanding characteristic of the nations is individuality as we viewed. How do we measure friends? Is it by material things? No, by their sterling qualities. What binds us to Great Britain is sentimental but unchiing deep-rooted. England has her class distinction, but under all is the attachment symbolical to show love and affection for common people and to recognize their worth as shown by the sentiment which prompted the thought of laying the remains of the "unknown soldier" in Westminster Abbey side by side with the kings and the good and great of past ages. Each may feel it is his own countryman for the honour is symbolical of such. An Englishman can forget and forgive, is true to the core and even one respects him as such. No other nation shows such respect for law. Illustrated two years ago, when 2500 exiles was travelled to see that the death of an Eskimo was vindicated and that justice was done. The dignity of her law-courts creates respect. The Bobbies of London are admired and respected. Just a motion of the finger and the congested traffic of a London street is set free to allow a cripple to cross the thoroughfare.

The British respect their obligations. England is the only nation trying to pay her war debt, and her people are submitting to the strain of highest taxation. Fair dealing with all—friends or foes—is shown in every branch of the Empire. For years the

PETRELS FLEE GERMAN COAST

Ornithologist Thinks Disturbances Caused by War Conditions Induced Birds to Abandon Place.

The petrel has completely vanished from the German coasts. Not many years ago petrels' breeding grounds were to be found on the island of Rousch, on the mainland opposite that island, and on the North Frisian Island of Sylt.

The first two were gradually abandoned by those birds, which appeared in April and again in September, but even last year some of them still made Sylt their summer residence.

This year, however, not a single bird has put in an appearance at that former petrel home, the long, low-lying peninsula of Blenkegen, at the north of the island.

Professor Hertrich, the well-known German ornithologist, thinks that the disturbances caused in the North Frisian Islands by war conditions have had much to do with causing the petrels finally to abandon their last home.

Ship's Mascot Lost at Sea.

Nigger, the mascot-bear of the freighter Donea, has gone to whatever unfriendly may be reserved for bears. Black bears that sacrifice their lives for two-legged friends. Captain and crew of the freighter vouch for the story. It was on the last trip up from the tropics that Nigger passed out. In the middle of the night, while the Donea was off the Florida coast, a chief storm hit her broadside, one of the crew's cats on deck was knocked unconscious by a wave which buried him against a stanchion. The other could not make her way to the compunctionway against the blow. Deciding that something ought to be done about it, Nigger seized the man, who was unconscious, and dragged him to the shelter of a deckhouse. Then the black bear, salty as the saltiest and wise in the ways of the sea, made his way below and went from cabin to cabin awaking officers and men. When all hands were at their posts Nigger returned to his favorite spot on the deck to take a look at the waves, and that was the last that was seen of Nigger. He went over the side, it is supposed.

The Coy Knew!

Much of the success of Chauncey Depew, the veteran humorist, springs from the fact that many of his best jokes are told against himself.

During a recent after-dinner speech, he related the story of a boy on whose father he, Mr. Depew, once paid a call. After the departure the father turned to the boy and said, reverentially: "Do you know who that man is? He is Chauncey Depew, the world's greatest story-teller."

The result was that when Mr. Depew called again he was met enthusiastically by the boy, who exclaimed joyously, as soon as the visitor entered the room:

"Hullo! I know all about you!"

"Really?" remarked Mr. Depew, suitably taken back by the boyhood nature of the welcome. "And pray, what do you know about me?"

"Why, you're the world's biggest liar—father says so!"

Never Can Tell.

He had gray hair and his wife was a little blonde, bobbed hair person who looked scarcely more than a child, so much did she look like their daughter.

She let her hair grow and then she had it dyed gray.

Her husband was horrified. Somehow his love seemed to have grown less.

"I always used to think it hurt him awfully when I was taken for his daughter," the little woman said.

"But it seems he loved nothing that this young thing was the woman who had fallen for him. I'm going to do all I can about having the dye bleached out. You see, I've bobbed my hair again—and as the new yellow hairs grow in, his love seems to be coming back again. It's so hard to tell," she ended, "if he I was doing something so wonderful for him all it almost broke his heart?".

On the Bus.

It was night on the bus.

Sounds of affectionate demonstration came from behind where the Woman sat.

Then a long sigh from the youth and:

"Give, I'm glad they don't have daylight saving all the year."

And the girl's low voice answered:

"The guy who started that daylight saving business must have been an old crab who never had a girl in his life."—Chicago Journal.

Disturbing Influences.

"Are you going to take boarders next summer?"

"No," said Mr. Cobbles. "I'm afraid it will be a year or two before I can stand another boarder around the place. I had two short-haired women and a long-haired man here all summer who talked as queer as they looked and said they was Bohemians. If I hadn't been able to discourage pretty regular with my hired man they might have made a Bohemian or a Bolshevik out of me."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Obstacle in the Way.

Our neighbors were planning to buy a new car.

I said to Chester, their small son: "Why don't you buy a car like mine?"

"Oh, we can't," he answered seriously. "You have only a one-seat family, and we have a two-seat family."—Exchange.

Pa'mist—Tell your fortune, sir? Passerby—No, thanks. It really doesn't amount to that.

MUST USE SLANG WITH CARE

Author's Handling of Forceful Words of the Moment May Be Lost on Future Readers.

If authors who have passed beyond this vale of tears might return for a time and revedit their works, they would probably eliminate many of the slang words which at the time of writing seemed so pungent and spicy. Other words that were slang at the time of writing the writer would want to leave unchanged, for perhaps now they are good colloquial English.

One O. Henry's characters delves a "Man About Town" as a "dig" say that's wise to the all-night push." The newer generation would almost need footnotes to understand that. "Push" has virtually disappeared and "fly" keeps old-fashioned, "wise," in the sense that O. Henry's character used it, seems to be as vigorous as ever. The flavor has lasted.

There are words, once used as slang, whose flavors have lasted through generations until they have been placed in good standing in the language; words such as "prig," "mob" and "mobbing."

No Writer could give a faithful translation of current colloquial English without introducing much slang that will never live. A glossary will surely be necessary. It therefore behooves the authors to get their slang written correctly, or the glossaries attached to their work a hundred years from now will read misleading meanings into their words. A recent instance of such a mistake is in Sir Arthur Lewis' "Babbitt."

One of the characters, "Babbitt," is made to say, "I tip my benny to him." Does he mean he will doff his "benny" and flirt, or does he merely tell his "Lolly" to him, in token of renewed? Everybody ought to know that "benny" means everyone, and not hat, and Mr. Lewis certainly ought to have his characters explain, the would-tip his hat, in admiration, to the other man; for the rest of the paragraph is a paean of praise. He should have said, "I tip my kelly—or Ed—or Alphonso to him." But "benny" remains to puzzle the philologist of another century.

Only words that are actual shortcuts in expression seem to remain in the language. Their fatter here.—New York Sun.

"Dogmobile" as it Were.

The legless beggar who has built to court recently when it was observed that he possessed twenty motorboats having himself hauled around in a limousine made no move of a sensation than another legless man did at Grand Central terminal the other night as he sped across the polished floor to his train. He was seated on a four-wheeled, carpeted contraption which stood about five inches off the floor. At one side trotted a lively, dog strong chested and thick of haunch, apparently a cross between a pointer and a Scotch collie. The dog wore a stout leather collar from which hung a strap about the dimensions of the old-fashioned elevated car strap. The legless man clutched the strap and the dog trotted. Very shapely locomotion and speedy. He steered his apparatus by spoken word and the animated motor understood every command. The throng clicking the concourse pavement fully fell back to make way for the unique traveler, who was hauled through the iron gate by the dog to the right suburban train.—New York Sun.

Governments and Economy.

Charles M. Schwab said at a dinner in New York:

"The advocates of government ownership — government-owned railroads and mines and what-not—do not about us. Just since Russia showed the world how the idea has worked there.

"When Sir Eric Geddes was trying to introduce economies into England's government services last year, he often smiled, in a passage in Whitehall, a sentry in uniform. He asked the sentry one day what his duties were. The man said he was there to warn people not to touch the wall. He had been stationed there, issuing that warning, for ten years. Why? He didn't know.

"Well, Sir Eric Geddes investigated the matter, and he found that a war minister's wife had brushed her sleeve against wet paint on that wall 35 years before. A warning sentry stationed there that afternoon, had remained ever since."—Detroit Free Press.

"New" Rembrandt Found.

According to Dutch newspapers, a remarkable Rembrandt painting, the existence of which was previously unsuspected, has recently been discovered in Prague by Doctor Feil, an art critic.

The painting, 59 centimeters in height by 97 in width, is on wood and represents the marriage of Alexander the Great and Roxanna. It is said to be a splendid example of the great painter's wonderful mastery of light and shade.

Rembrandt's signature, a Persian inscription indicating the subject of the work, and the date, 1638, came to light after numerous coats of heavy varnish had been removed from the picture.

HALE TO THE END

Old Chronicles Tell of Some Remarkable Centenarians.

According to Newspapers and Magazines of the Last Century They Were a Rugged Lot.

Tales of the pugilistic feats of centenarians and near-centenarian ancestors have been handed down in many a pacific fireside for generations, until now they are accepted only as the fatuities dreams of the aged, exaggerated by retelling. A study of old magazines and newspapers, however, shows that during the Eighteenth and early Nineteenth centuries remarkable mental and physical powers were attributed to very aged people.

Many such stories are found in the "obituaries of death" found in old English newspapers. The custom in those days was to give in these notices a brief outline of the activities of the deceased as well as his position in life. These notices give quaint pictures of life of the times, as they recorded the death of many well-known men and women they have great historical value.

Early volumes of Blackwood's Magazine tell of many instances of men and women attaining the age of 120 and even 130 years. A writer in The Scotsman who selects a few interesting examples from Blackwood's tells of the death of Mr. Dirrane of Galway in his 126th year. "To the last he could read without glasses, and until the last three or four years could walk some miles a day."

An entry on May 27, 1920, shows that Anne McRae, the widow of a Kintail farmer, died at the age of 112. The notice concludes, "Not many months ago she could run a race with any of her sex of the third and fourth generation." The notices record the death of a colored woman in Jamaica at the age of 140 and another at 120 years.

One unusual record concerns the death of William Hegbobotom at the age of 95. The intimation states "He was father of ten, father-in-law to ten, grandfather to 123, great-grandfather to 153, great-great-grandfather to one, in all 295, the last of whom he whacked 72 miles to see in his nineteenth year."

Margaret McDougal, who died in Garth in 1823 in her 103d year, was also a woman of extraordinary vigor. "When above 100," the notice reads, "she thought little of walking from her own house to Weem or Aberfeldy, a distance of seven miles, and returning before breakfast. Last year she traveled to Drummond castle, which is 30 miles distant, and returned the next day."

Harvard's Navy.

Told you there was at one time Harvard college had a navy? It was during the War of 1812. Once a year the navy made a triumphant cruise of Boston harbor, and it was on one of these annual joy rides that the members of that quiet navy got a terrible shock; they were captured by the British. By mistake their little boat got outside the harbor and was stopped by the British blockading squadron.

They were confronted by the terrible thought of what was going to happen to them. But instead of being hung as pirates, they were actually banqueted by their enemy. The British officers were probably tired of their own company, and here was an opportunity for a real feast. That was before the eighteenth amendment. By the time it was time to go home, the Harvard navy had to be slung over the sides of the British vessel in the slings which were used to bring the horses aboard, and their own ship got back to port will forever remain a mystery.

BREATH OF ANCIENT ROME

Proud Symbol of Old Empire, "S. P. Q. R.," Still Appears in the Roman Capital.

On the top of the man who was really sweeping the dirty street I read a shield with the letters "S. P. Q. R.," writes Vladimir Rosenoff in the London Daily Telegraph. It was nibbled, the hot rays of sun were beating straight down, and the clouds of dust whirled up by the man's broom were full of scintillating particles.

Suddenly it seemed to me that I was looking out upon a wide sphinx. Among the whirls of dust I saw advancing the ancient figures of Rome's legions. The helmets, the shields and the foreskirts burned in the sun, and the spear-tips were like quivering flames over the squares behind the eagles, the world-conquering eagles of Rome, with lakes blood lively in the lurrel of the wreaths wound around the bronze tablets with the lettering "S. P. Q. R."

Senatus Populusque Romanus—the senate and the people of Rome—the bounds of the proud, adventurous power which transformed a township on seven pretty hillocks into the capital of a world.

"The clouds of dust became denser, the legions marched into them and disappeared. For a time the eagles continued to fly overhead, then they, too, were swallowed up. Suddenly, out of the sand clouds emerged the man with the broom. He paused in his work. I asked him for the meaning of the letters on his cap. He waved his head in a slow, cautious negative gesture.

"These letters? Who can tell, signor? It is ancient stuff, surely. Something connected with the syndic. But maybe not . . ."

An ancient sign, surely . . . Then, all of a sudden the lazy man's eyes flashed. He said proudly: "Rome is so old and she is the capital of Christendom."

So, hidden away, the old spirit survives. I set out to discover its hiding place. The letters S. P. Q. R. I found everywhere—on all municipal buildings, on the uniforms and caps of city employees, on tramway cars, even on lustoins. But the vision of the eagles would not come back.

Among the kindly, gay, easy-going people I met there was no trace of the ancestral virility. If it is true that in the soul of every nation there are male and female characteristic traits, it seems to me that those of the weaker sex predominate in the modern Italian.

One Bottle of Carnol relieved his weakness

Three bottles of Carnol restored him to perfect health.

Don't let yourself get run down. When you do, your systems are weakened and you are likely to take anything that is going. If you feel tired, depressed, weak, nervous, watch yourself. These are the warnings to you that something serious may follow. It's at a time like this that you need a tonic,—something which will tone up your system, purify your blood, quiet your nerves, give you strength. This is the way Mr. Collins felt before he took Carnol. He says,—"I was in a run down condition. For six months, I was very weak and suffered from loss of appetite. I tried all kinds of drugs I thought might possibly bring relief, but without success. Then I met a friend. After stating to him my condition of health I referred to different drugs I had taken without benefit. Then he advised me to try Carnol immediately. He told me not to spend another cent for useless drugs that would not even bring temporary relief. Then I purchased one bottle of Carnol which relieved me of my weakness. After taking three bottles the blessings of health, which I formerly enjoyed, were again restored to me. As a builder and uplifter when weakening conditions exist, there is nothing equal to Carnol. I can boast of my health now. I cannot express or find words to praise Carnol for all the good it has done for me. I have proof of what it can do and advise all suffering under such conditions to give Carnol the first trial. A trial will convince you and if continued will bring permanent relief. It will bring back to you the lost health you once enjoyed."—Mr. R. G. Collins, 130 Richmond Street, Sydney, N.S.

Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Readers have probably had quite enough for statistics satiated during the past few months. Still there are a few people, want to know something of the work accomplished by this hospital to which they have so generously contributed in the past. They are shareholders in A Million of Mercy. Their dividends are not paid in coin of the realm. May-I trespass upon your space to outline what those dividends are?

Firstly, the daily average of children occupying cots in the Hospital for Sick Children was 255. The total cared for as in-patients was 4,257. That is equivalent to the population of a good-sized Ontario town.

And secondly, the out-patient department. This is a wing of officer given over to consultation and minor operations. On an average there were 190 young callers a day.

That is where the dividends are earned—in the difference made in the lives of thousands of children through the voluntary contributions which render it possible to maintain an institution where pallid cheeks become rosy and twisted limbs grow straight.

If that were not dividend enough, one might try to estimate the enormous salvage of child-life in Ontario which has taken place since "Sick Kids" doctors and "Sick Kids" nurses have been going out through this province equipped with a knowledge of children's diseases which they could not have except in some such highly specialized and pre-eminently efficient institution as the Hospital for Sick Children.

On this year's service the Hospital expended $145,126 and finds itself in the hole to the extent of $124,284. What comes in around Christmas-time keeps the Hospital going. So long as the word "Christmas" retains its original significance could any charity possibly enlist more of the sympathy of your readers or entitle itself to more of their support?

Faithfully yours,

I. E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman Appeal Committee

"Thy will be done", seems hard to say,
When those we love have passed away.
Some day, perhaps, we'll understand,
When we meet again in a better land.
The silent grief that's in the heart
No human life can trace;
For many an aching heart is hid
Behind a smiling face.
Deeply mourned by husband. 47ap

The motor fiend was listening to a long harangue about the evils of inconsiderate driving. "What do you think," continued his friend, "I would do if I were driving along a country road and met a skittish horse?" "Oh," replied the other, stifling a yawn, "I suppose you'd stop the car and the engine, and then if the horse were still skittish you'd take the car to pieces and hide them in the grass."

A gentleman who had suffered much at the hands of youthful cricketers, succeeded in catching one of them. "Now, my lad," he said, "I've often watched you play. You use the lamppost for wickets, but I notice that the batsmen never run. What is your system of scoring?"

"It's one across the road," he said, in a trembling voice, "two to the next lamp-post, and six over your wall."

"But suppose I don't break a window, as you did a minute or two ago?"

"Then we all run, sir," said the cricketer.

Surprise Party.

When Mrs. Alex. Jayne, of the old Grange farm, the first concession north of Napanee, went to her door on the evening of November 13th, in answer to the bell, dressed for work and not for guests, you can imagine her surprise to find an array of thirty or forty people in mask, representing all ages and kinds of people, who came to call. After the first surprise, she and Alex. gave them their usual warm welcome. They had brought everything with them for the time of their lives and they had it. They had music and musicians and they gave them music. They told fortunes and played games, and last but not least, they had brought the wherewithal for a good feast, which they enjoyed to the limit; and last of all, they unmasked and showed their best and heatess a group of their neighbours and friends so cleverly disguised and impersonated that the cleverest host could not have recognized them. As the wee small hours approached, they left for home feeling much delighted by a most enjoyable evening, and the host and hostess were thankful to the friends who were so thoughtful of them, and who made the event such a success.

OPPRESSION OF HEBREWS.

Ramesis II. Was the Enslaver of Israel.

At last on an Egyptian monument, says an article in the Homeletical Review, though not in Egypt, evidence has come to light which, in conjunction with other testimony, may fairly be construed as definitely confirming in time the oppression of the Hebrews in Egypt as under Rameses II.

The University of Pennsylvania has been excavating at Beisan (Bethshan, 1 Sam. 31:10, etc.; Bethshean, Josh. 17:11, etc.), twelve miles south of the sea of Galilee, near one of the noted fords of the Jordan. There the expedition found two basalt stele about eight feet high, the faces of which were covered with inscriptions.

The stele were erected by Seti I. (1313-1292 B.C.) and his son Rameses II. (1292-1225 B.C.). The inscriptions have been translated by the Egyptologist of the expedition. He has communicated to the museum that on the stele of Ramesis II.

"Mention seems to be made . . . of the apparent collection together of certain Semites in order to assist in building the town of Ramesis-Meri-Amen which is situated in the eastern delta of Egypt."

The Hebrews, it will be noted, are not specially named on the monument, only "certain Semites." Of course the Hebrews were Semites.

This—the first known—Egyptian coupling of Semites with the building of the city of Rameses is to be placed alongside two other facts. (1) Ex. 1:11 states that the Hebrews "built for Pharaoh store-cities, Pithom and Raamses." (2) In 1883 Edouard Naville excavated Pithom (Pi-tum, "house of the god Tum"), found clear indications (including colossal statues) that the work was done in the time of Rameses II., and discovered also that two kinds of bricks were used—some made with straw and others without it (Ex. 5:7-18). In 1905-6 Prof. Petrie excavated still another site which he identified as that of Rameses.

The conjunction of the three items in the stele, Ex. 1:11 and 5:7-18, and the character of the bricks at Pithom make for what is practically a demonstration of the proposition that Rameses II. was the Pharaoh of the oppression. It naturally follows that his son Merneptah was the Pharaoh of the exodus. These two facts may now be regarded as fixed historical data.

A well-known Bishop, famous for his absent-mindedness, once met an old friend in the street and stopped to talk with him. When about to separate, the Bishop's face suddenly assumed a puzzled expression.

"Tom," he said, "when we met was I going up or down the street?"

"Down," replied Tom.

The Bishop's face thawed.

"It's all right, then, I had been home to lunch."

OXO CUBES

For the Love of Pete

By IMES MACDONALD

(Copyright, 1924, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mable Wells was as winsome as twenty, as buxom as thirty, and as wise as forty, and yet she was none of these. A woman would have said she was thirty-five—a man, twenty-five, but as a matter of fact she was none of these, either. She was entirely twenty-eight, admitted every year, month and day of it, and smiled when she did so, serenely and brightly omitted, whether you looked skeptical or doubtful.

In her graver moments, or hours, I should say, Mable was private secretary to the Honorable Peter Hobb, one-time senator in the legislature of the great state of Ohio, and for all time the richest man in Bellington. The Honorable Peter Hobb, although only forty-one, was also the most dignified man north of the equator and south of the North pole. He looked it every time he oozed it. He lifted his hat with the same precise lift every time he met a woman of his acquaintance, and moved his head at just the right angle, with never a variation. And during the four years in which Mable had been his secretary he had never treated her other than as if she were a duchess at a diplomats' ball, with all the courtesy of a Chinese mandarin.

And yet notwithstanding all of this perfect treatment on the part of her employer, Mable had discarded herself. She had cheered the dignified Peter Hobb, and it were, she had but what's the use?

When a friendly, sprightly, hero-ish young man—Peter Hobb, Jr., as Mable Wells, rose up in the office of her employer, closer back the chair from her desk, donned a business cap and its gun-pointered top with a bang and yells out in disjointed tones right in the face of a disgusted but like that Honorable Peter Hobb—"for the love of Pete! you make me sick," and then marches out of his office in the middle of the afternoon and doesn't come back the next morning, you may know that something would be liable to happen.

"I just couldn't help it," she told her mother that night, "and I just like that nephew of his, and I'm a stand-still." It will ruin the boy, and he's also nice a youngster to be ruined that way. The idea! With all those bills coming in every month and getting bigger all the time, and he never says a word!"

"But, Mable, just think what you said. His name is Peter, dear, and you said, 'for the love of Pete!' He'll think—oh, my, what will he think? Of course, you're fired."

"I don't care if I am," said Mable, spunkily. "The nerve of him asking me if I'd take Billy Hobb by hand and marry him just to make him behave—even supposing I could!"

But Mable's voice was as calm as a lily-pond the next day when, over the telephone at ten-thirty the next morning and I regret to say that she slipped her hand over the transmitter and giggled, when she heard the voice of her employer on the wire.

"Are you ill this morning, Miss Wells?"

"Oh, no," blithely.

"Well—e—you were late—and—I—er thought you might be ill."

"I thought I was fired," said Mable, "Fired? Oh, no, and you see, I can't seem to find anything this morning. If you could arrange to get over as early as possible, Miss Wells, I would appreciate it."

Thirty minutes later Mable entered the office and pitched into her work. There was a pile o. bills to be checked off, and checks to write for each bill, besides a dozen letters. The bills were statements from Billy Hobb's creditors, and one of the letters was to Billy himself. The letter was of Mable's own composition, and it was to the point:

"My Dear Boy:—Needless to say, I'm covering your accounts as usual. Also I'm sending you check for date dred, which will be enough and more to get you home. I'm expecting you to begin work at the plant on the first of the month.

"As you know, if you had displayed any particular talent in any line at all I would be glad to extend you present arrangement to that end, but such has not been the case. As far as I can see, your only talent lies in spending money and feeding chickens.

"I want to have a good time myself one of these days, and if I'm ever to have it, you've got to be able to take things in hand here. In order to do that, you'll have to get in now.

"Your affectionate uncle," .

The Honorable Peter looked over the checks briefly and signed them, but he signed the letters without looking at them at all, while his secretary trotted decorously as she placed them in the mail.

Peter Hobb had ignored the surprising three-qu r hrs secretary, and the days passed the same as before until the stiff formality and rigid courtesy of her four-time superior again got on Mabel's nerves. She had stood it for four years, and one afternoon she got frantic enough to fly.

"If she'd only swear, sometimes," she thought to herself, "or kick over the wastp-basket. If he'd only let go of himself once. Oh, the pompous thing!" And a smile trickled the corner of her mouth, and when a woman smiles herself she's for four days something, and, when a woman is planning something, look out!

It left that afternoon, the Honorable Peter Hobb, following his usual custom, arose from his desk and bowed to her stiffly.

"Good-night, Miss Wells," he said, gravely, just as he had done every week-day night for four long years.

"Good-night, Peter Prim, you stiff thing!" laughed Mabel Wells, as she vanished from the door.

And he stood there in perplexed wonderment gazing at the door that slammed behind her, until a grin slowly spread over his sober face.

"Funny thing—a woman!" is what he said, but what he thought was entirely different. It had to do with what his private secretary might be expected to do under a given circumstance. Take kissing, for example.

But during the next afternoon the Honorable Peter was out and his wayward nephew strolled into his uncle's private office.

"Hello, fair one!" he greeted Mabel familiarly.

"I was glad you're here, Billy," said Mabel. "Do you know that your uncle's been trying to get me to marry you?" she laughed. "What do you think of that?"

"Honestly? grinned Billy. "I sh—I'd say he was a lucky guy." And forthwith he reached out and caught Mabel by the forearm.

"Behave yourself, Billy," she was laughing, when the door opened and Peter Hobb entered.

"Good, here, Miss Wells," he said, grimly, "if you must hug my private secretary, kindly arrange to do it after office hours."

"Don't be foolish, Peter," said Mabel, demurely. "He wasn't hugging me at all. He was only trying to, the fresh youngster. I am perfectly able to take care of myself as well as the proprietors of the office, thank you. Now, Billy," she said, squinting up her blue eyes and facing the nephew determinedly, "it's time you were helping your Uncle Peter. You will report to the foreman of the shipping department at eight o'clock tomorrow morning. Salary sixty dollars to start—a month, that is. And no fooling, mind you."

"Yours truly, boss," laughed Billy, as he loped low before going out the door.

For a moment the Honorable Peter Hobb stared at his secretary in amazement, and then at the letter she had written to his nephew, the one he had signed without reading.

"Miss Wells," he rattled, "only you were spelling him, Peter."

But Peter Hobb waved the subject from the room impatiently, and stood over his small secretary stiffly.

"A—a while ago, you know," he was saying, "I—I—that is—I guess I was jealous of the cub, Mabel, dear, I—I—"

"There, Peter, I—I know you were," said Mabel Wells, shyly.

While from the door, where Billy Hobb stood grinning, he shook his head for the last word, came a stern voice.

"Look here, aunty! If you must kiss my private uncle, kindly arrange to do it after office hours."

And rosier such arrangements were subsequently made.

SAYS ANT IS "CHUCKLEHEAD"

Swedish Naturalist Now Comes Forward to Destroy Insect's Long-Established Good Reputation.

The ant has been greatly overrated, in the opinion of Rich Eges, a Swedish naturalist. Solomon set the fashion with his famous admonition to the sluggard, and the ant has been living under false pretenses ever since. For, as a matter of fact, it is a hopeless chuckleheaded sort of creature! Its ways appreciate it."

Thirty minutes later Mable entered the office and pitched into her work. There was a pile o. bills to be checked off, and checks to write for each bill, besides a dozen letters. The bills were statements from Billy Hobb's creditors, and one of the letters was to Billy himself. The letter was of Mable's own composition, and it was to the point:

"My Dear Boy:—Needless to say, I'm covering your accounts as usual. Also I'm sending you check for date dred, which will be enough and more to get you home. I'm expecting you to begin work at the plant on the first of the month.

"As you know, if you had displayed any particular talent in any line at all I would be glad to extend you present arrangement to that end, but such has not been the case. As far as I can see, your only talent lies in spending money and feeding chickens.

"I want to have a good time myself one of these days, and if I'm ever to have it, you've got to be able to take things in hand here. In order to do that, you'll have to get in now.

"Your affectionate uncle," .

The Honorable Peter looked over the checks briefly and signed them, but he signed the letters without looking at them at all, while his secretary trotted decorously as she placed them in the mail.

Peter Hobb had ignored the surprising three-qu r hrs secretary, and the days passed the same as before until the stiff formality and rigid courtesy of her four-time superior again got on Mabel's nerves. She had stood it for four years, and one afternoon she got frantic enough to fly.

"If she'd only swear, sometimes," she thought to herself, "or kick over the wastp-basket. If he'd only let go of himself once. Oh, the pompous thing!" And a smile trickled the corner of

STUDY THE KORAN

Arab Children Learn Little Else in Their Schools.

Education Considered Complete When They Have Mastered the Law Laid Down by the Prophet.

This is the end of the Rue Kleber, the most animated street in the Kasbah. Two lines of passersby come and go here between the booths where tripe, fruit, fried dainties, and spices are sold, one line moving upward, the other coming down—Moors in djellabs, others dressed like countrymen, children, women with their veils, negresses with faces uncovered; animals, too, mostly goats and ewes led along by their masters. Only the eternal little donkeys of all Mohammedan countries seem to be lacking.

Fropontin described this square at length 70 years ago. There is no slackening in the crowd. A man . . . bending under his gay load of cast-off clothing, cries the bargains he has to offer like those one sees on the white quatrefoils of Fez or Marrakech. . . .

Not far from the square, there was a school that seemed to be the very one he described: "It is still there. It will stay there so long as the schoolmaster lives, and no doubt it will be there after him. Why not? For, if you think like an Arab, there is no reason why it should cease to be there."

The school is always there because it always has been there, and among so many signs of exhaustion and decrepitude it points out to us—still living and communicating itself to the new generations—the Islamic idea that was set aflame in this region so long ago. No doubt its flickering light sinks lower as the Moorish population in the Kasbah grows smaller, but the thousand-year-old flame of a holy lamp, seen in the moment before extinction, is no more unforgettable.

I hear a sound as if from a bird cage, a confused prattling of children's voices. I pushed open a door, and there they are, figures of little boys, squatted in the shadow, covered with their hoods, all with delightfully-cut little faces from which the great black eyes are glowing. All together, row by row, each one holding his little writing board, they sway back and forth to the cadence of the verses from the Koran that they are shouting in unison—an array of little demons in strict time, like a necromancer, carrying out some rite. . . .

The sorcerer schoolmaster, with his long wrinkled face, spectacles on his nose, and the air of an old wolf under his hood, keeps them at the end of his rod, which he points from one to another. You might almost say that he is pouring into the little shaven needles the milk of the Koran.

These children are miniatures of the Arab men, like those little marionettes that play and dance. In three or four years, when they leave their school masters knowing by heart the book which for so long a time has been the law to the Arab societies of Islam, they will have begun to assume for life the grave, unyielding bearing of the Mussulman.—Pierre Loti, in L'Illustration. Fighting Japanese Beetle.

The state quarantines in Pennsylvania and New Jersey against the spread of the Japanese beetle are being enforced by the bureau of entomology, United States Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with the Federal (Horticultural board, in connection with the enforcement of the federal quarantine against the same insect. The Japanese beetle threatens to become a pest of first and widespread importance. Special attention has been given to the inspection and certification of vegetable products. During the season of 1921 some 205,498 baskets of sweet corn were inspected and more than 5,000 beetles removed from within the tips of the corn during this inspection. This is a marked increase over the inspection work of the previous year and also over the number of beetles found.

Spreading Weather Forecasts.

The future usefulness of radio-telephony as a means for disseminating weather forecasts to farmers cannot be estimated. Formerly many farmers were so located as to be inaccessible by anything except the mails. Telephone lines extended into rural communities overcame some, but not all of this difficulty. The benefit by radiotelephony the code has to be learned. The marvelous advance in radiotelegraphy has changed this situation, for thousands of farmers have installed receiving apparatus during the past year and are now obtaining forecasts and warnings promptly and effectively.

It Is the Law

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1924, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was Monday. Fifteen minutes more and the office force of John Hamlin, attorney at law, would cease operations until the round, red sunrise of day had dived below the western horizon and stuck its nose up out of the east again.

There was still considerable work piled up before the office force, but John Hamlin was young and had a blood-pumping device inside him that pulsated rapidly and kept time to a tune of sympathy for the human race in general. Consequently, he could not bring himself to driving tactics in his role of employer, even when neglect of duties was apparent. Moreover, this same office force had been with Hamlin four and one-half years, and that alone spoke of considerable leniency.

Neglect was evident. The office force was gazing steadily at outlines that lingered in the space outside the window. Her hands were resting on the typewriter keyboard but the dots of fingers were inactive. A puzzled little frown wrinkled her forehead.

John Hamlin stewed meditatively on the rubber of his pencil, watched a fly negotiate a journey across the ceiling, wondered why it didn't fall and break its back, and wished it would, and let his gaze rest on that knob of jet-black hair. He succeeded in chewing the pencil eraser in two, spat the unpulpated portion into the waste basket and resumed perusal of the brief that argued for attention against the bright August day.

"Poor Priscilla," he sighed inaudibly as he rubbed his red hair and rustled the document into a position where it shut off the view of the stenographer's back. "I work that girl to death, but I never saw her so disturbed before. Priscilla had a right to be "decided." It is not often that a girl in a little town like Pollston receives two proposals in one day from two nice young men in one day. Then, again, one of the very nice young men was a bank-er's son.

Let's turn the clock back twenty-four hours and twenty-seven minutes forth to the golden hour when the first proposal program opened at 3:18 p. m., Sunday. Priscilla remembered the exact time, because she was looking at her wrist watch while she sat under the big oak tree in the woods and listened to Cecil Melleville say: "You could make me the happiest man in the world if you would only say—etc. etc.

It had been one of those "no sudden affairs. Priscilla had been courted more or less consistently by Melleville for the last six months. He had been extremely nice to her, sending her flowers, bringing her confections, taking her to theaters and for motorcar rides, and paying her other attentions that she had appeared to be nourish any deep affection.

Like many girls, Priscilla had clear ideas of marrying wealth; but as she grew older—especially since working in J. Hamlin's office—she had abandoned all such ideas. In the attorney's files were too many histories of unhappiness on which money played a leading part. There were the written records of contented couples, sadly shaken by prosperous fortunes brought some quirk of fortune, then—too much luxury, dissatisfaction with each other' and a result—alimony.

At twenty-three, working to support herself and mother, Priscilla, despite mention with the enforcement of the the seamy side of life which constantly thrust itself into J. Hamlin's office, was far from becoming cynical. She appraised money at its real worth, but was not dazzled by its glitter. She believed in love, and that is why she did not accept Cecil Melleville's proposal.

Neither did she refuse his offer of marriage. Instead, she simply said:

"I cannot tell you now. I must have time to think it over. Give me a week, I must not act hastily; it would not be best for either of us."

Priscilla knew that Jerry Hart cared for her. He had shown it in numerous ways, and the time they were together during the year that they had been friends. That Hart lacked the money with which to finance a wooing contest against a person of Cecil Melleville's means. Also he did not have as many opportunities of seeing Priscilla for his duties as passenger brakeman on the railroad frequently kept him away from Pollston for a week or more at a time.

However, Hart had reached that stage where something was bound to happen; and it did Sunday evening. Melleville had insisted on calling on Priscilla in the evening as well as afternoon but she had declined, because she knew Jerry would be at home then after a week's absence.

Jerry led up to the subject with little skill. He would rather have fought a dozen members of the section gang and taken a sound beating at their hands than to be obliged to go through the ordeal of asking a "certain question." However, after much crossing and uncrossing of his legs and admonishing himself to remember to keep along the inside of his uncomfortable collar, he finally managed to stammer:

"Priscilla, I—I—wonder, I wonder—if—if—you—that is, do you—do you care very much for—for Cecil?"

They were seated on the lounge directly beneath one of those painted fireside scenes in which a beautiful young woman and a handsome man are enveloped in a homelike glow from a grate and in each other's arms while they exchange dovelike glances of tenderness.

Jerry kept his eyes fixed on the picture and it inspired him so that he succeeded in getting through the rest of the proposal in fairly creditable fashion. He didn't even neglect the "You could make me the happiest man in the world if you would only say—" etc., etc.

This proposal had been expected by Priscilla, but she was no more prepared for a definite answer than she had been when Melleville asked the same question. She was very fond of both. Melleville, tall and dark, had a very prepossessing appearance and personality, while Hart, of light complexion and more athletic build, appeared possessed of a greater amount of resolution and a more manly character.

The clock struck 4 p. m. and brought Priscilla out of her reverie. She looked at the brief which hid John Hamilton's countenance and wondered what was going on in that head device that served as his brain. She turned to her typewriter, rattled the keys for a moment, then reversed her position quickly and caught him in the act of staring at her. She laughed.

"Spring fever has caught me, I guess," she said. "I can't seem to concentrate on my work, and I'm about as useful to you as a piano to a deaf mute without any hands."

He laid the brief on his desk.

"You need a vacation," he suggested, "I've been working you too hard. With decent court session only two weeks off I've had to keep you busier than usual. You'd better go out and inhale some summer sunshine and forget all about this little old office for a spell."

"Orders is orders," she laughed, as he helped her into her jacket.

She went toward the door, pinning her hat in place.

"Just a minute, Priscilla," he called, "is there something troubling you? Can't help, if there isn't."

She rattled the door knob, hesitating.

"Nope, I guess not," she answered. "Good afternoon," and the door closed behind her.

He picked up the brief and didn't notice it was upside down. He sat thinking for perhaps fifteen minutes and might not have stirred for an hour had not the door opened and Priscilla stepped in. She was pale, but there was determination in her every feature. Before he could get control her to it, then stood helpless nearby, as helpless as most men are when women cry.

"I'm so miserable," she sobbed, seating a tiny handkerchief with a lace border to her eyes. "Mr. Hamlin you're a lawyer, and you ought to be able to settle this case for me."

Hamlin threw a chair close to her, coughed very professionally and said somewhat whimsically:

"Why, I'll try. Give me the details of the problem and I'll try to figure out a solution."

So she told the whole affair before him, and he sat back in his chair and knitted his brow into a thoughtful frown.

"Of course, Priscilla," he said, "I'll advise you to the best of my ability, but I can't decide for you which one you'd rather be a banker's or a brakeman's wife."

He stroked his chin and looked toward the ceiling, where the lone fly was making a return trip, buzzing assiduously. The lawyer hit his lip and hoped the poor fly wouldn't fall and break his back.

"You see," he went on, while the girl sobbed softly, "this puts me in a rather painful position—because—the case—well, to tell the truth, Priscilla, I've learned to be rather fond of you myself during our four and a half years' association in the office, and you —you—see—"

Priscilla laughed and the tear flood was dammed.

"'Nuff said, John Hamlin," she said merrily. "Do you know, I've thought all along that I didn't want to be either a banker's or a brakeman's wife. I would much rather be a lawyer's wife."

Hamlin started so violently that he nearly fell out of his chair. The revelation was so unexpected that it upset even his practical mind. He recovered his mental equilibrium quickly, however, and, drawing his chair still closer, said softly:

"Priscilla, you could make me the happiest man in the world if you would only say—" etc, etc.

Clemenceau's Strenuous Life.

Long years ago M. Clemenceau, France's premier, was dubbed the "Tiger," and no man has ever better lived up to his nickname. At nineteen he was flung into prison for shouting "Vive la Republique!" with his arms round a lamp-post. Today, nearly sixty years later, he is as pugnacious and defiant as ever.

He is a born fighter, and, with the exception of a brief period which he spent as teacher in a girls' school, his life has been one long, turbulent battle. He fought more duels than any other man in France, has brought down one cabinet after another, and is the most popular man in France.

Some Fall Fishing

By C. B. LEWIS

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The doctor in the city had told Miss Gertie Ashford to stay in the country as long as she could, on account of the state of her throat, and that was why she was yet at her grandmother's when mid-September came.

It hadn't been a very lively summer for the girl. She had taken long walks. She had passed with the old-fashioned flowers; she had sought in vain to win the confidence of the chipmunks and rabbits which caused alarm, and she had hunted for quails' nests in the wheat fields. There was one sport, however, she had not participated in. There was a creek meandering its way over the country and crossing the highway a few rods below the house, and in that creek were fish at least as long as her finger. She knew it, because she had seen them, and because a neighbor's boy twelve years old had told her:

"Why, of course there are fish—fathers and slathers of 'em, and they are achin' to be catched, just as a cat aches for cream. Haven't hooked one more'n a hundred this summer."

"But I was taught in Sunday school that it was wicked to catch fish," was protested.

"Humph! Would we have codfish cakes if folks didn't go a-fishin'?"

The boy rigged up a line and pole for her, and Miss Gertie went fishing. He stood on the bank with her for a while to advise:

"Now, lower your hook!"

"Now, stop wobbling the pole!"

"Now, don't you dare breathe!"

"Now, shet you eyes and say your prayers, for there's a fish as long as a rail cumin' for your hook!"

When half an hour had passed and the fisher hadn't had a nibble yet, the boy wandered away in disgust. At the end of the second half-hour Miss Gertie said to herself:

"I know why I don't have any luck. It's because the fish can see me. I'll play a trick on them."

Thereupon she stuck the end of the pole into the bank and left the hook to do its own fishing while she retired to the house for a rest. Ferrers Corke, the author and artist, was finishing a new story. The opening chapters would tell of a meadow, a brook, a bridge and a pretty girl, and the girl would be fishing in that brook. The author was great on local color, and he had come out into the country to find the spot that another would have to imagine. He was quite sure that he could find all but the girl with a fishpole in her hands, and there was one chance in a thousand that he would find her. He had discovered the creek, the brooks, bridges and meadows when his search brought him to the willows opposite to where Gertie stood.

A rash young man would have stalked out of the bushes with a hello and a wave of his hat, and waded the brook and asked how many fish had been caught, and how many had got away. Mr. Corke was not rash. He did not betray his presence among the willows. Not that he was a spy by nature, but that, having found his heroine he must study her a bit.

The heroine of a story must have auburn hair which the sunshine turns to gold.

She must have a Grecian nose—not the sort you see around the Greek restaurants of New York, but one made to order in Athens and sent on packed in pink cotton.

Her eyes must be like stars. The stars worn by constables are excluded from the contest.

Her form must be divine, which means it must not be molded on the lines of a sack of flour.

She must have twinkling feet.

She should sing as she fished.

Did the girl across the creek from the artist fill the bill? Yes, and more. She was a sylph—a hour—an angel. With her for a heroine that story would go like buckwheat cakes on a winter's morning. Even when she became discouraged about the fish and turned away with a shrug of her shoulders, he was delighted with the shrug.

An artist and an author has two souls, as we all know. One is a dream soul, and can hear the whispers of the angels with every breeze that blows through a patch of bull-thistles—the other gives him a proper appetite for his fall dinner.

When Mr. Yorke had looked upon Gertie with one eye, he held it aside to look with the other. The girl went away, but she would return. She would confidently expect to find something on her hook. If there was the a victim she would be disappointed.

How a farmer's cast-off boot came to be lying on the farther bank in plain sight is a mystery to be explained some other time. In days gone by a bear might have overtaken him on the spot and devoured everything but the boot. For the two-souled artist to leap the brook and seize the boot and make it fast to the fishhook and leap back among the willows was the work of three minutes.

The angels cannot look down and witness sub base tricks and punish them, but there is generally a small boy present to see and to give things away. In this case it was the small boy who had left the spot an hour before. He was returning to see what luck Gertie had had. He came stealthily, and he saw all, and he said to himself:

"Gee, but don't I wish I was as big as a house, so that I could give that chap a licking!"

He waited in hiding to see what the girl would do when she returned. She came slowly. She thought she saw the fishpole quiver. She seized it and flung the "fish" on to the grass behind her. She had just discovered what it was, and was looking at it in wonder, when the small boy left his lair to say:

"I saw the guy when he done it!"

"Did some one put this old boot on my hook?" she asked.

"It did, Miss, and he's right over there in the willers!"

Gertie walked down to the bridge and over it and up the bank to the clump of willows, where the two-souled artist crouched. He saw her coming, but there was no escape for him. He straightened up and raised his hat.

The girl looked him up and down with contempt, and he felt obliged to say:

"—I did it as a joke!"

"Are you what is called a comic supplement to a Sunday paper?" was asked.

"You sorry I did it."

"Oh, don't apologize. There are men of all sorts of caliber, you know!"

"But—"

But Gertie had turned her back on him and was walking away. When she rejoined the boy, the latter said:

"Say, that guy is stopping over at Farmer Turner's. Do you want me to go over there and lick him? You made his knees wobble, but I can make his hair stand up."

"I guess he got enough," was the reply, and yet the girl did not congratulate herself upon her victory.

Had it been such a great crime after all?

Wouldn't almost anyone else have taken it as a joke?

Couldn't she have taken it as a joke but for the small boy?

The "guy" was good-looking and a gentleman. A gentleman sometimes jokes as well as other sorts of men. He had said he was sorry, and would have gone further if she had consented to listen. He had blushed and been confused, and had gone away as if looking for a hole to hide in.

Miss Gertie had a temper quick to flash and quick to cool off again, and by the next morning she had made reasonable excuses for the joker. She knew with the small boy. His father had said it was a good joke, and his mother had smiled at it, and the lad had come to feel it a duty to go over to Turner's and tell the guy that he was sorry he had given him away. He was on his way to Turner's across the fields, when he caught sight of Gertie on the highway. She was in the old buggy and behind the old horse which her grandmother had owned for nearly twenty years. She was headed for the village and the postoffice.

A quarter of a mile beyond the girl was the "guy." He was running down the hill and waving his hat at her.

"Now, then, is that feller crazy?" asked the small boy of himself, as he mounted a stump to see the better.

From the brow of the hill the artist had seen a pair of horses and a buggy coming on the dead run. He had instantly realized that the driver of the lighter vehicle would not take the alarm until too late. He was within five rods of her when he recognized Gertie, and as he reached the head of the old horse he grasped the bridle and fairly dragged the outfit into the ditch. As it was, a wheel was taken off Yorke had to assist her to the house, while the small boy remained on the spot to pick up the pieces and assure old Dobbin that he had had the escape of his life.

That evening the same small boy called on Gertie to see if she had any toes broken and to add:

"Did you give the guy any more fits?"

"Why, no," was replied.

"Do you think him nice?"

"—I think so."

"Is he a hero?"

"He must be."

"Then you'll marry him, of course, and I'll be left high and dry! That's what a boy gets for showing a girl how to go a-fishing and catch an old boot!"

Revolutionizing Salmon Industry.

Construction of power plants that will cost $6,000,000 and that will revolutionize the salmon packing industry in the whole Columbia river basin, are forecasted by application of McGowan (Wash.) packers for power development sites on the Deschutes river in Oregon.

Applications for 8,000 cubic feet of water rights in all have been filed, and plans have been prepared for two gigantic dams, one 115 feet high, 200 feet long at the bottom and 800 feet long at the top, and the other 236 feet high, 60 feet long at the bottom and 420 feet at the top.

Power generated by the water impounded behind these dams will be used to run salmon canneries and tin-plate plants in which the cans will be made.

Some Philosophy.

"We don't know what we're fighting for," complained a Prussian private.

"What's the difference?" rejoined another. "We wouldn't ever get it, anyhow."

At a London exhibition the other day Lord Leverhulme referred to the fact that, having always lived in the country, he had never been much of a theatre-goer. "I remember," he said, "once being taken to see 'Hamlet' by a friend, who was praising or blaming him.

"I am reminded," he said, "of Mark Twain's visit to a town where he was introduced by a local light in the following terms: 'Ladies and gentlemen,—I don't know anything about this here Mark Twain. I understand he has never been in prison, but I don't know why not.'"

An Appeal.

Napanee has not many needy folk. But attention has been called to the case of a man and son who are seeking to carry on in a room devoid of all furniture. There must be a lot of old chairs and tables, long since discarded, stored away in woodsheds or attics around town. Here is an opportunity to do a real piece of helpful work. Dig out that old chair or table or carpet or rug and phone the Beaver Office, and it will be sent for. Please do it at once, the weather gets increasingly cold, and winter in a bare room is a dreary prospect. Never mind how badly the furniture may look, it can be fixed. But let us know at once.

Famous Hart House String Quartette Concert.

A wonderful opportunity is being given to Napanee people to hear this celebrated Quartette, owing to the fact that they are en route to Halifax, where they are playing Nov. 27th; in Montreal, Nov. 20th, and later at Queen's University; also at Ottawa's Ladies' Musical Club at Chateau Laurier. Mrs. Ada Lingham-Wagner, of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, was in town Tuesday in the interest of this concert. As the Musical Club of Napanee has not been reorganized this season, they are not able to put on this concert, but are supporting Mrs. Wagner because of the splendid opportunity afforded the people of Napanee to hear this wonderful Quartette at the Town Hall, Tuesday evening, Nov. 25th, at 8.15 o'clock. Tickets, 60c. 47a

Winter Care of Storage Batteries.

The cold weather is here and you will need to give more attention to your battery. A battery which will deliver its normal output at a temperature of 70 degrees, will deliver only 50 per cent. of its normal output at a temperature of zero. Winter conditions are conducive to discharged batteries, and if the motorist is to avoid trouble he must give his battery more attention in winter than in summer. A safe plan to follow is to test your battery once a week, and, if it is testing low, have it recharged. There are more batteries injured by being left in a partially discharged condition than from any other cause. When you lay your car up for the winter bring your battery to us for winter storage. We will give it dry or wet storage at a reasonable charge. We are offering some special bargains in used cars for Poultry Days.

RUGBY

The Rugby team of the Napanee Collegiate Institute went to Picton last Saturday for the annual rugby game with their old rivals of the Picton Collegiate Institute. The game was played at the Fair grounds and was one of the most closely contested which has ever been fought out between these schools. In the first half of the game Napanee showed a decided superiority and soon secured a touchdown, which was not converted. Before the end of the first quarter Picton kicked over for a rogue and secured another, also in the second quarter. In this quarter Fraser of Napanee intercepted a pass from one of the Picton team and ran seventy-five yards to score a touchdown. It was converted and the score at half-time was 11-2 in favor of Napanee. But during the second half, Picton improved greatly and scored a touchdown on a fumble by one of the Napanee backs. It was not converted, but the score was now 11-7, which put the game within reach of Picton if they could score another touchdown. Their team tried heroically to secure the necessary points and on several occasions pushed Napanee back within their own scrimmage line. But in each case the Napanee line held, and the final whistle blew with Napanee in possession of the ball. After the game the teams returned to the gymnasium where the Napanee boys enjoyed the hot showers which are so necessary to the comfort and health of a team after a hard fought game. Before returning home, the Napanee team were entertained at lunch by the Picton boys and a very pleasant hour was spent playing the game over again, while attending to the wants of the inner man. One feature of the whole day was the complete absence of any hard feelings between the members of the teams and the thorough sportsmanship displayed by all the players. As a result, the Napanee players are looking forward eagerly to the coming game with Picton here next Saturday, when they hope in some measure to return the hospitality shown them in Picton. The team is deeply indebted to Messrs. G. W. Gibbard, F. S. Boyes and W. Vine who provided them with cars here to Picton; also to Messrs. H. Daly, C. A. Wiseman, E. J. Roy and T. B. Wallace, who contributed funds to enable the team to hire another car. This interest shown in their sports is a great incentive to the boys to put forth their best efforts in their games.

YUWANNA CLUB BANQUET AND DANCE

Paisley Grill Room Scene of Festive Joy.

The new grill room of the Paisley Hotel could not have looked more attractive nor enticing than it did on Monday night, when the Yuwanna Club met for an evening of social intercourse. Ten small tables seating four at a table, were arranged in broken lines throughout the room. Blue and pink streamers criss crossed each table and dainty place cards indicated the situation of each member. The yellow lights in the new arch and along the ceiling radiated a mellow glow which produced a soft, artistic effect on the whole scene.

At eight o'clock the members, forty in all, sat down to a venison supper, no detail had been neglected, and no plan miscarried. The chef proved himself equal to the occasion, the service was satisfactory to the most demanding, while the venison was a treat not often enjoyed even in this part of the country where deer are supposed to abound.

After supper Mr. R. H. L. Armstrong arose and proposed a toast to the King, which was responded to by the singing of the National Anthem, while all stood. Mr. Wiggins was then called on. And speaking for himself and wife, as the guests of the Club, expressed his appreciation of the courtesy extended to them, and complimented the Club on their initiative and enterprise. Dr. Hall then rose and in a speech which was marked with wit and good humor proposed a toast to the ladies. This was responded to by Mrs. Elizabeth Carmichael, who shewed that at repartee and as an after dinner speaker, she is an adept.

Mr. C. A. Walters was tendered a vote of appreciation as he has always responded so gladly to requests for assistance in the Club functions. Mr. Walters in reply, stated that he himself and orchestra, it had always been a pleasure to be associated with the Club in their times of pleasure and recreation.

After a brief statement by Reginald Doudlas as to the origin and history of the Club, the ladies retired upstairs as the floor was cleared for dancing. Time to the scintillating and alluring strains of Lawrence Newberry's jazzy returned and danced until twelve o'clock called them from the land of dreams to the world of practical realities, and all departed voting it the best ever.

RUGBY

Picton vs. Napanee.

On Saturday last, Nov. 22nd, the return game of rugby was played between the teams of Picton and Napanee Collegiates, and once more Napanee was victorious. The score was 15-2 and the result of the game was never in doubt, although it was much closer than the score would indicate. Picton was very much handicapped by the fact that their quarterback was absent through some misunderstanding, which was later explained fully by Church, but there is no doubt that the game would have been more closely contested if Picton had had their regular quarterback.

The game started at 2 o'clock and from the first it was evident that Napanee was stronger on the line. Before the end of the first quarter, Smith crashed across the Picton line for a touchdown which was not converted. In this quarter Picton kicked to the deadline for a point, and from that time until the end of the first half, the play seesawed up and down the field but no further scoring was done.

In the second half, Napanee soon showed a decided advantage in plunging and forced Picton back to their own deadline time and time again. Picton secured the ball, but in trying an end run, the ball was fumbled and it was recovered by Walters, who raced over for a touchdown. This was converted by W. Carr and with the score 11-1 in their favour, Napanee played a more open game and soon were in Picton territory again. Then Carr kicked a field goal, still further increasing Napanee's lead. After the kick-off, Picton recovered possession of the ball and kicked to the deadline for another point. In the last quarter Carr tried another drop kick which, however, went astray, but was forced for a rouge. This ended the scoring, but Napanee were always dangerous, and were unfortunate when a forward pass deprived them of another touchdown.

Church was the outstanding star for Picton, doing the kicking and most of the plunging as well as calling the plays. For Napanee, Corkill, Smith and Cowle were the best line plungers, while Northmore and Walters starred on the end runs. All the Napanee line played a splendid game and tackled surely.

After the game the Picton team was entertained at a lunch and informal dance, before it was time for them to leave on their homeward trip. Again a feature of the day was the good feeling and clean sportsmanship between the members of the two teams, and the Napanee team looks forward to other games with Picton in the future. — The Picton team on the school rugby season for one year. The Napanee team wish to thank all those who have aided them by providing transportation to the games away from home, and by attendance at the games played in Napanee.

BEAVER SANTA CLAUS FUND

The announcement that The Bouver has started a Santa Claus Fund has aroused a good deal of interest in the town, and we have had a number of contributions already handed in. Even in Napanee there are families who never know a real Xmas. Sometimes it happens that the head of the family is ill, or has been unable to obtain steady work. The Salvation Army and the town nurse find these cases and help them all they can, But this year The Beaver as an independent enterpy. has undertaken the task of collecting and distributing a real Christmas fund. A competent committee, including among others, The Salvation Army Officers and the Town Nurse, will investigate and report on each case. Then useful gifts, warm underwear, mits, stockings, and other useful articles, as well as a few of those little extras which make Christmas a little different from any other day in the year, will be purchased and equitably distributed.

Parents should seek to have their children share their happiness with others, and even a small gift will be appreciated. Sunday School classes, clubs and societies who often spend money on themselves might make a donation and help to make the life of some of our neediest children.

A list of contributors will be published next week and from then on until Xmas. Then an auditor statement will be given when all accounts have been paid.

Pay your subscription to the Beaver Office, or by mail, remembering or mail your remittance. Make all cheques payable to Beaver Santa Claus Fund, Beaver, Napanee.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL VISITS NAPANEE

Napanee was honored on Tuesday with a visit from Lord and Lady Byng, and the town and vicinity showed their interest and loyalty by turning out in great numbers to see and hear the Governor.

The Governor while here was the guest of the corporation, and all the arrangements for their brief stay was in the hands of the Town Officials. The special train bearing the distinguished guests, pulled into the station at exactly ten o'clock, when the party were met by Mayor MacGregory, E. J. Sexsmith, the Federal Member, W. A. Grange, the Town Clerk, W. H. Herrington, the Town Solicitor, J. W. Robinson, Chairman of the Board of Commerce, and Judge Madden. The Party consisted of Lord Byng and Lady Byng, Captain Bathoe, aide to the Governor-General, and Miss Sangford, Private Secretary to Lady Byng.

After the formalities of introductions, the party moved on to the Armouries, where they were met by a Guard of Honor, formed by "B" Company of Frontenac Regiment, under the command of Captain Bath. The Governor General inspected the Company, and it was noted that he stopped and spoke a personal word to each of the Great War Veterans who were in the ranks. After the inspection he personally complimented Captain Bathoe on the appearance of the men and on the arrangements which the Company had made for his reception. He said that the young men of Canada as he sees them give promise of a great future for the country.

Passing into the Armouries the party were met by the two lines of Boy Scouts, and as Lord Byng is the Chief Scout, he remarked to them in passing concerning their appearance and appearance.

The party then mounted the platform in the North end of the Armouries, where the Town Council and the local Member were ready to receive them. After the introduction of the party to the Governor to the citizens, and called on the Clerk to read the address of welcome, which was as follows :

To His Excellency Julian Hedworth Geoffry Byng, Baron Byng of Vimy, General on the Retired List, and in the Reserve of Officers of the Army, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Member of the Royal Victorian Order, Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of the Dominion of Canada.

May it please your Excellency.

It is with no small degree of pride and pleasure that the Mayor and Corporation of the Town of Napanee extend to your Excellencies a most cordial and hearty welcome upon this your first visit to our town.

We have also assembled the essential position you now so ably fill you had worthily won for yourself a warm place in the hearts of your fellow citizens, and we gratefully recognized by this entire force adopting your name as a distinguishing mark of Honor.

You are now in the centre of the Old United Empire Loyalist Midland District of Upper Canada and we wish to assure you, as the representative of His Majesty, that our people are true to the traditions of their forefathers and yield first place to no part of His Majesty's Dominions in their sincere attachment and devotion to the Throne and Empire.

We have observed with satisfaction the great personal interest you have taken in the welfare of your country and the enormous amount given by you for the improvement of the condition of the Army.

You have wisely recognized the importance of instilling in our youth the sterling principles of manliness and patriotism and our boys, the hope of our nation, gladly greet you as the Chief Scout of Canada.

We desire to express our delight in including in our welcome the Lady Byng of Vimy Ridge, who so kindly graced this occasion by her presence.

We sincerely regret that your stay among us is of so short duration.

Again extending to you both a hearty welcome and the Freedom of our town.

I have the honour to be

Your most obedient servant,

ALEXANDER MacGREGOR.

Mayor of Napanee.

Dated at Napanee, this 25th day of November, A.D. 1924.

Lord Byng then answered in the following manner :

Mr. Mayor, Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I thank you most sincerely on behalf of Lady Byng and myself for the welcome you have given us to-day. When I was appointed to my present position in this Dominion I experienced two sentiments, pride and humility, the latter being called upon to represent His Majesty, a man whose tireless efforts on behalf of his people warranted much deep affection throughout the Empire, and pleasure at meeting again my old comrades of the Canadian Corps.

You have spoken of me in a very kind manner, but I cannot repeat too often words for the undaunted courage and skill of these soldiers of ours which not only Vimy never would have been taken, but the cause of freedom, for which we were fighting, might have well been lost. They won for themselves admiration and love in the terrors of their foe. Their efforts were a genuine delight and I am pleased to meet them, their wives and mothers in their own homeland.

While I have been in Canada I have always taken the greatest interest in the youth of Canada and am proud to be associated with them as Chief Scout.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I thank you for your kindness, and we deeply regret our stay is so short, and hoping we may repeat this visit in some future time if the opportunity permits.

After this a representative of the Girl Guides and the C. G. I. T. presented Lady Byng with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums, and Miss MacGregor announced that their first endeavor started, to assist first the War Veterans, who were seated in front of him, and then to shake hands with all the people in the Armouries. And from then on for about an hour the whole of the town, old and young, passed in line before the Excellencies, who were personally greeted by them.

At the close of this period the procession of the Party moved out of the Armouries, and again the Royal Salute was given, the company of local veterans remaining at the present while the Band played the National Anthem. The Mayor then took the party around the town. The Governor has a fund in his pirses of the existing poor conditions of the property and of the streets, and general appearance of the town.

At the close of this tour the Party moved up to the Memorial Monument and placed on it a wreath in the form of a cross to the memory of the boys from Lennox and Addington who fell in the Great War. This cross had been specially prepared for the occasion, and Mayor MacGregor was imported from Aberdeen by Sergeant Major MacGillivary.

After this brief but impressive tribute the Party moved up to the special train, which in waiting, and before leaving the Governor General presented Mayor MacGregor with a large picture of himself and Lady Byng.

The visit of the Governor General is part of his itinerary of the Lake Shore District of Ontario, Altogether he has visited since his ex-Mailleur to the position of Representative of the Crown in Canada over five hundred and fifty cities and towns. That the visit here was appreciated is evidenced by the fact that a good many people remained, and that over three thousand people gathered in the Armouries in the middle of the day to greet them.

On Wednesday morning the following letter was received by the Mayor, which is self-explanatory :

Governor-General's Party,
November 24th, 1924.

His Worship,
The Mayor of the Napanee,
Ontario.

Dear Sir,—

I am desired by His Excellency The Governor General, to thank you and your citizens very much indeed for all you did to make their visit to your city such a happy one.

I am to ask you if all the citizens who are able, and all the school children may be assembled under the name of His Majesty The King, on the next suitable day in the near future, in order to commemorate Their Excellencies' visit.

I am,

Yours faithfully,
F. W. Erskine,
(F. W. Erskine), Captain,
Private Secretary.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Wm. J. Asselstine.

It was with deep regret the friends of Mrs. Wm. Asselstine learned of her death on the 13th of November, 1924, at Waukegan, Illinois. For the past three years Mrs. Asselstine had been at the Victory Memorial Hospital with Miss Elizabeth Asselstine. On October 13th she was suddenly stricken with an attack of gallstone colic, and in spite of all that loving and medical care could do, death claimed her on Nov. 13th. Mrs. T. W. Gardiner, a sister, and Archie, her son, were with her at the last.

She leaves a son, Archie, of Napanee, and a daughter, Mrs. W. R. Sharpe, of Munson, Alta.; also three sisters, Miss Emily Sills, Mrs. T. W. Gurren, and Mrs. M. L. DeLamhutt, all of Bath.

The funeral services were held at her old home in Conway, and were conducted by Rev. Mr. Neil and Rev. Mr. Pringle.

You cannot wonder that the children detest nauseating worm powders. Reid's Worm Syrup never fails to do the work, and is so pleasant to take. 50c. a bottle at Wallace's.

Winter Care of Storage Batteries.

The cold weather is here and you will need to give more attention to your battery. A battery which will deliver its normal output at a temperature of 70 degrees, will deliver only 50 per cent. of its normal output at a temperature of zero. Winter conditions are conducive to discharged batteries, and if the motorist is to avoid trouble he must give his battery more attention in winter than in summer. A safe plan to follow is to test your battery once a week, and, if it is testing low, have it recharged. There are more batteries injured by being left in a partially discharged condition than from any other cause. When you lay your car up for the winter bring your battery to us for winter storage. We will give it dry or wet storage at a reasonable charge.

HEARD EVIDENCE IN THE ODESSA SHOOTING CASE

Urban Snider Committed for Trial by County Magistrate in Napanee, on Butt of Boys' Pranks,—Counsel for Defence to Apply for Commitment as Mentally-Defective.

Urban V. Snider, of Odessa, was committed for trial Friday morning of last week by Police Magistrate Ruttan, in the County of Lennox and Addington Court, on a charge of shooting with intent to do bodily harm in connection with the wounding of the boy Percy Clarke, on Hallowe'en, although, according to information given to the press by Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C., counsel for the defence, it is questionable whether he will ever come up for trial as he has been examined by Dr. E. Ryan, Medical Superintendent of Rockwood Hospital, and will shortly be arraigned on an application made for his commitment as mentally defective.

The court room in the Napanee Court House was crowded Friday morning at the preliminary investigation at which evidence for the prosecution was taken. No evidence for the defence was submitted, Mr. Herrington admitting that a prima facie case had been made out, and consenting to his client's committal by the magistrate.

Percy Clarke's Evidence.

The first witness called by the Crown Attorney, Mr. U. M. Wilson, K.C., was Percy Clarke, the fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Clarke, of Odessa, who had apparently quite recovered from the wound which it is alleged he received from a revolver in the hands of the accused on Hallowe'en.

Percy Clarke testified that he went to Snider's yard as a member of a masquerade party on the evening of Hallowe'en, and that while a few feet from the accused's back door Snider stepped out, shot him, and stepped back into the house, closing the door after him.

Witness stated that at the time he was dressed in a white clown's suit, being all in white with the exception of his cap. He gave the time of the occurence as between seven and half-past. Witness stated that Snider gave no warning as to his intentions, but "just stepped out of the door and fired".

Cross-examined by counsel for the defence, witness would not admit that it was a common practice of the boys of Odessa to tease the accused, although he admitted that the front door of Snider's store had been smashed by boys, and that some member or members of the gang had upset the water closet in Snider's yard on the evening with pumpkins. Witness stated that the gang went to Snider's yard for the purpose of getting a "regular Hallowe'en mark", and that they would have been satisfied with a gift of apples or some thing of that sort. He very emphatically denied that the party were in the yard for the sole purpose of doing mischief.

Further cross-examined witness admitted having heard that it was the usual practice of boys to enter Snider's store, and while one of the party attracted the attention of Snider others would fill their pockets from his stock.

Used to Tease Snider.

Corroborative evidence was also given by Sidney Schamerhorn, 19 years old, who under cross-examination, admitted that the boys of the village used to tease the accused, and that it has come to be looked upon as a joke. He also admitted he had heard about Snider's boathouse being damaged by boys in mischief.

This witness stated that with the smaller boys who followed the older ones the gang in Snider's yard would number about fifteen. He also admitted that the gang did not go to Snider's door in order to ask for a Hallowe'en treat, although the two members of the gang who upset the water closet had to pass within a few feet of the back door.

Other evidence was given to the same effect by Angus MacDonald, 15, and Harold Wood, whose age was not given, both of them being members of the gang which entered the back yard where the shooting took place on the evening in question.

Thought Boy Was Dying.

Dr. J. M. Monroe, of Odessa, gave medical evidence regarding the wound received by Percy Clarke, stating that the bullet entered in the front between the first and second ribs, and was taken out at the back after passing between the fourth and fifth ribs. Witness stated that when the wounded boy was first brought to his office he believed that it was a Hallowe'en prank, but noticed a clot of blood on the boy's clothing and, made an examination. Witness stated that "to all intents and purposes he was dying," describing the treatment which resulted in his recovery and ultimate recovery.

Witness produced the bullet which was taken out of Percy Clarke's back in the Kingston General Hospital by Dr. L. J. Gardiner, of Kingston, putting in documentary evidence describing the bullet and the course which it took in the wound.

Police Evidence.

Chief Constable Barrett, of Napanee, who as High Constable of the County of Lennox and Addington, arrested Snider, gave evidence concerning his arrest, and the search made of the residence of the accused, producing a shotgun and one four-Johnston 38, and one nickel-plated 32 which had evidently just been fired for some time, together with cartridges to fit both these weapons. Witness stated that the weapons were found in the accused's bedroom, and that the bullet taken from the wounded boy's back fitted the larger weapon.

Committed for Trial.

The above was all the evidence put in by the Crown Attorney, and in reply to questions from the Presiding Magistrate Mr. Herrington admitted that he could not argue against the fact that a prima facie case had been made out, the Magistrate stating "then there is nothing for me to do but commit the accused for trial."

Not Mentally Normal.

Questioned as to whether application for bail was to be made or not, Counsel for the defence, Mr. W. S. Herrington, stated, "No, we do not want bail. The accused has been examined by Dr. E. Ryan and an application will be made for his commitment to hospital. It is quite evident that Snider is not mentally normal."

The accused, who appears to be on the sunny side of forty and who is well below average in height although very much overweight, sat through the morning's proceedings with a self-satisfied expression which led one to believe that he did not realize the gravity of his position.

Counsel for the defence did not consult the accused throughout the proceedings, being assisted in his cross-examination of the witnesses by Snider's sister, who, together with the aged mother of the accused, was present.

Following the proceedings Snider was remanded to the County Jail where he has been in custody since his arrest.

MIRACLES OF COOKING FROM LOWLY APPLE

Miss Preston Demonstrates 150 Apple Recipes at Royal Winter Fair

If an apple a day really does keep the doctor away, and the many food products made from this fruit have the same healthful result, Miss Ethel Preston, demonstrator for the fruit branch of the federal department of agriculture, in Toronto for the Royal Winter Fair,—materially lessens the work of the medical men of this country. Miss Preston is at the moment engaged in the pleasant duty of instructing Ontario housewives in 150 methods of preparing the apple for table use.

To the ever popular apple pie, a la mode, baked apple and cream, apple dumpling and the side order that usually goes with roast pork, has been added a great many new apple receipts. All of them have been personally tested by Miss Preston and some of them are original.

With the simplest equipment that might be found in any farm or city kitchen and the able assistance of Miss Evelyn Drummond, a Toronto girl, Miss Preston gives two demonstrations of apple food preparation each day.

In pointing out the source of health giving qualities of the apple, Miss Preston mentioned that in no part of the world were more splendid specimens of this fruit grown than in Ontario. "They are a food, a condiment, a tonic and a dessert," explained the demonstrator. "They are a restful sedative to the nerves, an inward cleansing effort on the skin, sturdy re-enforcement to the bone and muscle, and have a notable purifying effect on the blood. It is a known fact that persons who vary their diet with fruits and vegetables and frequently eat some raw fruit like an apple are much more mentally alert and have more physical energy than do those who stick more closely to a meat and pastry diet."

Miss Preston is a daughter of D. H. Preston, K.C., Napanee.

The Family Physician.

The good doctor is always welcome in this home. But it is not always possible to get a doctor just when you want him. In such cases Dodd's Kidney Pills are a great use of reliable home remedies, such as Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is wonderfully effective in easing inflammatory pains and healing cuts, bruises, burns and sprains. The presence of this remedy in the family medicine chest saves many a fee.

THE WHITE WYANDOTTE KING TELLS HIS STORY

By the Hon. J. S. Martin, Ontario's Minister of Agriculture

As Told to Charles C. Nixon, of Toronto

I left off teaching high school nearly twenty years ago, when my hobby, White Wyandottes, developed into a real business, which now earns thousands of dollars for us every year.

I now have ten men busy on my farm, and seven stenographers in the office.

I now have 25,000 customers in the United States alone, and have a big business in every civilized country in the world, and several thousand customers here in my native Dominion of Canada. There are between 7,000 and 8,000 White Wyandottes on the farm now.

Men who ought to know tell me that in the last twenty years I have built up perhaps the most profitable and largest poultry business in the world. In addition, I run a mixed general farm, over which my Wyandottes have unlimited range. Dairy cows, poultry, and hogs are my prosperity insurance. I have 200 acres of land which we call the Regal Poultry and General Farm. It lies on Silver Lake, skirting the village of Port Dover, Ontario, Canada.

The farm and business are the realization of the ambition of my life. My dreams have come true even better than I had planned. When I was teaching in the high school, I used to build air castles, and plan and hope; but I never really thought my dreams would come so true as they have. I have capacity for this work because I love it; and it is capacity for work that the successful poultryman needs, for to go to the top with poultry you must have more kinds of equipment and ability than is required in most other lines. The program that has made it possible for the business to succeed is this:

"I had to have the poultry, and attention concentrate to breed it better, while telling the world about it via the poultry press and the advertising columns of the catalogues.

Love of the chicken business was developed in me. I have been trying to get my great-grandmother used to the idea with her to the poultry-yard when she was four years old, but up to toddle by her side with a hand around her father under my arms; and she often expressed the hope that I would love to feed the hens when she grew up.

Being raised on a farm and always a lover among outdoor things, the growth of the poultry breeder, with my natural bent helps my work. My boyhood ambition was to be a farmer. I think it pays. During years ago I started in to breed poultry, my first purebred poultry—were Light Brahmas. In my early days I also had a yoke of Red Polled cattle, and I raised the finest Red Polled calves. Just as a hobby on the same farm. But I made no business of poultry.

Before I began making up the Barred docks, I obtained the White Plymouth Rocks and bred them for two years, adding to them the White Wyandottes, which I kept for five years. Then I kept during 1901-1902; and about this time I had Buff Orpingtons also.

My White Leghorns were of the large type that laid big eggs. I decided to breed for eggs, and not for prizes. I was also in my year about forty years ago. After disposing of all the White Leghorns, I kept the Buff Orpingtons and the Langshans, all the time keeping Barred Plymouth Rocks. Late in the nineties, before I finally decided upon White Wyandottes, as best adapted to my purposes, I kept some Golden Wyandottes and some White Minorcas. The fine laying of the Golden Wyandottes that led me to take up the white variety.

I had learned how fine White Wyandottes during the year of the Pan-American Exposition, 1901. At the Pan-American a beautiful lot of White Wyandottes were exhibited. And among the winners were some exceptionally fine specimens in type, color, and condition. I was one of the young admirers of those white fowl at this great show, and perhaps no one observed and studied these White Wyandottes any more closely than I did. Looking back on that occasion, I can see wherein it was the most momentous one in my career as a poultry fancier; for it was there and then that I decided to make this breed my sole specialty. Within two years the results were so gratifying that the keeping of White Wyandottes became my main occupation.

Shortly after this decision I had quit high-school teaching and was in the piano business with my two brothers. The White Wyandottes took me ahead so fast that I sold out my interests in the piano business to devote all of my time to poultry and the farm.

When I began breeding White Wyandottes I obtained the very choicest stock from several of the leading strains that it was possible for me to get. I was compelled to do this because I could not find any one strain having all the qualifications that I wanted. It pays to get only the best. One strain would excel in shape, another in color, another in special points; but they all excelled in utility qualities. I decided that it would be unwise to use a strain that was not strong in utility qualities, no matter how strong the show quality. These strains I gradually combined into a new one, and I called it the "Regal" strain—the strain for which, along both fancy and utility lines, has become history.

I was very fortunate in obtaining my foundation stock to get several settings almost all in one pen, which, I am compelled to do this because I could not find any one strain having all the qualifications that I wanted. It pays to get only the best. One strain would excel in shape, another in color, another in special points; but they all excelled in utility qualities. WEDDING BELLS.

McKeown—Kearns.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at 9.30 o'clock, on Tuesday morning, November 11th, 1924, by Rev. Father O'Reilly, at the Church of the Assumption, Erinsville, when Miss Mary Ann McKeown was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Lan H. Kearns. The bride looked charming in a suit of navy tricotine with hand hat and veil, and wearing a bridal cluster. She was attended by Miss Stella Kearns, sister of the groom, who wore a sand suit, with hat and veil to match. The groom was ably supported by Mr. W. J. McKeown, brother of the bride. The wedding party entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, which was well rendered by Miss E. A. Smith, of Erinsville. After the ceremony was performed the happy pair motored to the home of Mr. M. Joyce, Newburgh, where about fifty guests awaited them. After congratulations and best wishes, all sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner. Among the guests in dinner were Rev. Father O'Reilly, of Erinsville, and Rev. Father McCarthy and sister, of Centreville. In the evening a reception was given to about forty young people, during which the bride were a sand dress of canton crepe. The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, including money, silver and linen. Mr. and Mrs. Kearns will reside at Centreville, where the groom is a prosperous young farmer, and all join in wishing them bon voyage through life.

—One of the prettiest dances ever held in the Armouries of Napanee, was given on Wednesday evening, by "B" Company, Frontenac Regiment, under the able direction of Lieut. H. I. Babcock. Mr. Babcock's worthy cause, that of raising money for the Boys' Club Room, was deserving of far greater support than he received. The dance, although not a financial success, was a most decided social triumph. The orchestra was good, the decorations gave the hazy auditorium the appearance of Fairyland, and at the midnight intermission the refreshments were most suitable. Many hours of hard work were spent in preparing for the event, and those who attended were more than repaid.

ANIMAL SUPPORT COST

What It Takes to Carry Sheep, Swine and Cattle

The Value of the Manure Must Be Credited—Cost of Milk and Butter —Fat Production—Salt and Water for Sheep.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Maintenance of Sheep.

Investigational work with sheep, conducted by the Department of Animal Husbandry at the Ontario Agricultural College, gave for cost of maintenance of the farm flock the following figures: Winter ewe lambs, $4.49 each; winter breeding ewes, $5.50 each.

Investigational work in fattening lambs was continued, and the results showed for last year that it would have paid better to market the lambs in the autumn than to finish them in the pens, the lambs all showing a loss when strict account of feed was kept.

Maintenance of Swine.

In investigational work with swine it was found that in wintering brood sows on a narrow, nutritive ratio produced largely from concentrated feeds, the cost was fifteen cents per day for mature sows, whereas with groups using more roughage the cost was reduced to eight and nine cents per day.

An extensive experiment with commercial hog feeds versus home-grown feeds showed that under average farm conditions none of the commercial hog feeds used was as economical as a well-balanced mixture produced on the farm.

Maintenance of Beef Cattle.

Cost investigations conducted with beef cattle gave the following interesting figures: The average cost of feeding breeding beef cows in the College herd was 25.9 cents per day. The cost of labor per cow per day was 7 cents. The value of the manure per cow per day was 5.8 cents, and the cost of bedding per cow per day was 1.9 cents. The total feed and labor cost per cow per year, after deducting the value of manure, was $69.25. The average weight of beef calves born during the year 1922 was 77.33 pounds.

Cost of Maintenance of Herd Sire.

In the cost of maintenance investigations conducted with the herd sires, the following figures were obtained: For the Shorthorn herd sire, $129.60 per year was required; for the Hereford, $101.74; for the Angus, $107.58; and for the Jersey, $86.26. The bulls were of different ages and of different weights, so no true comparison can be drawn. The figures indicate that it really costs something to maintain a herd sire, and that the man who maintains such an animal for the use of various cow owners is entitled to a larger fee than he usually demands.

Cost of Maintenance of Dairy Cattle.

The cost of maintenance for dry cows and heifers was shown to be $8.60 per month. Some work was also done in an attempt to discover a satisfactory method of handling veal calves from dairy cows. The results show that dairy calves for veal should be marketed at the earliest possible age at which the market will accept them. It was also found that to make satisfactory veal while milk was necessary.

Cost of Milk and Butter Fat Production.

In investigational work with dairy cattle conducted at the Ontario Agricultural College to show the comparative economy of milk production and butter-fat production with the different breeds, it was found that the Holsteins produced milk at twenty-three cents less per hundredweight than did the Ayrshires, but in producing a pound of butter-fat there was only .02 cent difference. It was found that there was very little difference in the cost of production of Ayrshires and Holsteins, and that on milk production it cost more with Jerseys, but they (the Jerseys) produced butter-fat a little cheaper than did the other two breeds.—Dept. of Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

Salt and Water for Sheep.

During the winter when the snow is available, and especially where a liberal supply of roots is being fed, the flock will not suffer a great deal if water is not given, says the Department of Animal Husbandry, Ontario Agricultural College. At the same time sheep will drink more or less water if it is to be had, and if at all convenient it will pay to provide it even in the winter. After the ewes have lambed in the spring, and during the summer while on pasture an abundant supply of clean, fresh water should be at hand. Especially during the long, hot days of summer the sheep will drink freely, and the health and comfort of the flock demands that it be available.

Salt should be before the flock at all times during the year. A box or trough set up in the pen during the winter, or in the field while on pasture, in which there is always a supply, will assure the owner that his flock is always well provided with salt.

Storing Potatoes.

If potatoes are grown only for home use the crop is usually stored in the cellars of the houses or of the barns. Occasionally potatoes are stored in pits. When the crop is grown commercially, however, it is generally placed in a potato storage cellar erected for the purpose. In all cases it is important to store only well sorted, sound, clean, dry potatoes and to keep them constantly in a dry, cool, dark and well ventilated place. The temperature usually recommended for the best results is from 32degrees F. to 35 degrees F.

GOLF STORIES.

Caddie Was Acquainted With Mr. Balfour.

A man playing golf at St. Andrews asked his caddie if he had ever carried for any famous men. The caddie replied that he had and added that he was acquainted with Mr. Balfour. "What do you mean by being acquainted?" asked the man. "Just this," replied the caddie; "I'm wearing a pair of Mr. Balfour's trousers."

'Andra' Kirkaldy, the St. Andrews professional, had given a player some hints in the hope that he would be able to lower his handicap. Later, however, he received the following postcard:

The lessons you gave me, dear Andra,
Your warnings, your counsel and news,
Though meant for the best,
It must be confessed,
Have left me much worse than I was.

Five Americans went into a shop kept by Ben Sayers, a famous old golfer. Four of them bought clubs, but the fifth sneered at the game. However, a day or two later he was obviously smitten, as he came alone to the shop to purchase some clubs.

"Do you know the game?" asked Ben Sayers. "Thoroughly," replied the American.

Sayers thought he was bluffing, and, intending to have his own back, sold him two right-handed and two left-handed clubs. On the course the American noticed that his caddie was laughing, and on inquiry discovered what had happened. He then went to Sayers and demanded, "Who are you making a fool of?" "Nobody," said Sayers. "You take the right-handed clubs for the first nine holes, and change over to the left-handed clubs when you turn to come back home." What could the American say?

An Australian woman was playing very erratically, and the caddie said to her, on being asked when was the best line to take, "The North British Line home, I think."

To another Australian golfer a caddie observed, "From the way ye're harkent at the turf, sir, I'm thinkin' ye're lookin' for a short cut home."

Not long after the opening of the Braids Hill course at Edinburgh, four professionals ("Andra" was one of them) were invited to have a game. After the game, the professionals were asked by the captain of the club what they thought of the course. Three of them expressed high opinions, more for politeness' sake than anything else. Then the captain asked "Andra." "Well, your brother professionals have formed a very high opinion of the course. Have you?" "Yes," said Andra, "a very high opinion. So high that I think it's a course better fitted for goats than men."

An old Indian general of the fiery type, whose faculties were not so good as they had been, noticing his caddie staggering about, said to him, "You are the worse for drink, my boy." "Quite true," replied the caddie. "I'm drunk and I'll get better; but you're daft and you'll never get better."

A very bad golfer had been ploughing up the turf all the way round. Finally he tore up about a square foot of turf on one of the greens. "Dear me, what shall I do?" he said to the caddie, who replied, "I think, sir, the best thing you can do is to tak' that chunk of turf hame with you and mak' a wee coorse for yersel'."

In his book "Fifty Years of Golf," Kirkaldy makes one remark that is beyond rubies. It runs: "The grip does not make a golfer, but changing about with it has made many a man uncivil to his barrns when he came home from the links." There must be many wives and mothers who would testify to the truth of this.

One caddie, when his player lost a ball, would drop one down his trouser leg and say, "Here it is; and no such a bad lie after all." (That would be when there was betting on the match and the caddie had been promised a good tip if his man won.)

Value and Utility of Copper.

Nearly a million pounds of copper were used in the construction of the famous Woolworth building of New York, which is to-day the world's prince of sky-scrapers. This copper was used for roofings, lifts, pipes, and interior decorations. Few people realize the numerous uses to which copper is put. But one thing is certain. If the supply failed we should be lost without electric lights and bells, telephones, electric trains and tramcars—to say nothing of copper coinage. At first glance the amount of copper used in the building trade, in comparison with the quantities of iron and steel, would appear to be negligible; but when one takes into consideration the fact that every motor-car has anything from 10 to 200 pounds of the metal in its composition, and that there are about 3,000 pounds in every railway engine, one can appreciate the extent to which the demand for it is increasing.

Have a Right to be Humble.

Two actors met outside the Bodega, in Bedford street, London. "Hello," one of them said to the other, "you're a fine fellow, you are! Why didn't you accept me here last Friday evening as you promised?" "My dear laddie" replied the other in mystified tones "you are talking through your hat; I don't recollect having promised to meet you here." "Of course you did," replied the first, indignantly; "you made the appointment with me a fortnight ago last Monday. You made a note of it on your cuff." The bewildered actor glanced guiltily at his cuff, and then he held out his hand apologetically. "Egad, you're right," he said humbly. "I beg your pardon."

Shortage of Wool.

The craze for jumpers for both women and men is using up so much wool that dealers fear some sort of substitute will have to be found.

The Newcomer

By LINCOLN ROTHBLUM

(Copyright, 1924, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Behind every blind on Maple square, pulled in the face of the warm afternoon sun, lingered eager eyes straining to see all that was to be seen as the brawny teamsters unloaded the newcomer's household belongings.

Moving in Maple square, it must be understood, was an event. With the exception of the Santleys, who had left as mysteriously and precipitately as they had come (and the talk about which had not yet subsided, though it was two years past), goings and comings were rarities. In fact, the absence of "For Rent" signs had become a source of great pride to all the householders on the square, and it is little to be wondered that the slim girl who stood so resolutely on the bottom step of the former Santley home should cause such agitated interest. Mrs. Gregory, wrapper-clad, was already regretting that some married couple "with two or three children and likely to remain permanently" were not taking the premises.

As the piano was laboriously unloaded, each watcher came to the conclusion the newcomer was a piano teacher, come to turn Maple square into a workshop. The girl, unconscious of the hostile sentiment aroused as if by a single connecting circuit, entered the house and could be seen through the large bay window making some effort to create order out of the chaotic jumble of chairs, boxes and barrels. As Grocer McCann's two boys mounted the steps, a dozen housewives decided their larders needed replenishing, and Grocer McCann, knowing his trade, did a half-hour's rushing business, his tongue only slowing up when he made change.

"Yes, Mrs. Gregory," he went on, weighing out a niggardly pound of dry limas, "she walks in here Tuesday eleven this morning (seems as if she must've got in on the ten-fifty) and gives me a goodsized order; asks to have it delivered. I was for marking the bill C. O. D., but she up and pays me. That's what I'd call a business woman.

"Shall I wrap up some of them prunes for you, Mrs. Gregory? Just broke off as he caught that unfortunate lady in the act of sampling one, "I just opened the box."

Mrs. Gregory nodded unwillingly. "And are your two boys helping our new neighbor?" she asked.

The grocer walked over to the counter on which he exhibited his stock of cheeses. Raising the glass cover, he wilted, knife in midair. "Yes," he finally answered, as the knife descended with unswerving accuracy on fifteen cents' worth, "she asked me if I knew a couple of fellows who'd help her set up the beds and get things sort of straightened out."

He paused to wipe the knife on his apron. "She offered to pay 'em, but Ed an' Ben 'll be needin' the extra money with school startin', so I sent them over. She's a right sweet woman, and knows a deal about groceries —more as a great many of married folks."

Mrs. Gregory tried to look haughtily offended. Cupping the bags of limas, prunes and cheese in the crook of her left arm, and gathering her skirts together with her right, she swept out of McGann's cash grocery, secretly vowing never to set foot in there again; only on his special Tuesday sales, when, it must be admitted, he sold, without any qualms of conscience, nineteen-cent cans of peaches marked down to twenty-cents.

The weekly meeting of the Maple Square Ladies' club had an unusually large attendance, compelling Mrs. Gregory, at whose home the club convened that week, hastily to dispatch her small daughter via the back door for the loan of additional chairs with which to accommodate her guests.

Mrs. Chandler, president, and, very conscious of her green silk dress, rapped for order. Mrs. Chandler liked to rap for order. She felt the gavel lent her dignity. The gavel had been donated by Mr. Chandler on his wife's installation into office. Before elected president of the Main Street Business Men's Association, he understood parliamentary law and how such things should be conducted.

But today, neither gavel nor green silk dress could hush the burring voices and shortly a very ruffled Mrs. Chandler announced the meeting adjourned. Mrs. Gregory, emerging from the kitchen with the china hastily garnered, commenced to distribute her stock supply of cream-cheese-and-nut-sandwiches, "no satisfying and easy to prepare," as she once confided in an unguarded moment.

It was Miss Tucker, richer in dollars than in sense, who fired the first shot. "We all forgot to suggest our new neighbor for membership; a committee ought to be appointed to call on her."

Mrs. Chandler did not like the spinster—she had not liked her, in fact, ever since that lady had looked with two favorable eyes upon her only son Walter. "You live next door to our new neighbor," she commented, glancing up; "have you called on her?"

Miss Tucker wagged her head with negative emphasis. "Since that Santley episode——" and she paused dramatically.

There were with Miss Tucker several others of unattached females at all times.—Walt's last letter was all about some vampire who has him in her clutches."

Miss Tucker, forgetting she was included in the category of "unattached females," joined in the general laugh. All knew Mrs. Chandler's husky son and his doting mother's war on luring vampires.

The cuckoo's four o'clock warning sent the Maple Square Ladies' club scurrying to their respective homes, where soups and stews boiled and stewed to a rapid demise.

Mrs. Chandler, obliged to pass the newcomer's house, had decided to walk past head up. She would have walked past nose up, but an unkind Providence had endowed her with a pleasant nose, persistently downcast. Out of the corner of her eye she could see the unwelcomed neighbor rocking on the porch. She was aggravatingly pretty in white dimity as she rocked and crocheted, industriously whistling a catchy tune. It was a warbled trill. Mrs. Chandler afterwards was sure, which made her step on the orange peeling, and the run of notes was still in her ears as her pride and person fell. It all happened so quickly, she never could determine how she found herself, nightgowned and doctored, in the home of this "person." It was Dr. Netting himself, who was murmuring something about "absolutely not to be moved." Incoherent thoughts, sharply interrupted by ugly pains in the leg, furrowed her brow.

"Now, don't let it worry you," a soft and very gentle voice was saying. "Doctor says it's a serious fracture, and you must not be moved; but you're ever so welcome." The bright smile and clear, blue eyes confirmed the words.

In the many weeks that followed, Mrs. Chandler came to love her pretty and competent nurse; she had no daughter of her own and especially for the first time novel appreciation of little acts of tenderness and consideration.

"Perhaps you've been wondering," she abruptly began one afternoon, "why mum but my husband has come to visit me here. You see the folks 'round here don't take kindly to new people, and we were all so disappointed in the Santleys, who last rented this house, we felt we had to be careful about the next tenant.

"But," she added, vehemently, "when I get on my feet again, I'm going to tell the Maple Square Ladies' club that you're better than all of them put together. Why, you're the first girl I've ever met that I'd want Walt to marry."

The girl blushed and her eyes glistened.

"You know," Mrs. Chandler continued, proudly, "Walt's my boy—and I'm hoping you'll think like that when he sees you. He's coming home soon."

Autumn had come to Maple square and found Mrs. Chandler well on the road to complete recovery. Propped up in a cozy armchair before the large bay window, she watched in excited anticipation the children scurrying through the fallen leaves swept into the gutter. She was thinking of her boy Walter, coming, and of the debt she owed this girl who had taken her into her home and heart. Truly she had learned goodness was more than living straight—it was loving gentleness and generous kindness.

"Look," she cried out, striving to rise from her armchair, "there comes Walt! Call to him before he passes by! Quick!"

And Mrs. Chandler was due to another shock as she saw her stalwart son enfold the newcomer in his arms —just as if he had done it many times before.

* * * *

"Sure, mother," he was explaining once again, "didn't we know how you distrusted all girls? So we let upon the plan of Little Sweetheart coming here first—for I knew she'd make you love her."

Mrs. Chandler smiled through her tears. "She's done more than that, Walt."

Must Bring Body to Pört.

The first litigation over burial at sea has been thrown out of court in Case and Comment. The decision holds that a steamship company which embalms the body of a passenger who dies on a voyage toward his home country is bound to transport the body to port and deliver it to those entitled to its possession for burial, and is liable in damages in case it buries the body at sea. The court said:

"At the time of the burial at sea the body could have been carried to port without injurious effect. Had the steamship been passing through the harbor of New York and approaching Philadelphia it would scarcely be said that the defendant would be justified in casting the body into the water, from which it could not be reclaimed, thereby depriving the next kin of the solace of giving the body a decent burial."

History of Belgium.

Modern Belgium dates only from 1831, but the history of the country dates from the time of Julius Caesar, who in B. C. finally conquered the country inhabited by the Belgae. Belgium is the southern part of the Netherlands. The northern part is now known as Holland. Belgium is also the northern part of what was called Flanders and two provinces of Belgium still bear the name, East and West Flanders. The southern part of old Flanders is now the northeastern part of France. All this flat country was commonly called the Low Country. Modern Belgium is a part of it.

"You don't need his Telephone Number for Station-to-Station calls"

"If I could remember his number I would make my call Station-to-Station and save money."

This subscriber had the wrong idea. He didn't need to know the number of the distant telephone.

All he needed to say to the Long Distance operator was: "I will speak to anyone at ——" (then give her the name of the person who has the telephone—and the address too, if he knew it).

Perhaps this information will enable YOU to use the lower Station-to-Station rate more frequently.

While Sunlight Works

YOU have more leisure hours on wash day if you use Sunlight Soap. Away downstairs in the wash tub this wonderful soap will do the labour. You rub the things with Sunlight—you put them to soak—and then its penetrating, cleansing ingredients search through and through the fibres, loosening even the hardest dirt or the oldest grease stains completely. No wash board rubbing, no boiling, no hard work. Then, with rinsing, the dirt rinses away and your clothes are ready for the line, purified and snowy clean.

Wash day should not take your labour—only Sunlight's gentle strength.

HER NERVES BETTER NOW

Received Much Benefit by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chatham, Ont.—"I started to get my second child was born, and I kept on getting worse until I could not do my own house work and was so run down and had such my nerves that I could not stand to have some many time. I had a doctor whose name I do not remember. I was able to get around a little and through a friend I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took four bottles of it and it built me up and I got strong and well. I am still doing my own housework and can do the washing and ironing. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to those who are run down and tell them what it has done for me."—Mrs. Fred Lake, 81 Wellington St., Chatham, Ont.

Why will you drag along when you can get well so easily? Why suffer backache, headache, nervousness, dizziness, "blues," when you can get such help as this letter so strongly recommends? Why not try Vegetable Compound? Or write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

An Ontario Favorite

It is a significant fact that the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal has more readers in Ontario than any other paper of its class. Ontario farmers and other folk take the Family Herald and Weekly Star year after year because it gives by far the greatest value obtainable anywhere. The market news and prices in the Family Herald are the most complete and up to date available, and it retains the services and contributions of the foremost agriculturists in Ontario. The magazine and news sections are brimful of the choicest reading for each member of the family. This year the Family Herald will give away ten thousand dollars in prizes, a beautiful calendar and picture, and other valuable rewards to subscribers. A catalogue of rewards will be sent free of charge to any address. No words can do justice to the excellence of the Family Herald.

NAPANEE POULTRY DAYS

Turkey Days were observed with all the usual excitement this week in Napanee. The first day saw the Market well crowded. The quality of the fowl offered was of the best, and there was a much larger percentage of the farmers who received top price than on other occasions.

The second day was a disappointment to the buyers. It had been expected that on the second day as in previous years the largest amount of fowl would be offered. But there were scarcely more on the market than on an ordinary market day.

There was quite a falling off of the amount sold. The Banks paid out $48,000 in the two days, while last year $72,000 were disbursed. This falling off is due in some part to the wet season which made it almost impossible to rear turkeys, and then too the price paid last year discouraged many of the poultry raisers.

This year the farmers were well pleased with the price paid, and feel it was quite in keeping with the price range of other commodities. The prices were as follows:

Chickens ..... 25c. to 23c.
Hens ..... 16c. to 20c.
Geese ..... 18c. to 20c.
Ducks ..... 18c. to 20c.
Turkeys ..... 25c. to 30c.

The following firms had representatives here, and these along with our local man, M. R. Mills, bought up the whole stock: Mount Royal Creameries, Montreal; C. A. Mann & Co., London; Harris Abbatoir, Toronto; Swift Canadian Co., Toronto; Whyte Packing Co., Brockville; Poulin & Co., Montreal.

Napanee is the centre of the poultry business, and it is hoped that the position gained by years of experience and labor will be maintained. $48,000 distributed through the district in two days means much both for the farming community and the Town of Napanee.

Successful Entertainment.

The annual entertainment of the Napanee Branch of the Anglican Woman's Auxiliary was held Thursday night, in the Sunday School Hall of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, the Vicar, Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, presiding. Aforetime the annual event of the Woman's Auxiliary was known as "The Pound Social", but "them days have gone forever". In former times everyone attending had to bring a pound of groceries, now the contribution has to be in cash. The silver collection at the door was a substantial one and will greatly help the ladies in their good work. An excellent program was provided by Walters' Orchestra; Mrs. Powell, elocutionist; Miss Hilda Groves, soprano; Mr. Wade, vocal soloist and piano accompanist; and lastly, but by no means least, a splendid and most interesting lecture illustrated by fine views, was given by W. S. Herrington, K.C. The subject of Mr. Herrington's lecture was a trip he enjoyed during the past summer, and his itinerary included Quebec, the voyage across the ocean, London, and scenes of historic buildings, churches, cathedrals, there and elsewhere in England. Also in France, Belgium and Holland.

BAY OF QUINTE HOCKEY LEAGUE

The annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Hockey League was held in the Town Hall, Napanee, on Monday evening.

The most important matter before the meeting was the consideration of a constitution, which was read clause by clause, and, with the exception of the residence rule, was adopted as amended by the meeting.

O. H. A. playing rules will still be used in all matches.

The officers elected for the coming season were as follows:

Past President—M. P. Graham, Napanee.

Honorary Presidents—J. H. S. Derry Kingston.

President—Wm. Gaulin, Desoronto.

1st Vice President—Dr. R. P. Millan, Kingston.

2nd Vice-President—Albert B. Root, Napanee.

Secretary Treasurer—W. H. Ree, Napanee.

The managers of each team will form the executive council and with the officers will form the executive. It is expected that the teams represented in the League this season will be: Napanee, Point Anne, Belleville, two teams from Kingston, Gananoque, Trenton and Picton.

The meeting adjourned at 11.30 until Friday evening, December 19th, at 8 o'clock, when the above named clubs are expected to be represented to draw up the schedule.

HART HOUSE STRING QUARTET

An opportunity was given the music-lovers of Napanee to hear the famous Hart House String Quartet, on Tuesday evening, at the Town Hall. It is to the effort of Mrs. Ada Lingham Wagner, a Toronto pianist, that we owe this musical treat, and those who were fortunate enough to attend were most appreciative. Like most string quartettes there were first and second violins, viola, and 'cello played consecutively by Geza de Kresz, Harry Adaskin, Milton Blackstone and Boris Hambourg.

The first number was a quartette of Beethoven in E Flat. The second number was the the Allegro movement from a Beethoven quartette, followed by a quartette of Dittersdorf. The final selection of this series was a Sherzo movement from Debussy's quartette in G Minor. The last was the C Major quartette of Haydn, and was superbly played as were all the others. The audience were most enthusiastic, but as the numbers were long, no encores were given.

Everybody enjoys an impersonator. Thompson Blood, one of America's leading impersonators, will be the special attraction in Trinity Church School-room, on Monday next, Dec. 1st. Adults, 40c.; children, 25c. 48a

Address and Presentation.

On the evening of Nov. 10th, a few friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Milligan to say good-bye before they left for their new home in Enterprise, and after spending an enjoyable evening in games and contests, presented them with the following :—

Centreville, Nov. 10th, 1924.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Milligan.—A few of your friends and neighbors have met here tonight to say good-bye before you leave the neighbourhood for your new home in Enterprise.

For perhaps a hundred years the name of Milligan has been associated with this community; your ancestors felled and cleared the native forests, and in their place planted fields of waving grain. Built up roads, they established schools and churches. They may well be called "Makers of Canada."

You have walked worthily in the foot-steps of these pioneer men and women. Both of you have labored with hand and brain, and gained a high standard in the native forests, and this circuit has honored you with the highest position granted to a layman. You are not going to Camden and may continue in those offices, but we shall miss the open hospitality of your home, your genial presence in our social gatherings, your deeds of kindness and words of sympathy in our times of trouble and bereavement. In token of appreciation of these things will you kindly accept these two chairs as a kindly remembrance of the pleasant times we have spent together.

We wish you well in your new home, yet we cannot but hope that some time you may return to end your days among us.

Signed on behalf of the neighbours and friends.

Mr. Milligan, in a few well chosen words, thanked their many friends and neighbours for their kind remembrance.

After singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again", all went to their respective homes.

Centreville, Ont., Nov. 7th, 1924.

Dear Alfreds,—We, your teacher and schoolmates, are very sorry to lose you from our midst. You will be greatly missed in the schoolroom and on the play ground, where you have always taken part in both work and games with good spirit.

We wish you success in your future undertakings, and hope you will always obtain as high a standard in your new class mates as you have always done among us.

As your future home is not far distant, we shall expect to see you often, and welcome you to our school whenever you have an opportunity to attend.

We ask you to accept this fountain pen, and hope it will always be a reminder to you of the happy time we have spent together.

Signed by your teacher, Helen M. Amey, and the following playmates, Howard McGill, Clarence Brown, Wilmina McGill, Roland Brown, Eleanor McKeown, Genevieve Hinchey, Edith McKeown, Mona Thompson, Eleanor Milligan, Ralph Thompson.

Alfreds thanked her kind teacher and playmates and hopes to be with them as often as she can.

BICKNELL'S CORNERS

We are having changeable weather just now, real cold, then moderating, with flurries of snow occasionally.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Cooper, with their daughter, Mrs. George Scott, on Tuesday—Mrs. A. McGregor, of Enterprise, spent the week end with Mrs. E. W. Simmons.—Rev. Mr. Spencer, of Camden East, called at Mr. James Sewell's, on Monday afternoon.—We were glad to see our friend, Mr. Francis Dunn, with us again.—Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Brown and Mr. Jamsy Switzer, of Napanee, at E. W. Simmons', on Sunday.—Don't forget our Bicknell's Corner school concert, which is to be held in Camden East Hall, on Dec. 18th, at 8 p.m. Admission, adults 25c., children 10c. Everybody welcome.

BEAVER SANTA CLAUS FUND

The Beaver Santa Claus Fund is off to a good start. A careful survey shows that without the help of the public through the agency of The Beaver about a hundred children in Napanee will have no visit from their good friend, Santa. What this means. To get up Xmas morning with the feeling that it is no different from any other day, or with the hope that perhaps they might not have been overlooked dashed to the ground.

Christmas is essentially children's day. Wouldn't it be a great thing if no child in Napanee should miss the visit of Santa Claus? You can help to make this possible by bringing or sending your subscription to the Beaver Santa Claus Fund, Beaver Office, Napanee.

Encourage the Xmas spirit by having the children bring in their quarters and their dimes, and of course, don't forget the more generous donations. Every body who subscribes will receive acknowledgment through the columns of the Beaver. A committee is making a survey and will spend the money fairly, economically and wisely. An audited statement will appear after the fund closes. The need is greater than we thought for when we started, to do not delay, send or bring your donation to the Beaver Office, Napanee, and mark it for "Beaver Santa Claus Fund."

Hospital for Sick Children

67 COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Your readers have probably had their appetite for statistics satiated during the past few months. Still there will, no doubt, want to know something of the work accomplished by the hospital to which they have so generously contributed in the past. They are shareholders in a Mission of Mercy. Their dividends are not paid in coin of the realm. May I trespass upon your space to outline what those dividends are?

Firstly, the daily average of children occupying cots in the Hospital for Sick Children was 255. The total cared for as in-patients was 4,397. That is equivalent to the population of a good-sized Ontario town.

And secondly, the out-patient department. This is a wing of offices given over to consultation and minor operations. On an average there were 190 young callers a day.

That is where the dividends are earned—in the difference made in the lives of thousands of children through the voluntary contributions which render it possible to maintain an institution where pallid cheeks become rosy and twisted limbs are made straight.

If that were not dividend enough, one might try to estimate the enormous salvage of child-life in Ontario which has taken place since "Sick Kids" doctors and "Sick Kids" nurses have been going out through this province equipped with a knowledge of children's diseases, which they could not get except in some such highly specialized and pre-eminently efficient institution as the Hospital for Sick Children.

On this year's service the Hospital expended $345,126 and finds itself in the hole to the extent of $134,284. What comes in around Christmas-time keeps the Hospital going. So long as the word "Christmas" retains its original significance could any charity possibly exhibit more of the sympathy of your readers or entitle itself to more of their support?

Faithfully yours,

I. E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman Appeal Committee

TOWN COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the Council was held in the Council Chamber, on Monday night.

The members present were Reeve Graham, Councillors Dunbar, Jewell, Paul and Simpson.

His Worship Mayor MacGregor presided.

A communication was read from the Secretary to the Governor-General, thanking the Council and citizens of Napanee for the enthusiastic welcome accorded Lord and Lady Byng on their recent visit, and that it was the wish of their Excellencies that the citizens be given a holiday in the name of His Majesty the King to commemorate their visit.

On motion it was decided to issue a proclamation declaring Monday, the 22nd day of December, a holiday in the schools to commemorate the visit of Lord and Lady Byng to Napanee.

Reeve Graham informed the Council that several loads of sand had been drawn and distributed on the highway ascending Roblin's Hill, which was in a slippery and dangerous condition, owing to the sudden cold snap. This territory is outside the town, but it was an emergency case, and he thought the Department of Highways would settle for it, and accordingly a bill was sent that body for $10.00.

The matter of decorating Dundas St. for Christmas was taken up, and a motion was made and carried that the Council co-operate with the Board of Commerce to provide suitable decorations for our main street during Christmas week, and that Councillor Simpson be appointed to put the proposition up to the Board.

Coun. Dunbar reported as representative of the Council to the recent Conference in Toronto of the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association. Seventy-five delegates from all parts of Ontario attended the meeting. They were welcomed by Mayor Hiltz. The chief speaker was Sir Adam Beck, who urged the necessity of developing power from the St. Lawrence River, as the present source of the Hydro's power was taxed to its capacity.

NEW BOOKS AT THE LIBRARY.

A consignment of new books has just been placed in the library. In addition to the latest fiction, the following excellent volumes will provide good reading for the long winter evenings.

"The British Empire"—There are twelve volumes in this series, making a comprehensive survey of the Empire, its history and development, its life and activities, its resources and potentialities. The first three volumes have been issued and read respectively with (1) The Dominions and Dependencies of the Empire (2) The Story of the Empire; (3) The Constitution and Laws of the Empire. Each volume is complete in itself and should be in great demand.

"The Great White South"—This is a well illustrated book by a member of Captain Scott's British Antarctic Expedition. It introduces the reader to strange scenes in the frozen South.

"With Lawrence in Arabia"—This is the tale of a man, whose only military experience was as a "dispatch-rider" but who created an Arabian army, saved a country, created a V. C. and a general's commission. It is a true story yet stranger than any told by Kipling.

"India a Bird's Eye View"—India is attracting the attention of the world to-day and everyone interested in the history of the Empire is asking "What next?" This book is said to be the best single volume account of present day conditions, and is written by a former Governor-General of Bengal, who speaks with authority.

"Tales From Nature's Wonderlands"—Wonders of the past and wonders of to-day are the subjects of this new book of nature tales. The old and young this profusely illustrated volume should be most popular.

"Grenfell Knight Errant of the North"—The author of this book spent a summer with Dr. Grenfell on The Labrador and now tells the story of this crusader of the North in a vivid, dramatic fashion intended primarily for boys and girls, but interesting to older readers as well.

"Yourself and Your Body"—This book for juveniles treats of the human body in a fascinating and dramatic manner. All boys and girls who read it will thereafter pay more respect to their physical development.

These are only a few of the new books. There are hundreds of others in the West room, the best books that are published, waiting for readers. The public have access to the shelves and may make their own selections. The library is sorely in need of funds. What more sensible Christmas present for a servant, an employee or a friend than a year's subscription to the library?

He was a shocking stutterer, and stuck at everything. So he went to a stuttering specialist to try to cure his defects. After his twelfth lesson —("Five guineas, please")—he could say quite dialingly, "Peter Piper picked a pack of pickled peppers."

His friends congratulated him upon his splendid achievement.

"Yes," said the stutterer, doubtfully, "of course, it's a p-p-point, but I find it s-s-such a j-j-jolly d-d-difficult remark to w-work into an ordinary c-c-conversation."

OBITUARY

Mrs. E. O. Seymour.

On Saturday, November 22nd, 1924, there passed away at the home of her father, Mr. C. B. Scantlebury, College Hill, Belleville, Evelyn Elmira Seymour, beloved wife of Rev. Edgar O. Seymour, Pastor of the Havelock Methodist Church.

Through long months of sickness and suffering, Mrs. Seymour kept faith and courage in the hope of a possible recovery. Through this long period she was not only sustained by the care and attention of those who so faithfully ministered unto her but also by the sympathy and prayers of a large connection of intimate friends and associates. Her patience and kind thoughtfulness was particularly manifested and her increasing reliance upon the Higher Power was a stimulation of faith both to herself and to those who, day by day, mapped an unceasing battle against the Grim Reaper.

When at last the frail body could no longer be sustained, her spirit quietly took its flight back to the Father who gave it, there to enjoy fellowship with the Christ whose life is hid in God.

The deceased was born and educated in Belleville, an honor graduate of Albert College in Music, taking her A.A.C.M. and in Elocution. For years her training and talents were devoted to the Mission Band and Sunday School work in the University Sunday School. Her marriage eight years ago to Rev. Edgar O. Seymour introduced her to a still wider field of church and Sunday School activity.

Through these years she was a devoted wife and true helpmate in the congregations of both Bath and Havelock during the pastorates of her bereaved husband.

The funeral service was held on Tuesday, Nov. 25th, 1924, at 2.30 p.m., from the home of her father.

The service was a very impressive one and bore eloquent testimony to the esteem and worth in which Mrs. Seymour was held. Rev. H. B. Kenny, a most intimate friend of the deceased, conducted the service and spoke from the text in St. Mark's Gospel, chapter 14, verse 8, "She hath done what she could," emphasizing the spirit of helpfulness and loving service. A lifelong friend in the person of Rev. Dr. Baker spoke a few appropriate words regarding her beautiful life and character.

One of the fine tributes of respect was the presence of as many ministers of the Bay of Quinte Conference, who assisted in the service.

The attendance of so many friends from Bath and Havelock circuits was a testimony of the esteem and regard in which the deceased was held. The many and beautiful floral tributes were a wonderful expression of the love and sympathy of many friends.

Members of the Quarterly Official Board of Havelock in the persons of Messrs. A. C. Denike, Charles Roberts, W. B. Ritchie, Edward Fennel, George VanVolkenburg and George Spencer, acted as bearers to lay away to rest in the Belleville Cemetery one whom they had learned to love.—The Daily Intelligencer, Belleville, Nov. 26th, 1924.

FIGHT THE CORN BORER

How to Deal With This Very Troublesome Pest

Plough the Field Thoroughly—Leave Stubble and All Other Remnants Buried—Grow Dent Corn Instead of Flint—Try a Trap Crop.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The methods of control are simple, inexpensive and not contrary to good farm practice, says Prof. L. Caesar of the Department of Entomology, Ontario Agricultural College. To get a clear idea of this pest it is necessary to keep in mind that the borers winter over and remain until the end of May in any part of the corn plant above ground large enough to conceal them. Hence they will be found in the stalks, stubble, cobs, or any remnants of the crop left in the field or elsewhere. They will also be to some extent in stout weeds growing among the corn. Control measures, therefore, consist mainly in so treating these that the borers will be destroyed. If there is a silo this is easy, for all that is necessary then is to cut the crop low, chaff it, plough the stubble under completely and not drag it up again when cultivating. The cutting knives and fermentation kill all the borers that go into the silo, and the ploughing destroys all left in the field, provided everything is kept beneath the surface.

Plough the Field Thoroughly.

If there is no silo, or if the silo will not hold all the corn, the task is sometimes a little harder. In such cases the field must be thoroughly ploughed after the crop has been removed. In addition some method must be practised of disposing of the stalks and ears or cobs. The best plan is to run all of them through a cutting-box or shredder, feed the cattle all they will eat, throw the remainder into the manure and haul this out and plough it under before the end of May. If for any reason the stalks are fed whole, the uneaten portion should not be thrown out into the manure, but should be kept separate and drawn out and burned. It is better to burn the remnants than to plough them under, because it is hard to cover them completely with the plough. The great point to keep in mind is that no stalks, pieces of stalks or even cobs should be left above ground in the field or along fences or in the barn or the barnyard or anywhere else. Moreover, all burning or ploughing must be completed by the end of May, for otherwise the borers will chance into moths, fly around, and lay their eggs. (The moths appear in June and July).

Leave Stubble and Other Remnants Buried.

Ploughing down of the stubble and other corn remnants plays a great part in the control of the borers, but to be effective what is ploughed under must not be dragged up again when cultivating the field, but must be left buried, for if they are dragged up many borers will escape destruction. An example of this occurred this year in a field in Elgin County, where much of the ploughed stubble was dragged up by a toothed cultivator. In this field over 10,000 living borers were found. If the stubble had been left covered almost every borer would have perished. Hence the cultivation of the field should not be done with a toothed implement but with a disc, and a disc drill, if possible, used in sowing. Should, however, some of the stubble be brought up it will pay well, and will not take much time to pick and burn it.

The ploughing should be done with a wide-barrow plough, and should be to a depth of at least six inches. It may be done either in the fall or the spring, but if in the fall the earlier the better.

Often the stubble cannot be covered completely unless it is first rolled or disced, or both rolled and disced, or in some cases unless a split log or leveller is run over it to break it off or loosen or pull it apart. This is especially true when the corn has been planted in hills or has been cut high or beaten down by storms.

Grow Dent Corn and Not Flint.

In the parts of the county where the borers are numerous it will be advisable for a time to grow dent corn instead of flint, because it is stouter and so withstands attacks better.

A Trap Crop Will Be of Benefit.

It will also help greatly in such places if a trap crop of flint—for example, Smutnose — consisting of about a dozen rows is planted about the middle of May and the planting of the main crop postponed until June 1st or as late as possible without running any risk. The moths then will lay their eggs chiefly on the early corn and leave the main crop largely uninfested. The trap rows should be cut low in August and fed to the cattle and the borers present thus destroyed.

The above measures involve only a small amount of extra work for any farmer. The corn crop is well worth this, and therefore we hope that each farmer will gladly do his part and encourage his neighbor to do likewise. Now that control measures have been discovered and made known the problem of saving the industry lies with the farmers themselves.

When horses went out of fashion in some parts of the country, they took home some with them.

It isn't always necessary to rebuild a farm home to make it more attractive. Paint and shrubbery will work wonders.

In thousands of homes

Big, brown loaves of snow-white bread, light cakes and crisp, crunching pastry are evidences of good housekeeping. Most housekeepers take a pride in them.

Thousands of home bakers depend on Quaker Flour for their baking success. It never disappoints them.

CHAMPION SWINE BREEDERS OF WESTERN CANADA

The six boys in the photograph were winning teams in the Boys' and Girls' Swine Club competitions in Western Canada. This is a distinction in itself, as the clubs number 30 and have a membership of more than 500. Each pair of boys represents one of the three Prairie Provinces. Following the provincial competitions in Western Canada they were brought to Toronto by the Canadian National Railways to compete at the Royal Winter Agricultural Show for a cup and medals donated by Mr. W. D. Robb, who is seen in the centre of the group. Mr. Robb, who is vice-president in charge of Colonization and Development of the Canadian National Railways, presented the cup for annual competition as an encouragement in developing swine husbandry in Western Canada. The cup and medals, also shown in the photograph, were won by the two boys on the left.

Minneapolis will never have anything on St. Paul. A fellow from Minneapolis came to St. Paul the other day just to look around and find fault. He approached a fruit-stand, picked up a large melon, and asked with a sneer:

"Is this the largest apple you have in St. Paul?"

"Hey," bellowed the owner of the fruitstand, "put that grape down."

Her Friends Gave Her Up

"I was badly run down after having 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy," writes Mrs. Baxter

To have 'flu alone is surely bad enough, but to have 'flu with pneumonia and pleurisy is in most cases fatal. Even 'flu itself after it has run its course leaves the system in a weakened, depressed, nervous, run-down condition, but few are able to fight 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy, and live to tell the tale. No wonder Mrs. Baxter was given up when she had 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy. No wonder after having had these dreadful afflictions she was terribly run down. The mystery is how she ever survived. But we will let Mrs. Baxter tell you her story in her own way.—"I want to tell you what Carnol has done for me and mine. I was badly run down after having 'flu, pneumonia and pleurisy. My sister advised me to try Carnol. She used it both for herself and her daughter and both were completely relieved. I have now taken five bottles of Carnol and can say I never enjoyed better health. My daughter is also taking it for a spring tonic. I advised a neighbour to give it to her little girl who has had bronchitis from birth and she is getting well. We all praise your wonderful medicine and only hope it will do as much for others as it has done for me and mine. A long life to Carnol!"—Mrs. E. E. Baxter, R.R. No. 2, St. John County, New Brunswick.

Carnol is a wonderful tonic and gives marvellous results in all weakened and run down conditions, because its ingredients are the finest tissue, nerve and blood builders, and are known to every doctor in the medical profession, full particulars of which will be found in every circular accompanying a bottle of Carnol. 6-24

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Christianna Spratt, who departed this life on Dec. 4th, 1922.

We who love you, sadly miss you,
As it dawns another year.
In the lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of you are dearest near.
Friends may think you are forgotten,
When at times they see us smile,
But they little know the sorrow
Which that smile hides all the while.

Sadly missed by Husband and Children. 49a

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Mary A. Spencer, who died Nov. 27th, 1920.

49ap —Husband, Son and Daughter.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Agusta Hicks, who passed away December 5th, 1917.

Two world may change from year to year,
And friends from day to day;
But never will the one I love
From memory pass away.

The rolling stream of time rolls on,
But still the vacant chair,
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile,
Of one who once sat there.

Sadly missed by Daughter. 49ap

Hot stuff,—but it feels cool and soothing. That's Williams' Camphorated Mustard Cream. It relieves rheumatism quicker than anything else. It's wonderful for stiffness or an aching back; it relieves a cold in the chest without blistering or burning. Splendid for kiddies' croup troubles, too. Get it from your druggist to-day. Address and Presentation

On Friday evening, November 28th, the members and friends of Fourth Line Church assembled at Mrs. Horace Denyes, at her home. Games were indulged in the early part of the evening. Then the following address was read by Mr. Stanley Reid, and presented to Mrs. Denyes, the organist of the Fourth Line Church and Sunday School :

To Mrs. Horace Denyes,

Fellow Worker,—For some time we have looked forward for this evening to come, and we hope that our coming to your home to-night will not inconvenience you in any way, but our presence here to-night is due to the earnest desire of the officials, Members and Friends of the Fourth Line Church to recognize in some tangible way the excellent and untiring service rendered by you to our Church and Sunday School. You have officiated at the organ in our Church services, Choir practise, Sunday School, Christmas entertainments, in fact, whenever called upon, you have responded most cheerfully, and as we review the past years, there has been scarcely a service held but you have been in your place to assist to the utmost of your opportunity and ability. Your time, talent and service have been unstintingly given to the Master's work without any thought of receiving any personal remuneration.

To-night we want to express our thanks in deeds, yet we do not suggest that it is any form of payment, but rather a thankful recognition of your valued contributions of music to the religious services and worship in our Church and Sunday School.

We, the pastor, officials, members, and friends of the Fourth Line Church, ask you to accept these presents as a token of our hearty appreciation and thanks, trusting that your life will long be spared to continue in the Master's work.—

Signed on behalf of the members and friends.

W. R. MERRICK, Pastor.
WM. ROBSON,
C. F. REID.

Mrs. B. N. Jackson and Mrs. S. M. Reid presented Mrs. Denyes with a mahogany piano bench, and also a rattan fern stand. Mrs. Denyes expressed her thanks in a few well chosen words, and Rev. Mr. Merrick, in a few remarks, showed his appreciation of Mrs. Denyes' faithful and splendid work as organist. Everybody joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow", after which the ladies served dainty refreshments.

After spending a most enjoyable evening, the crowd dispersed to their homes.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

One step won't take you very far,
You've got to keep on walking;
One word won't tell folks who you are,
You've got to keep on talking;
One inch won't make you very tall,
You've got to keep on growing;
One little ad won't do it all,
You've got to keep them going.

FUNERAL OF THE SISTERS, MARY AND MARGARET MORRISON

Requiem Mass Celebrated in St. Mary's Cathedral by Monsignor Hartigan. — Tribute Is Paid to the Memory of the Dead.

Two white caskets under the one large pall, the arms of the cross thrown protectingly over them—the vast Gothic interior of St. Mary's cathedral lending majesty and dignity to the scene—a vast concourse of people in all walks of life, here a general's crossed swords, near him a workman's overalls, the stylish fur coat of a wealthy lady, the neat business suits of prominent merchants, the red-ribboned bonnet of a Salvation Army woman, the uniforms of Royal Military College cadets, forming into a great mass bowed down by sorrow—the sweetly pathetic singing of the convent girls in the choir loft, punctuated now and then by the solemn intonations of the priests in the sanctuary—the awesome notes of the "Dies Irae", with its solemn message of "that day of wrath, that dreadful day" and then, at the end the triumphant peal of the "Libera, Me Domine", which seemed to proclaim to all in joyful accents "there is no Death"—heads lifted, shoulders bowed down by sorrow became erect and once again the great "Libera", the hymn of souls, triumphantly admitted to the Gates of Gold bringing peace into the hearts of the suffering.

Requiem at Cathedral.

Such was the funeral of the Morrison sisters, Mary and Margaret, at St. Mary's cathedral on Thursday morning, Nov. 27th. The Rev. Mgr. Hartigan, of Prescott, celebrated the solemn high requiem mass, assisted by Rev. Father Hyland and the Rev. Father James. The choir was from the girl schoolmates of the Morrison sisters from Notre Dame Convent, with Prof. Nourry at the organ. Every seat in the great cathedral was taken and the steps and doors outside crowded. The youthful innocence of the two young girls and their beautiful characters assuring a quick assumption to the world which is without end, robbed the occasion of that fearsome grief which sometimes comes to such funerals. Sorrow there was, but of a peaceful and resigned nature.

Six of Kingston's finest young men marched beside each casket, among them cadets from the R. M. C., and at the conclusion of the beautiful services the cortege proceeded to St. Mary's cemetery, the two hearses followed by a car loaded with floral tributes.

It marked the peaceful and fitting tribute of thousands to the passing of two beautiful young girls and the last chapter in the tragedy which cast a gloom over the city of Kingston last week.

Dr. C. A. Morrison, head of the stricken family, was the chief mourner, and with him he had his two little sons, Hubert and Charles. Campbell, Dr. Edward Ryan, Major-General Sir C. Macdonell, Commandant of the Royal Military College, Warden J. C. Ponaford, and other prominent men and women from every walk of life.

The Flaming Moment

By KATHERINE HOPSON

(Copyright, 1923, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Bess Brownell linked her arm in Patricia's as they went downstairs. "I don't like to criticize people, especially when I'm visiting them, but I must say I never saw a bridal party where everybody concerned acted so much as if they wanted to crawfish out," she laughingly declared.

Patricia, who had just arrived, looked surprised. "Surely you must be mistaken, Bess," she remonstrated, remembering the latter's propensity to exaggerate things during their college days.

Bess shook her curly head. "I've been here a week, and that's long enough to see a good many things."

By this time they had reached the dining room, where they were joined by others, so the conversation was necessarily became general. Nor were they alone together again that evening. But Patricia thought over those words many times next day, when she and the other young people decorated the house with roses and smilax for the wedding. Apparently everyone was blithe and gay, but over all was an unmistakable atmosphere of tenseness and foreboding.

Late that afternoon Patricia went to the drug store on an errand, and as she was leaving, a rather showily dressed young man came forward and, with an apology for addressing her, asked: "You are one of the Warren house-party, aren't you?"

She acknowledged the fact, and he drew from his pocket an envelope.

"Then I'm going to ask you to do me the favor of giving this to Miss Ada Warren, when you have the chance to see her alone."

Almost involuntarily she took the letter, her gray eyes raised questioningly.

"I am an old friend of Miss Warren —she'll understand," he added with a disarming smile. He bowed courteously and was gone.

With deepening misgivings, she complied with his request. Ada's childlike face suddenly clouded as she read the letter, her gray eyes raised questioningly.

"Why, Patricia, dear, here?"

She sat up in confusion. "I stayed to hear the welcome of your trip to the station." Furiously she wiped her wet cheeks, glad that the light was well shaded.

He sat down beside her. "When I got there I found a night letter. Things at my post aren't so bad as they were first reported." She could tell by his voice he was much cheered.

"I find on talking to the agent that I make better connection by waiting for the limited tomorrow morning. So I'm not going tonight."

"I'm very glad things seem better." In her effort for self-control Patricia's voice sounded almost cold. But he didn't seem to notice.

There was a moment's silence, then he said: "Perhaps this isn't the occasion to speak—but in times like this we can lay aside conventions. Probably you know Ada's found out she cares more for another man—and, well, I care more for another woman." He smiled, but his eyes were pleading and tender. "You are first with me, Patricia, you were from the beginning, but you were so—so reserved—I didn't think there was any hope." There was another moment of silence, then he continued: "Sometimes, Patricia, the dearest thing comes back and gives us another chance. Will you turn back, dear, to where we stood before misunderstandings separated us?"

She did not speak. She never could in moments of strong emotion.

"If you'll marry me tomorrow, I'll take you to San Antonio; and then—when things are more settled on the border, we can begin life again together. Will you come?"

Still she did not speak, but by way of answer, drew down his tired young head until her cheek rested against her shining hair.

Though both knew that the hasty wedding would bring surprise and disapproval from some who were dear, and life in the frontier country stretched before them an uncharted sea; yet neither regret nor apprehension marred their peace, or dimmed the gladness of this flaming moment that was all their own.

Brains vs. Embonpoint

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1923, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Ned Majers, promising young brother of Stone Majers, head of the dress manufacturing house of Majers & Clay, was put in charge of the "Stout Model" department of that large concern, he announced his intention of having a woman for his "right-hand man." Stone Majers and the other executives of the concern had always held out against women in responsible positions. Even their stenographers were young men. Girls were well and good at the telephone or to run errands, or something of that sort, Stone Majers told his brother, but when you come to having them in your office with you, you first get to noticing what sort of dresses they wear, then you start in making pretty speeches, and the next thing you know your mind is more on the girl than your business.

"When I get ready to marry," he continued, "I'm going to get some nice little girl, fresh from boarding school. I don't want some one that knows the dress-manufacturing business better than I do, and that will serve us shop talk at breakfast and dinner."

"That's just where I'm perfectly safe," Ned retorted. "I couldn't possibly fall in love with the sort of girl I'm going to get. What I want a woman for is because in my end of the work the right sort of woman can fairly sell the models off her back. I'm going to have a 'stout' that's why she will help sell the type of dresses that I am going in for, and, moreover, that of my father in love with her. I want a big stout girl a lot and get along like a stout girl a lot and get along with her beautifully, but I'm no York. I don't want a fat wife. I simply could not think of it."

"Well, how are you going to get this 'right-hand man' of yours?"

"Advertise, of course. 'Wanted—A stout woman with brains and a knowledge of the woman's dress business.' That ought to get her."

So the advertisement was inserted in the morning papers, and for an hour or two the door that led to Ned Majers' office was blocked with heavyweight applicants, who considered themselves qualified for the position. Apparently they all did qualify as to embonpoint, Ned's problem was simplified when telling which of the fifty-seven applicants had the most brains. So important did he consider this qualification, in fact, that when Hilda Clark tipped the scales only at 100 pounds—hardly one of the above heavyweights—Majers Ned waived this slight discrepancy because of her very obvious advantages in the other considerations. He had had a set of scales brought into his office from the factory, so that he might not forget to ascertain the data regarding the weight of his applicants.

"You look fat enough, anyway," he said good-naturedly to her, as he helped her step down from the weighing platform, "fat plenty of butter and potatoes and starch. I guess you are just the 'man' I'm looking for. And as he showed her to the exit hall he made his way to his brother's office.

"Well, I've got her," he said. "And she's fat and all intellect. We're both safe. I know I could get sentimental over such a heavyweight, and you couldn't stand the intellect. She's the kind of girl that looks as if she knows just what a buyer was going to order as soon as he came into the place, and it is all in her eyes—the brains, I mean."

So Hilda Clark was installed, and before long Stone Majers had forgotten that he ever opposed his brother in taking on a woman assistant. With an amazing capacity for hard work and a keen interest in all the phases of her work that brought her active mind into contact with other minds as shrewd as her own, or nearly so, she soon had charge of the selling end of the business for both brothers. Her personal magnetism, rather than actual beauty, made every frock she tried on look like a creation of distinction, and this, as Ned had foreseen, had considerable effect on the size of buyers' orders. But more than even with the same ability as Hilda Clark, could ever have pushed the selling of the Majers & Clay "exclusives" as she did. So the work piled up, and evenings, when she was not staying after hours straightening out a tangle of orders with Ned, she was conferring with Stone. It was hard work, but pleasant. It agreed with her, but—

"What's the matter with the last model?" was the daily and powerful put query of one of the large buyers one day some six months after Hilda had come to be Ned's "right-hand man." "They are the dowdiest things I ever saw. Say, honestly, just because a fat woman's for she doesn't want to dress like her great-grandmother."

That was the first of the complaints. Others followed. The designer was blamed first, but she was apparently putting out as good work as ever. The workmanship was the same, and the same quality of material was going into the dresses.

One day Ned came into his brother's office with a pale but relieved face.

"I know what's the matter; Hilda's lost twenty pounds. She's been ailing it gradually. I know something was wrong, for the models looked so dowdy on her. I knew she must be getting thin. You know, I never could fall in love with a fat girl. And, anyway, I got her on the scales today. She wouldn't get on, so I lifted her on. I couldn't have lifted her when she first came. And I found out what was the matter."

"Does that help matters any?" snapped Stone.

"Well, not so much, only that we know what the matter is. And, besides—"

"But we ought to have a woman here that can show the dresses. She is ruining the business now. The buyers say something is the matter with the models. Couldn't she take another thin, something or drink milk?"

"She says it doesn't do any good. I know you'd say that, so I suggested it to her." Ned laughed at the humor of the situation, that was not apparent to his brother. "And, besides, there was something I wanted to tell you—"

"Well, I hate to say it, but Hilda is not doing any good if she can't get fat again. She's clever, but that isn't enough. And yet I hate to let her go. Can you think of anything else we might get her to do? Is there something in your department you might get her to do so we wouldn't have to cut down her salary?"

Suddenly the two men sat up very straight and began to talk about now entirely different orders animatedly, in an effort to persuade Hilda Clark, who had just entered, that they had not been talking about her.

"Has Ned told you?" she smiled, putting a sisterly hand on Stone's arm.

"Yes, Hilda, and I'm sorry; but maybe we can do something about it."

"Sorry? Because I'm going to be your sister-in-law, or because I've lost twenty pounds?"

"My sister-in-law! Why didn't some one tell me?" cried Stone.

"I did try to tell you," laughed his brother.

"And I have something to tell you both," announced Hilda. "You know that first day I came here, I saw Ned, and after I left his office he showed me to the hall and—well, I sat mixed up and went the wrong way. Ned must have come in here to talk to you. I'm glad you're quite distinctly what he said. He said: 'We're both safe. I never could get sentimental over such an heavyweight, and you couldn't stand the intellect.' So I knew right away that if I wanted either of you to fall in love with me I'd either have to be short or become brainless. At first I ate all the potatoes and sugar I could. I knew this hard work would naturally pull me down, and then—well, Ned and I seemed to hit it off from the first. Besides, it was easier losing pounds than brains, and I'd rather part with them. I may need my brains later on. So I began to diet. That's why I wouldn't have lunch with you—because I didn't want you to see what I was about—and also no potatoes, no bread. I told my best friends I was Hooverizing. And so I lost twenty pounds. I knew it was the ruination of my business career."

"I'm glad you mean you honestly did that?" demanded Stone. "You know a woman really do that much for Ned?"

Hilda shook her head strongly in the affirmative.

"Well, suppose after you had got thin he hadn't happened to like you—you'd have gone on with your diet?"

Ned had endured his brother's banter long enough. He stood behind Hilda and put his arm around her now shapely waist.

"I have married her if she was a perfect forty-six," he said. "Stone is only jealous because you didn't decide to lose your brains for him."

Perpetual Honeymoons.

A woman writer asks if a perpetual honeymoon can exist in this modern day, and quotes in connection with the question what another woman said, to-wit: "Any woman who has lived with a man eleven years can find ground for divorce." There is much talk of this kind and there are many divorces, all of which are the product of materialism, which doesn't see the difference between pleasure and happiness. That fact in its real working is behind all divorce and married infelicities. The fact is that pleasure is material and soon wears out; happiness is spiritual and lasts forever. Every marriage must note from time to time when they are swayed by one or the other. Hence the need of divorces, because materialism flourishes as never before. It makes the husband impatient and the wife impatient. When a couple reaches that state they should pray old hymns together and go to prayer meeting. Divorces and dry goods won't save them.—Ohio State Journal.

Importance of Paraguay.

It was from Asuncion, Paraguay, that parties went out to found Buenos Aires, Santa Fe, Corrientes and others of the important cities of the River Plate region. In fact, Argentina and Uruguay were once under the jurisdiction of the governor of Asuncion, and it was at the request of a Paraguayan governor that Argentina was cut off from Paraguay. The first railroad constructed in South America was built by Paraguay. The first iron foundries, the first cannon and ammunition factories of South America were all established in Paraguay.

Great Salmon Spawning Ground.

From early in March until late in November the great annual breeding of the salmon goes on. Upon 1,700 miles of coast-line, from Bristol Bay in Alaska, to the Fraser river in British Columbia, the salmon swarm, women in regular and wonderfully regulated processions up the various creeks, water streams and rivers to spawn and die, as did their parents four years before.

Corns cause much suffering, but Holloway's Corn Remover offers a speedy, sure, and satisfactory relief.

"I know that I am not good enough for you," he said her.

"I don't intend to give you a chance to prove it," she replied.

"Sickness Stalked Into This Happy Little Home"

When Jim Harrow moved into his pretty white-washed cottage he thought he had reached the height of happiness. His wife and his baby boy loudly voiced their pleasure, too. Everything seemed to be "breaking right" for Jim.

But the happy days didn't last long. Sickness fell upon Mrs. Harrow. "It's just a pain in my back, maybe rheumatism," she said. But Jim knew how a previous attack of pleurisy had left her, so he called in a doctor. The doctor hinted at "lung trouble" and advised a complete examination. Jim took his wife to a specialist, who quickly confirmed the first verdict—"Consumption," he said. Husband and wife stared at each other in breathless misery, but cheer was forthcoming. The specialist said the doctors' patent treatment at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives will put Mrs. Harrow on her feet again; but she must go now—at once.

Jim's kindly neighbor is taking care of the baby boy while Jim is "keeping house" by himself. Every few days the postman leaves a letter which tells how kind nurses, and careful doctors all do their utmost to bring back the health that belonged to Mrs. Harrow. Shortly the letters will cease for she is almost ready to come back to the little white cottage.

Should you wish to have a hand in such worthwhile work as this, please send your contributions to Hon. W. A. Charlton, President, 223 College Street, Toronto, Ontario.

"If I could remember his number I would make my call Station-to-Station and save money."

This subscriber had the wrong idea. He didn't need to know the number of the distant telephone.

All he needed to say to the Long Distance operator was: "I will speak to anyone at ——" (then give her the name of the person who has the telephone—and the address too, if he knew it).

Perhaps this information will enable YOU to use the lower Station-to-Station rate more frequently.

"She Was Too Sick To Try Entrance Exams."

Jeanne was one of the many children in New Ontario who travel miles each day to school. Fair weather or foul, they trudge along the rough roads eager for the little bit of education possible for them. Fifteen years had passed since Jeanne's birth, and it was during that time that the best of health came to her. Most of those years she had spent in the home school, helping around the house and at odd times working here and there to earn a little money.

One day she was caught in a sleet storm on her way home from school. Before long a terrible cough set in, which finally ended in Consumption. Of course, it was impossible for her to try the entrance examinations. "Another year, perhaps, but certainly not now," said the doctor.

Now she is resting at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. Her pleasing shyness still remains, her curly, fair hair refuses to behave, while her blue eyes with the aid of her big sunshine cheer and hope. "Sure, says Jeanne, "I'm going to High School, why not?" and we echo "Why not?" and the doctor says "Why not?" So Jeanne is on the road to recovery.

Will you help her and others to reach the goal, by contributing to the hospital funds? Gifts may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton, President, 223 College Street, Toronto, Ontario.

LIME WILL AID CLOVER

It Enables the Plant to Cope With the Winter

Acid Phosphate Good for Clover and Alfalfa—A Great Root Farmer—Nitrate of Soda Helps In Cold Springtime—Poultry Pointers.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Did your clover kill out in the spring? If it did, you had better write the Department of Chemistry, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, for directions for taking a sample of your soil to discover the reason.

Reports from some districts this year show a good deal of winter wheat and clover killed out, states the Department of Chemistry, O.A.C. This is highly undesirable, and can be prevented by the use of lime and acid phosphate applied with the crop on which the clover is seeded. In some cases lime is not necessary, for the soil is not acid; but where acidity occurs lime is very essential. Phosphorus is a great root farmer, and it is the strong deep-rooted clover and wheat plant that withstands the alternate freezing and thawing of spring weather.

Result of Lime Phosphate Experiments.

In answer to a circular sent out last spring to the twenty-five cooperative experimenters handling our Lime Phosphate Experiment, the majority report that the clover on the half acre which received crushed limestone and acid phosphate in the fall of 1922 is in perfect shape, while in many cases the untreated section did not winter nearly as well and in one or two cases will have to be ploughed up.

If seeding is done with spring grain it is good business to use acid phosphate at the rate of at least 200 pounds per acre, and preferably 400. If the soil is acid, lime is also necessary to give a strongly-rooted clover and alfalfa which will carry it over the first winter, the most critical period of the life of the plant.

Nitrate of Soda Helps In Cold Springs.

In such a season as the spring of last year, cold and wet, the greatest need of the plant is for nitrates, says the Department of Chemistry, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. The ground will be so cold and wet that it takes a long time to warm up, and as a result bacterial activity is at a low ebb. As a result no nitrates are formed in the soil, and plants can make vegetative growth.

To correct this and enable the plant to get away to a good start, apply nitrate of soda one hundred pounds to one hundred and fifty pounds per acre at once. If bought in lots of several hundred pounds it can be obtained at a reasonable price, and its benefit is almost certain. Do not, however, apply if heavy rain threatens, as it is soluble and will be lost by washing.

Another benefit which will be derived in this that the nitrate of soda dissolves in the soil water and soaks down into the soil. The roots go after it, and hence the result is a deeper rooted plant more able to withstand the period of drouth which so often follows a wet seed time.

Poultry Pointers.

An ointment of lard and kerosene is a good one for scaly legs.

Nothing will more quickly make scrubs of your stock than scrub treatment.

The best tonics you can give your stock are fresh air, exercise and a variety of foods.

It is usually the best policy to keep the hens shut up on cold, rainy days. They are better inside than out during such weather.

"Bad luck" is nothing more than a penalty for mismanagement. Before you begin to complain, it would be better to investigate.

Fowls are naturally of a hardy nature. They can be kept so by good care and breeding only from the strongest and most vigorous specimens each year.

The poultry building should not be so wide that the rays of the sun can not reach the back of the interior of the house. Otherwise it will be damp. Fourteen feet is a convenient width.

Chicken mites do not feed to any great extent upon other hosts when chickens are at hand. They are carried about chiefly by the interchange of poultry and in crates and boxes in which fowls are shipped.

Poultry raising is similar to farming in that it is not so much the number of acres owned, but the number properly handled that gives the profits. Small, well cared for flocks always bring the best returns.

The hen's greatest profit-producing period is the first and second years, and unless a hen is an especially good breeder she should be disposed of at the end of her second laying season and before starting to molt.

Boys and girls should be encouraged to start in the poultry business. It requires little money to invest, and the current expenditure may be reduced in part by utilising farm and home wastes. If the project begins with a laying flock the return begins early, especially by supplementing the food supply of the home.

Egg Production at O. A. C.

The average egg production of the one thousand pullets that were trapnested for the year was 168 eggs each. We are trying to improve this size in size of body, size of eggs and color, rather than increasing the number of eggs. Five pens of ten pullets each were placed in laying competitions. The fifty birds averaged slightly above 120 eggs each. The high bird of these in the contests was 263 eggs, and the high bird of those on the plant was 296 eggs.—Prof. W. R. Graham, O. A. C., Guelph.

Morse and the Telegraph

"I wish that in one instant I could tell you of my safe arrival, but we are 3,000 miles apart and must wait four long weeks to hear from each other."

Finley Morse, a 20-year-old, homesick boy wrote this sentence in a letter to his mother in 1811. She was in the little Charlestown, Massachusetts home whi Morse was born, he in London, whither he had gone to study art. Between them rolled the wide Atlantic, crossed only by slow sailing ships. Twenty-one years went by and Morse returning to America aboard the packet "Sully." In a chance conversation with Dr. Jackson of Boston, who had been attending lectures on electricity at the Sorbonne in Paris, Morse conceived the idea of the electro-magnetic telegraph.

Now Morse had been an artist ever since his graduation from Yale. His plaster model of "The Dying Hercules" was awarded a gold medal by the Adelphi Society of Arts in London. His painting of the same subject was awarded one of the best exhibits at the Royal Academy in 1812. It seemed odd that such a mind should take up the problem of communication by electricity. Others in England and on the continent had made efforts and valuable discoveries along this line. Indeed, several instruments had been constructed. But Morse's first crude working model, finished in 1825, was the nearest approach to practicability. By the autumn of 1837, in which year an English railway company was actually using telegraphy of a cruder variety in the operation of its trains out of London, Morse had successfully demonstrated his system over 1,700 feet of copper wire at New York University.

Years of poverty and disappointment followed this success which the world was so slow to appreciate. Finally, in 1844, Congress appropriated $30,000, constructed a telegraph line from Washington to Baltimore, and over the miles of intervening space shot the first long distance message in the familiar alphabet of dots and dashes. It ran: "What hath God wrought?" After twelve years of patient effort, at 52 years of age, Morse at last came into his own. The world took up telegraphy and rewarded Morse with honors and gold.

The stage coach was the fastest overland conveyance out of Toronto when Canada adopted the telegraph. Back in 1847 the Toronto, Hamilton & St. Catharines & Niagara Falls Electro Magnetic Telegraph Company stretched a line along the route which connected with another to Buffalo. It was capitalized at $16,000. The same year the Montreal Telegraph Company came into being with $60,000 in shares, and buying up the Toronto company, presently had a line of cedar poles topped with white oak cross-arms and glass insulators, stretching from the Falls to Quebec City. The current travelled over No. 9 gauge galvanized iron wire, brought over from England, and the first of its kind to be used in America. By the end of 1847 the Montreal Telegraph Company had 540 miles of wire, 9 offices, 23 employees, and had handled 21,000 messages. The advent of the Northern Railway, the Grand Trunk and Great Western in the early 1850's brought further extension of the telegraph in Ontario.

Two old time operators still living in Toronto can recall events of the early days. Mr. R. F. Easson remembers the trouble linemen had repairing the iron wires when suffered greatly from falling trees and from sleety weather, which formed ice to snag them. Mr. John Duncan lived with his father, first station master at Richmond Hill on the old Northern, now the Grand Trunk. He recalls standing at the key and hearing the news of the Desjardins Canal accident going through to Barrie. That was Canada's first great railway disaster when the train from Toronto went through an opening drawbridge east of Hamilton in March, 1857, killing over 40 people, among them some very prominent citizens. In 1863 Mr. Duncan, 21, was operator at Bradford, Ontario.

"I was sent in 1864 to relieve Thomas Edison when the future great inventor was night operator at Stratford," said Mr. Duncan. "He had put a patent device on his wire on his desk. It was intended to wake him up, but it hadn't worked and consequently two trains came together. No one was hurt and very little harm done, but Edison was ordered to report at Toronto. I guess he didn't relish going on the carpet. Anyway, he jumped for Detroit and I went on with his experiments until he had invented the quadruplex and quadruplex telegraphy and the thousand and one other big things he has done. I received a letter from him several years ago. I wonder if Tom Edison ever recalls the time when he worked in the old G. N. W. office on Scott street (Toronto)."

Truthful Jimmy.

Jimmy was sitting on the doorstep playing with his marbles. After a while a man approached and asked: "Is your mother at home?"

"Yes," was the reply.

The man rang the bell, but no one came to the door. So he rang again, but still without getting an answer. After a third unsuccessful attempt he turned to Jimmy, despairingly, and said: "I thought you said your mother was in?"

"So she is," answered the boy, "but she doesn't live here."

The church was filled with friends of the deceased, who were present to pay their last tribute of respect. At the conclusion of the service the remains were borne to the R. Terrance was well liked by all his friends which numbered many and they exceedingly regret his passing so early in life.

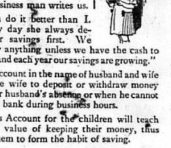
"My Wife Handles the Money"



The wife deposits —so a business man writes us. "She can do it better than I. Each pay day she always deposits our savings first. We never buy anything unless we have the cash to pay for it and each year our savings are growing."

In a joint account A Joint Account in the name of husband and wife allows the wife to deposit or withdraw money during her husband's absence or when he cannot get to the bank during business hours.

For the children, too A Savings Account for the children will teach them the value of keeping their money, thus helping them to form the habit of saving.

Degree Team at Belleville.

The members of the First Degree team of Argyll Lodge No. 212, I.O.O.F., returned home from Belleville early Tuesday morning, after having had a very delightful trip. The first degree for which this team has won quite a reputation, was exemplified in a most creditable manner and at the conclusion of the degree the team was given an ovation. Shortly after the regular session of the lodge was closed the members adjourned to the dining hall, where a splendid repast had been prepared by the Belleville brethren. Amongst those seated at the table were visitors from Picton, Trenton, Frankford and Stirling. After full justice had been done to the many good things provided the meeting was called to order by P.D.D.G.M. Duckworth, of Belleville, who introduced the various speakers of the evening. Each alluded to the magnificent work done by the visiting degree team, and expressed the thanks to the Napanee brethren for coming to Belleville. The meeting was closed shortly before the midnight hour to permit the visitors to leave for their train. It was a great night for Oddfellowship in Belleville, and one long to be remembered by those present.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY LECTURE

Professor Roy, of Queen's, is probably the best informed man in Canada on German affairs. He speaks the language fluently, and has spent several years in the country, and again visited it last summer to study post-war conditions. The Historical Society is fortunate in securing the Professor to open the series of lectures, for the present season, on Friday evening, December 19th. His subject will be "Conditions in Germany To-day". There has been so much written upon the subject that it will be a satisfaction to get reliable information from such an authoritative source.

WEDDING BELLS

McKeown—Boyd.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning, November 22nd, 1924, at St. Mary Magdalene Church, Napanee, when Ethel Kathleen, only daughter of Mrs. C. M. Boyd and the late Charles Nelson Body, of Selby, was married to James Arthur McKeown, Chicago, Ill., fourth son of Mr. and Mrs. J. McKeown, Newburgh, by Rev. Rural Dean J. H. Coleman, M.A. The bride, who was given away by her mother, looked very lovely in a suit of navy tricotine, with a tailored blouse, and black velvet hat. They were unattended, Mr. Harry Edgar and Miss M. Roberts signing the register. After the ceremony the wedding party motored to Kingston, where a dainty luncheon was served. Later the party returned to the home of the bride's mother, where a family dinner was served. After congratulations and best wishes, Mr. and Mrs. McKeown left for Chicago, where they will reside. The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, including money, silver and linen.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held their anniversary celebration this last week, which took the form of a congregational supper on the Friday last and the regular services on Sunday, at which Principal Bruce Taylor occupied the pulpit.

Congregational Banquet.

On Friday, at 6.30 p.m., about a hundred and seventy members and adherents of the congregation met in the basement of the church and were banquetted by the men of the congregation. Four long tables running the whole length of the room, prettily adorned with candles and other decorations, were not enough to allow all to be seated at the one time. A second table had to be set for the overflow. After the supper a concert was presented by the talent of the congregation. The Orchestra led in community singing, and then various numbers were enjoyed by all, one of the musical treats of the evening being two solos by Mr. Aubrey Pringle, who is home for the Christmas season.

Presentation and Address to Pastor.

At one point in the programme the minister of the congregation was asked to the front of the room, and the Secretary of the Ladies' Aid read an address of appreciation, at the conclusion of which the President, on behalf of the Society, presented him with a fine mahogany desk chair and an illuminated address. The address is a splendid example of hand lettering in black and gold and red, designed and executed by a former member of St. Andrew's, Mr. Orval Madden. The wording is as follows:

To Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.A., B.D., Pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Napanee.

Dear Mr. Wilson,—The congregation of St. Andrew's Church, Napanee, meet with you this evening to show their deep appreciation of your labour among them, and to express the fruitful results of your untiring efforts on their behalf.

For five and a-half nine years since you received the pastorate, and the members feel that these years of association have been a time of spiritual progress and moral uplift. You have welcomed the stranger, aided the sick and needy, rejoiced in time of joy and sympathized in sorrow. Your strong personality and example to others, your pulpit and an appealing example to the younger. They have learned to love you for a faithful friend, and honour you for your devotion to your congregation.

Your sermons and addresses are ever inspiring and educative, and the loyal and faithful adherents of St. Andrew's Church wish you to know that they feel especially grateful for these scholarly expositions.

Under your leadership St. Andrew's has, during your ministry, the debt has been wiped out, the different departments are well organized and busily engaged in their respective activities. The attendance at the Sunday School is the largest in the history of the Church. The Mission Band, Young People's Society, Ladies' Aid and Women's Missionary Society are cheerfully doing their share for the Church's welfare.

The people of the town and community have also learned to appreciate your sterling qualities, and to respect you for the stand you have taken on all moral issues.

As a token of regard the Ladies' Aid Society have much pleasure in presenting this address, and ask you to accept this chair, which they hope you may long be spared to enjoy.

Mary E. Madden,
President.
Florence M. Laughland,
Secretary.

The Pastor, in thanking the ladies for their thoughtfulness and generosity, spoke in the highest terms of the loyalty and devotion of all departments of the work, and expressed the hope that the church might for long continue to exercise an influence for good in the town and community.

Burning of the Mortgage.

The mortgage was then produced, and after the congregation had been assured that the money was all paid, and the trustees' and discharge duly recorded and registered, the paper was lighted amid the enthusiastic applause of the assemblage. Then after the National Anthem the meeting was dismissed.

Sunday Services.

Dr. Bruce Taylor, of Queen's, occupied the pulpit on both occasions on Sunday and preached to a crowded house both morning and evening. Dr. Taylor is unquestionably one of the most scholarly and attractive preachers in Canada to-day, and his sermons, with their fine synthesis of human nature, and their artistic and poetic appeal, made a lasting impression on the people.

At the Sunday School the scholars were privileged to hear an address by Mr. Paton, of Manchester, England, at one time master of Rugby, and later of the Manchester Grammar School. Mr. Paton, who is visiting Canada, and making a study of educational problems here, gave a most interesting and instructive address to the children.

BEAVER SANTA CLAUS FUND

More Money Needed Than at First Seemed Possible.

The appeal for money on behalf of the under privileged children in Napanee and district is not falling on deaf ears. Children are coming into the office bringing their savings, "to help those children that Santa Claus does not visit". Older ones with a sense of the need of others are contributing. And as the appeal gets more widely known there is hope that no child in the town will waken disappointed on Christmas morning.

Do you remember what Christmas used to mean to you before the struggle for a living had robbed it of much of its poetry and its mystery; the letters you used to write; the anxiety and the age long duration of the last week, and the trembling excitement of the night before? What if Santa Claus shouldn't come? But Santa never failed.

And now when you look back to those days and re-live them again in the lives of those to whom fairies and nymphs and gnomes are a real part of their world, and Santa a never failing source of supply for all road things, let not business necessity blind you to the generous and whole hearted support of the needy ones, nor your family and personal obligations cloud the vision of a Merry Christmas for every boy and girl in Napanee. Help to make their dreams come true. Warm mitts and stocking caps, candies and other Christmas articles, both useful and enjoyable, will be purchased by the committee and distributed fairly and equitably to all needy children. The workers do their work voluntarily and gladly. The limit of their capacity to serve is the generosity of the public.

No donation is too small to bring or send to the Beaver Office. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week are the days for making drop in and pay the amount personally.

The following committee have kindly consented to take charge of the purchasing and distribution of gifts: W. Hambly, Mr. Harry Babcock, Miss H. Gardiner and Capt. Thomas.

Mr. W. A. Granger has consented to act as Auditor of the accounts. All moneys sent in will be acknowledged through the columns of The Beaver, and an audited statement presented after the fund has been disbursed.

NEWBURGH

The sixty-sixth anniversary of the Methodist Church takes place on Sunday next. Rev. Mr. Wilson will preach morning and evening, at 10.30 and 7 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Farnsworth, a former Pastor, will be the preacher. Sixty-six years is a long time when we look back, but when measured by a glance of the mind it seems but a short time when we look back, and seen measured by lives, and events what a great deal these years encompass. Changes are continually taking place which effect the life of a congregation and the generations leave their impress either for good or ill. Perhaps the most noteworthy event that has taken place in the life of the congregation we are considering, is its co-operation with the Presbyterian congregation. This movement was regarded as a forward step; whether it is so or not depends on the spirit with which it is carried out and accepted by the parties thereto. So far as we know the spirit of the anniversary services on Sunday, making them of spiritual help and profit to all.

Our old High School, for the first time in its history, will have a female Principal after the New Year dawns. This may seem an inovation, but when we consider the forward movement that girls are making for positions of trust and responsibility, it is but the natural thing.

Mr. Perry Moore, of Detroit, is spending some time with his parents at Wesley.

A party, consisting of Mrs. McGill, of Centreville, and Mrs. Milligan, Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Frank Gerow, of Newburgh, motored to Belleville on Saturday last, and visited with Mrs. Alfred Lapum. Percy Gerow was chauffeur for the party.

Mr. Stanbury, of Toronto University, is acting as supply teacher in the High School for the remainder of this term.

Words of sympathy are heard on all sides for Mrs. T. B. Wilson, who has suffered a severe bereavement in the death of her youngest daughter, Mrs. Hewitt, of Brockville. Mrs. Hewitt, who before her marriage was Miss Beth Wilson, was a favorite girl in Newburgh, and received her education in the Public and High Schools. Mrs. Fred Wales, of Switzerville, is a sister. Miss Jessie Wilson, another sister, is a trained nurse in the West. She leaves also three brothers, Arch and Ben Wilson, of Prince Albert, Sask., and Percy, of Winnipeg. The funeral was held on Tuesday of this week from her home in Brockville.

Next week is concert week. The Literary is having a concert on Monday, the 15th; the United Church in S. concert on the 17th, and the High School a musical concert on the 18th.

Rev. C. V. Fairbairn is conducting Evangelistic meetings in the Free Methodist Hall each night this week. The meetings are well attended.

Miss Marion Carlson, who is with Mrs. Bray while in attendance at these meetings.

Mr. Johnson introduced a by-law to expropriate certain lands to widen Provincial County Road No. 54, in the Township of Adolphustown.

By-law was read a first time, Council went into Committee of the Whole on the second reading, and the by-law was finally passed.

Mr. Lapum, G. P. Ruttan, Police Magistrate, $136.65, was referred to the Police Committee.

A report from F. W. Barrett, High County Constable, and accounts for expenses, $42.54, was read. Expenses of office, $60.74. Referred to Police Committee.

An account, Workmen's Compensation Board, re York, $13.60.

The Grand Jury paid a visit to the County Council in their tour of inspection of the County buildings.

Mr. McCaffrey presented the first report of the Police Committee, as follows:

That we have examined the report of the High County Constable and find it perfectly satisfactory. We recommend that his account of $42.54, be paid. Also that a grant be made to the High County Constable of $200.00 for his efficient services.

Your committee also beg to report that the Village of Bath was allowed an overdraft of $500.00 on County Roads account, to balance their expenditure on roads, to be charged to 1925 appropriation.

The Township of Denbigh, Abinger & Ashby applied for a refund of $35, for construction of a cripple from Denbigh to Kingston General Hospital. On motion the refund was made.

The committee appointed re Indian Lake bridges reported that the engineer of Frontenac County had rebuilt one bridge and presented pay list without Mr. Rogers' signature, which the committee refused to sanction. Later the Frontenac engineer completed a portion of the centre bridge and Mr. Rogers' completed the structure. The report was, on motion, adopted.

Correspondence and circular from the Elliott Fisher Co., re recording machines for Registry Office, was read, and laid on the table until the January session.

PRESS OF PROVINCE URGES LIGHTS ON ALL VEHICLES LAW.

Lightless Vehicles Have Taken An Appalling Toll of Life, Limb and Property.—Are Greatest Menace on Highways at Night.

At long last, it would seem the lightless vehicle is to be prohibited from using the public highways of this province at night and so, aside from the reckless or otherwise unfit, the greatest menace on the highways between dusk and dawn is to be eliminated. Hon. George S. Henry, who fathered the last bill to this end, has now the mandate of Ontario in support of this measure. For a decade and a half he has had the active support of the Ontario Motor League in this humanitarian endeavor for during that time the Motor League has campaigned for the abolition of this all too prolific cause or highway fatalities and casualties.

Editorials on this subject have appeared in many of the newspapers of the province, and it is significant that without exception they strongly support the proposal that all vehicles be required by law to carry lights at night.

The following excerpts from newspapers of the province are indicative of public opinion on this vital matter. In a lengthy editorial the Brantford Expositor declared in part:

"The numerous motor accidents that have occurred on the highways of the province at night on account of the absence of lights on vehicles, have called attention once more to the necessity of a law to compel all vehicles using the public highways during the hours of darkness to carry lights. The matter is of such vital interest to the public safety that it is almost inconceivable that the demand for such legislation has been so long disregarded. Experience has shown that it is not sufficient for the speedy motor cars to carry lights. It is very easy in the flickering shadows for the fast cars to run down unlighted horse-drawn vehicles. The marvel is that drivers of horse-drawn vehicles are willing to venture on the roads without lights, thus disregarding their own safety.

"This is a matter that concerns the safety of all those who use the roads at night.

"The demand for this law in Ontario ought to be urgent and insistent until it is placed upon the statutes. The Ontario Motor League deserves all the help and commendation that can be given, in its effort to impress the need of this law upon the Legislature of the province.

The Peterboro' Examiner concludes an editorial on the subject with:

"The Government should not let the next session go by without bringing down the much-to-be desired legislation. The bill is long overdue."

The Owen Sound Sun-Times urges editorially:

"Everything that can possibly be done to make the roads safer for night travel should be done. Even if most are willing to take chances of being spilled into the ditch by a passing car, that law come suddenly upon them in the dark or on a foggy night, they should not be permitted to add to the risks of night travel to save the small expense of providing lights for their horse-drawn vehicles.

"The Wardens of Counties in Ontario have been in conference with the Provincial Advisory Committee of the Provincial Legislature and it has been agreed to advocate legislation providing that all vehicles using the highways at night shall carry lights. This should not require to be advocated. It is so evidently fair, and indeed necessary, that the Legislature should take it un even if the Government does not introduce a bill. It has been far too long delayed, already.

"There is no argument that can be advanced for requiring autos to carry lights that does not equally apply to all vehicles."

In dealing with the proposal of the Wardens that the lights-on-all-vehicles law be initiated on the Provincial Highways, Hamilton Spectator observes:

"What is good for the Provincial roads is also good for the County and Township roads. The menace is just as great on the one kind of thoroughfare as the other.

On this score the Peterboro' Examiner states:

"While the necessity for such illumination is no doubt greater on the more frequented highways, it is desirable, when introducing this legislation, to make it of universal application. There should be no discrimination of the kind in contemplation. The vehicle which makes use of the public highways ought to be equipped with proper lights, and the Legislature should promptly pass laws to that effect. Neglect to do so in the past has been responsible for many distressing accidents. There is no excuse for further delay."

The Hamilton Herald editorially remarks:

"Everyone who has travelled on a provincial highway at night knows that safety calls for the carrying of lights on horse-drawn vehicles as well as motor vehicles. On a dark night it is often extremely difficult for the driver of a motor car to discern a vehicle ahead, going in the same direction if it carries no light; and the slower-going vehicle is in danger of being run down.

"Strangely enough, the reason why there is no law making it compulsory to carry lights on horse-drawn vehicles is that public opinion in the rural districts is strongly set against any such regulation. One would suppose that for the sake of their own safety the farmers would favor it. But to carry lights would cost a little extra trouble; hence the objection.

"Objection could probably be removed by the adoption of a simple expedient. Let there be an amendment to the statute law, providing that in the case of a collision between a motor vehicle and a horse-drawn vehicle after dark an action for damages will not lie if the horse-drawn vehicle carried no light at the time of the accident.

"That would convince the objectors of the expediency of protecting themselves."

FIRE DESTROYED ARDEN MILLS AND POWER PLANT

Sawing, Planing and Grinding Mills, With Electric Power House Gutted

The Village of Arden was visited by disastrous fire late Thursday night. The milling plant and electric power house owned by Mr. J. E. Baker, were completely destroyed, while two houses on the opposite side of the street were badly scorched, the total loss being approximated at $10,000.

The fire was first discovered at about 11 p.m., and despite the efforts of residents in the vicinity the buildings were very soon a mass of flames. The buildings destroyed were three in number, one containing the planing and saw mill, one containing a grinding mill, and the third housing an electric power house from which the Village of Arden was supplied with light and power for domestic use, the power being generated, and the mills operated, by means of water wheels running in the river on the bank of which the buildings were situated. These three buildings were all of frame construction, and closely adjoining each other, the flames spreading with the greatest rapidity.

Two houses immediately across the road from the mills and power house, occupied respectively by Mr. and Mrs. C. Barker and Mr. and Mrs. Scott, were at one time in grave danger of destruction owing to the spread of the fire, but thanks to the efforts put forward by the villagers, and the fact that plenty of water was obtainable from the river in the immediate vicinity, these houses escaped with nothing more than a severe scorching.

The loss on the buildings which house the power house and mills is covered by insurance, while there was also some insurance on the machinery which they contained. Mr. Barker stated that he will rebuild at once, installing the new machinery to operate his sawing, planing and grinding mills together with the power house, but in the meantime the Village of Arden must revert to the use of lamps and candles for domestic use, while the streets will remain in darkness until power can again be supplied.

"I'll Be Home Soon, Mother," Writes Sammy

Sammy is a keen little lad. He looks much younger than he is—only sixteen—and he has much more wisdom than is usual at his age. For two years he worked in a foundry doing a man's work. His father worked beside him and helped him master the art of coaxing molten metal. One day Sammy complained of a pain in his side but his people didn't worry much. "It'll be all right in the morning," mother said, "go and take a rest." But it wasn't all right in the morning, nor the next day after, nor the day after. It was then time for a doctor to examine Sammy. The doctor looked him over several times, then took counsel with specialist. Both medical men agreed that Sammy was consumptive, and both held out some hope if he "took the cure" at once.

Sammy is quite a favorite up in the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. He keeps the other patients in good humour with his pleasant smile and his quaint stories of the ranch life he spent his boyhood days. Tell them he's folks I'll be home soon" he wrote in his last letter; and he probably will be, for he is making splendid progress.

The Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, the Haven of the poor afflicted with tuberculosis, is in a large measure reliant upon public generosity for its financial support. Its wants

VICTORIAN ORDER NURSES

Miss Mary E. Stevenson, Supervisor of Ontario of the Victorian Order of Nurses, Central Office Staff, Ottawa, visited Napanee on Wednesday and Thursday of last week to note the progress of the Victorian Order Branch in Napanee. Since the last visit new development in weekly well babies' conference, at which Miss Stevenson attended, and many evidences of the influence and value of the work were noticed. At the present time there is not much sickness in Napanee, but a study of reports show that the nursing service has grown, and that all classes have availed themselves of the nurse's services. The service is meant for all, independent of race, or creed. All pay what they can toward the cost, and those who cannot do this, receive exactly the same consideration and skillful care.

Victorian Order of Nurses are graduates of good hospitals, who take in addition a special post graduate course in public health nursing and as well as being skilled nurses, they are health teachers and teach people how to prevent disease and maintain good health, as well as nursing them back to health should they be ill.

The work is practical and educational and one of the most beneficial in the public health service in any community. The amount of work accomplished in Canada may in same way be realized by the following figures:—Between eleven and twelve thousand mothers last year received their nursing care at the time of confinement, and many thousands of these having received good pre-natal care to prepare them for this time. Over 400,000 nursing visits were paid and many thousands of homes were entered to give this care.

The value of this for Canada is inestimable, as was pointed out before, in addition to the nurse's care, there is the health education for the prevention of disease and promotion of health. The work in the schools has also grown and numerous health centres have been established and special clinics opened in different parts of the Dominion. Truly this organization lives up to its title of being the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada.

Much credit is due the energetic President, Mrs. A. E. Perry, and her staff of workers. During the afternoon there was a wonderful and ample array of beautiful and attractive wares offered for sale. The attendance was good, and the ladies were well repaid for their labors, for there were a host of willing buyers all afternoon. A splendid supper and play in the evening attracted a large audience. The first part of the programme was entirely musical. The conclusion of the evening's entertainment was a charming play, entitled "Listen, Ladies", after which lunch was served to all. The amount realized was about $275.00.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

"Did he stand for office?"
"No; I believe he had to lie to get in."

Wifey—How well I remember the cricket match at which you proposed. You were bold that day, weren't you?
Hubby (dreamily)—No, caught.

Lightning-bugs are not so different from certain men. A lightning-bug can see where he has been, but not where he is going.

Paring a corn is both risky and ineffective. It is much better to use Holloway's Corn Remover and eradicate them entirely.

Complete in itself, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator does not require the assistance of any other medicine to make it effective. It does not fail to do its work.

"Tommy, don't eat that apple; it has a worm in it."
"Aw shucks, ma, the worm tastes just the same as the apple."

It Testifies for Itself.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil needs no testimonial of its powers other than itself. Whoever tries it for coughs or colds, for cuts or contusions, for sprains or burns, for pains in the limbs or body, well know that the medicine proves itself and needs no guarantee. This shows why this Oil is in general use.

Teacher—"Children, can any of you tell me what is the most dangerous part of an automobile?"
Tommy—"Yes, miss, I can! It's the driver."

Mothers Value This Oil. — Mothers who know how suddenly croup may seize their children and how necessary prompt action is in applying relief, always keep at hand a supply of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, because experience has taught them that this is an excellent preparation for the treatment of this ailment. And they are wise, for its various uses render it a valuable medicine.

"If I were rich you would accept me fast enough."
"Thank you, Freddie; that's the most flattering thing you've said to me yet—and so unusual."
"What do you mean?"
"You and a lot of others have paid compliments to my beauty, but that is the first time one of you has given me credit for common sense."

Miller's Worm Powders are a pleasant medicine for worm-infested children, and they will take it without objection. When directions are followed it will not injure the most delicate child, as there is nothing of an injurious nature in its composition. They will speedily rid a child of worms and restore the health of the little sufferers whose vitality has become impaired by the attacks of these internal pests.

"Are you the recipe editor. Well, your paper said that if I left a stain of tablecloth out on the line all night the stains would have disappeared by morning."
"Well, and haven't the stains gone?"
"Oh, yes; they've gone all right," "Then, what's your complaint, madam?"
"They've gone all right—and taken my tablecloth with them."

Asthma Can Be Cured.—Its suffering is as needless as it is terrible to endure. After its many years of relief of the most stubborn cases, no sufferer can doubt the perfect effectiveness of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Comfort of body and peace of mind return with its use and nights of sound sleep come back for good. Ask your druggist; he can supply you.

A woman was discussing a week-end party she had given. "You know," she said, "Mrs. H came, but she was a great nuisance. She has such a passion for souvenirs. She's mad on collecting."
"My dear," said her friend, "no need to tell me that; she stayed with me once, to my cost."
"I suppose you missed your china, or something, when she left?"
"No, I missed my husband."

Old Hen Roddy, from Hopskin Hollow, is fond of boasting of his amazing thriftiness, by virtue of which he has accumulated a fairly substantial bank account.
"You're very careful about your expenditures, aren't you, Uncle Hen?" the village schoolmaster asked one day.
"Yes, professor, I'm right smart that way. Fact, I don't recollect that I ever spent but one quarter fer jist plain foolishness. That was when I let a storekeeper talk me into buyin' a pair o' socks."

Not a Bachelor.
Everyone has heard of the parishioner who imagined that B.A. signified bachelor and M.A. married, but the following gives a new gloss to the old story. A representative of the local directory called to find out if Mr. Rightson, B.A.—was in. He was not at home. Then would the lady state if the name was correctly given—Rev. Harry Rightson? "Yes, that is correct." "And he is a Bachelor of Arts, is he not?" "Oh, no," she briskly replied, "Mr. Rightson is a widower!"—Yorkshire Post.

Keep Friends with Health

HEALTH is too valuable an asset to be considered lightly. It is very essential, if you are to take a leading part in business, to get the greatest pleasure out of life. Abundant health depends upon steady nerves—nerves untroubled by poisons often unknowingly taken daily into the system.

These poisons are Caffeine and Tannin—in tea and coffee. They are detrimental to the whole nervous system—frequently cause restless sleep, excitability, indigestion and other troubles which affect health.

Keep friends with health through Instant Postum, the hot, full-bodied drink which is friendly to all. Delightful and wholesome at any time, it is made instantly in the cup with boiling water. Economical—costs half-a-cent a cup. Ask for it at your restaurant, your club and on the train. For those who prefer it, there is Postum Cereal, made by boiling for twenty minutes. Take advantage of Carrie Blanchard's offer. Send the coupon.

OBITUARY

Charles W. Wartman.

On the morning of December 3rd, 1924, there passed away, suddenly, at his home in Phoenix, Arizona, Charles W. Wartman, youngest son of the late Charles H. Wartman, formerly of Colebrook. Ont. Mr. Wartman received his High School education in Napanee, and will still be remembered by many thereabouts, as his genial sunny disposition endeared him to all his friends.

Going as a young man to Arizona, he was one of the builders of that new country and one of the foremost citizens of Phoenix, but he never forgot the land of his birth, and was loyal to the land of his adoption. He always proud of the fact that he was Canadian born.

He was an enthusiastic member of the Masonic Order, being a Noble of the Mystic Shrine, and it may be said that in his life and dealings, he ever carried out the high ideals for which the Order stands.

A kind and thoughtful husband and father, he will be sorely missed by his sorrowing widow and two sons, Frank S., of Tucson, Arizona, and Charles H., at home. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Mortimer Lochhead, at present residing in Lindsay, Ont.

For his "goodly pearl" sufficed.
His to tell the "sweet story of old"—
In wilds ne'er knowing the Christ.

OBITUARY

Mr. John Russell.

Mr. John Russell, a well known and highly respected farmer of Richmond Township, passed away on Thursday night, at his home near Selby. The deceased had been in ill health for the past six months and during the past few weeks a great sufferer. He was born in the Township of Richmond eighty years ago, and throughout all those long years had followed the occupation of farming. For fifteen years he presided over the destinies of Empey Hill Sunday School as Superintendent. He was also a member of the Quarterly Official Board and was largely instrumental in the building of the new church some four or twelve years ago. He was well-known throughout the township, where he had a large number of relatives. He leaves to mourn his loss a devoted wife and six children, as well as several grandchildren. Had he lived until the fourteenth of December he and Mrs. Russell would have celebrated the diamond jubilee of their marriage. The funeral took place on Sunday morning from his late residence and services were held at Selby Methodist Church, and the remains taken to Riverside cemetery.

ANGLICAN WOMEN'S BAZAAR AND CONCERT

On Thursday of last week occurred the great annual event of the Church Women's Guild of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, their bazaar and concert.

The bazaar took place in the Town Hall during the afternoon, and there was a wonderful and ample array of beautiful, artistic, useful, and otherwise attractive wares offered for sale.

The attendance was good and the ladies were well repaid for their labor, for there was a host of willing buyers all afternoon. During the afternoon tea and other refreshments were served, and the homemade candy stand did a rushing business.

A splendid concert and play in the evening attracted to the hall a capacity house. The first part of the programme was entirely musical and the audience had a rare treat. Mrs. J. E. Madden was musical director and pianist, so success was a foregone conclusion.

The opening number was given by the male quartette, composed of Messrs. J. Daly, W. J. Shannon, Waite and LaSalle. They received rousing cheers after this and subsequent pieces.

Then there was a great galaxy of talent, expressing and feeling in the numbers given by the Ladies' Sextette, which included Miss J. Light, Miss Florence Hall, Mrs. W. S. Herrington, Miss Hilda McGreer, Miss Nellie Herring, Mrs. Burritt and Mrs. Sneath. Enthusiastic applause followed each number.

A charming vocal duet was rendered by Mrs. Burritt and Mr. Waite, who kindly responded to an encore, which was highly appreciated.

There was a piano duet, beautifully interpreted, by Mrs. J. E. Madden and Mr. Waite. Applause at the conclusion of this piece was followed by a sigh of regret that this music could not go on, and on, and on.

The conclusion of the evening's entertainment was a charming and dainty play, well staged and inimitably carried out by each actor. It was under the direction of Mrs. Powell, who, in addition to many other talents, has a gift for organization and undoubted histrionic ability. The play was entitled "Society Notes." The cast of characters were Mrs. Sedgwick, Mrs. Powell; Mr. Sedgwick, Claude Knight; Miss Mary Sedgwick, Miss Adeline Stevens; Society Reporter, Miss Helen Herrington; Dr. Faller, Joe Marshall; Mr. Stanton, Albert Hill.

The winners in the two raffles were drawn for. Mrs. W. K. Huston won the table spread, and Mrs. Shore Leynes won the bridge table cover.

Mrs. Leeman says:
"Carnol saved my life—many thanks to Carnol"

But read her letter. It tells her story better than we can.—"I feel it my duty to write you about your wonderful medicine Carnol. In January I had an operation for appendicitis. The pain I suffered before the operation and the loss of blood afterwards left me so weakened and run down that I wasn't able to go about on my feet. I just had to lie around all the time. The doctor said I was to take iron for my blood for it was so thin. I had anemia and folks said I had only a short time to live. Carnol saved my life—many thanks to Carnol. I have gained about ten pounds in three months. After every meal I used to have indigestion and heartburn so bad that the pain was intense. A dose of Carnol would give me immediate relief. Now I am absolutely cured of both. I had severe headaches and pains across my back and they have also disappeared.

"This is how I started using Carnol. I asked a friend about Carnol. She said it was awfully good. Her doctor had recommended it to her to take after she had been in bed for months and she was completely cured. I called up our druggist and asked him about Carnol. He recommended it but said he was just out of it and wanted me to take a bottle of beef, iron and wine, but I said, 'No, I want Carnol.' So he said he would send and get me some. Just as soon as it came I commenced to take it and it has renewed my blood and given me a wonderful appetite. I never have to take a laxative with this medicine. I cannot recommend your medicine highly enough. It is just exactly what the system needs."—Mrs. Wilson H. Leeman, Ivanhoe, Ont. 9-24

"Too Old"

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

"You see the big entrance to the factory. Beyond, a great broad stairway leading to the offices. After that the draughting rooms. Then building after building, pattern lofts, machine rooms, molding floors. Well, thirty years, boy and man, I've gone up those stairs, kept going till I mounted higher and higher, and became superintendent, then—follow me a bit, and I'll show you the other side of the picture."

Thus Gabriel Purcell, sturdy old disciplinarian of fifty. He did not look it, he did not feel it. His voice was clear as a clarion note, his eye was full of fire and power. Just a wee stoop of the shoulders threw the stalwart figure out of direct plumb line, and the silvering hair was touched with the first frost of time and winter.

He carried a magnificent gold-headed cane under his arm, disdaining its use as a support and only taking it with him for company because it was the cherished gift of some cheap shovel men in the factory, who loved him and his just, helpful way as if he had been an own father to them. Gabriel Purcell led his companion, an old-time friend, seeking a brief visit to the town, around the great stone wall inclosing the plant, and then swung his cane to where a long steep chute ran from the upper floor of the tin specialty shops to the barren rear yard. Down it was now pouring the scraps, refuse, waste of the factory.

"The dump head—see it, Farleigh?" questioned the old man bitterly. "That's me—in at the front, rushed through, worked out and thrown on the dump head!"

At that same hour Thomas Wynne, head of the great Wynne company, sat facing his attorney in his private office.

"The fact is, Wynne, isn't it that Purcell is Ordered," submitted the latter.

"Don't use the word jauntily, Randall," returned the founder, "but that about covers it. You don't know how it jars on me to face the merest imputation of injustice regarding Purcell. He has been my right hand since I started in here with a little twenty by forty shed of a shop, and has helped build the business up to its present up-to-date proportions. You know how fifteen years ago my wife inherited a large estate and supplied one hundred and fifty thousand dollars capital to expand the enterprise. Well, recently a younger brother of hers, who has made a name as mechanical theorist and ultra-system man, got the idea in his head that he could come in here and double up profits in a year."

"But what interest has he in the business?"

"None, except through the courtesy of my wife and some relatives who are also stockholders. Of course I can't gainsay her. Her estate owns considerable of the company stock. She helped build me up. I can't afford to quibble with her. I had to supercede Purcell. My brother-in-law is now in charge of the mechanical departments. Younger men, stricter rules, more business, higher profits, his aim. We shall see how it works out."

Mr. Wynne sighed.

"We shall, indeed," muttered the lawyer cynically.

"Yes, that isn't all, Randall," resumed the manufacturer. "I am approaching a delicate subject. You know that Purcell has a son who is the pride of his soul and the apple of his eye, Arnold Purcell."

"Yes," nodded the lawyer, and it was palpably apparent that the mention aroused pleasant sentiments. "A fine young man, an exceptional one, they say. Capable, ambitious, high_grade. I hear that he has won quite some eminence as an advanced sanitary engineer."

"Very well, by some strange freak of destiny he and my daughter, Elsinore, met at a social function in the city. Plainly, they are in love with each other. I am no aristocrat, I sprung from nothing, as did Gabriel Purcell. My wife, however, as you know, draws the line at social distinctions, or rather those of wealth. She has already told young Purcell that Elsinore must never marry a man who has not as large a fortune as her own."

"And Arnold Purcell?"

"Asks time to make good the condition."

"Grant for him! He'll make it," declared the lawyer with confidence.

"The young man has not advised his father or others of his love affairs," said Wynne. "He and Elsinore seem to have settled down to sensible, dignified patience and mutual fidelity. He does not intrude himself upon her company. He is pursuing the even tenor of his way, and she is content. It is the father I worry about. I want you to go and see him, and here is the memoranda of what I want to do for him."

Mr. Randall departed with his instructions. He found Purcell at his home. The latter had been a widower for many years and lived in a comfortable, but small house at the edge of the town. It overlooked a deep cut nearly a quarter of a mile in extent, to which a spur of the railroad ran. For ten years a soft limestone quarry had been mined here to supply slag mixture for the big blast furnaces. The entire property belonged to Purcell, but was of little apparent value. He greeted Mr. Randall civilly.

"I've come from your best friend," spoke the lawyer. "He wants you to accept a pension, a free and clear town residence, an automobile and—"

Gabriel Purcell burst out into a hearty laugh. He held in his hand a letter he had just received from his son. He was strangely changed from the wandering misanthrope of the early morning.

"Stop right there, Mr. Randall," he said heartily. "I understand Mr. Wynne and he understands me. The new experiment is forced on him, and no hard feelings. It won't go through. Remember what I say, that before a year is out I'll be back and the old system resumed. And say," and the old man's eyes glowed, "I'll be able to help him out if he finds he's cramped for capital."

The lawyer eyed Purcell as though he was petting rid of his senses.

"Oh, I'm not talking wild," chuckled the old man. He waved the letter in his hand towards the old quarry pit. "I own that, you know."

"That hole in the ground, you mean?"

"Exactly, and it's going to be a gold mine."

"I can't make out Purcell," reported the lawyer to Mr. Wynne. "He talks millions. He's got some dream of wealth and he seems happy as a lark. He says he'll be back in a year."

"I honestly hope it," groaned Mr. Wynne. "Already some of the modern efficiency tactics of the new superintendent have set the older working gangs by the ears, and they are quitting by the score."

Mr. Wynne put himself out of the way to meet Purcell whenever he could. He was surprised, pleased and gratified to note the glad, sincere welcome of the discarded faithful old fellow worker. Purcell was more than friendly, he was cheerful, loquacious, and referred constantly to his "vacation," and blinked jocularly at the founder and referred to "the good old times coming back all new."

Then came a period of cure and trouble for the plant. A good many of the old expert workmen sought new fields of labor. The new superintendent took a large contract at a loss. In rushing a special order they forfeited the trade of one of their oldest and most substantial clients.

Meanwhile, something that puzzled the townspeople was going on at the old quarry. Near the edge of the big pit new tracks were laid, a large weighing scale put in, derricks erected, and scoops, elevating and lowering machinery. Purcell bustled about, the busiest, cheeriest being ever was, and his son Arnold made frequent inspection visits to the old home at the quarry pit.

One day, like a thunderclap, came the news that the big plant was shut down pending a reorganization. The new superintendent had resigned. Some outside stockholders had become alarmed at the reports of fast shrinking profits, and had thrown their holdings on the market at a ruinous decline.

That very morning a train of 50 gondola dump cars gracefully wound round from the main railroad track and half encircled the quarry pit. Each car was weighed, the contents dumped, and the train returned to the city. Ashes, building debris, all the daily accumulated rubbish and waste of a great city was represented in this fleet dumping into that useless, valueless, almost fathomless quarry pit.

Thomas Wynne looked up from his desk in the office of the deserted plant as Gabriel Purcell entered. The founder's face was worn and drawn.

"Is it as bad as they say?" questioned Purcell.

"Worse. Outside of my wife's capital I have no resources. I must have two hundred thousand dollars to get back where we were before this ghastly experiment was made, or go into bankruptcy."

"Good!" cried Purcell animatedly. "I'll provide the deficit amount for a little amount of stock."

"You!" cried Wynne incredulously.

"Myself and my son, yes. You see, old friend, the quarry pit. Arnold is the head expert in recovery and disposal work for the city. We are only 12 miles away, and the nearest available dumping pit. They have been carrying the refuse out into the lake, but the barge rates have become prohibitive. In fact, we have a ten years' contract for disposing of the rubbish of that city at a cubic yard. Fifty cars a day and all profit, but the weighing. Figure it up, and don't worry that we are able to anticipate a million in payment any time we want it."

"And you propose—"

"To go back to my old job and run the plant on the old safe, sensible basis. Old friend," suggested Purcell, with twinkling eyes, "did it happen to occur to you that in tinkering the plant you forgot that you were ten years older than myself?"

And then when affairs had been readjusted and Arnold Purcell qualified fully as a meet suitor for pretty, patient Elsinore, and the old cheerful atom of industry cheered the contented workmen at the plant, Thomas Wynne and Gabriel Purcell, again in the right groove, felt as though they had stepped back into the magic enthusiasm of their earlier years.

Modes of Progress.

"You need exercise. You ought to walk to work."

"It can't be done from our suburb. You may snow-plow your way to work. You may slide or you may come pretty near swimming to work. But you never actually walk."

Dolly's Bazaar.
On Saturday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Chas. Loucks, all the dollies in Napanee were given an opportunity to replenish their wardrobes, when a number of little girls presented for sale an abundance of pretty dolls' clothes at very reasonable prices. The living room was prettily decorated with Xmas streamers, and in the afternoon tea was served at a daintily appointed tea table. The little salesladies were exceedingly busy all afternoon and evening, and a very substantial fund, over $46.00, was raised for the Santa Claus Fund. How pleased Santa Claus will be to know that the little girls to whom he is always so good were thinking of other children, and spending all the busy hours in making candies and pretty things for their bazaar. Those who were in charge and contributed to the success of the sale were Marjorie Gibbard, Betty Gibbard, Mary Gerow, Frances Fox, Eileen Fox, Noreen Johnsten, Lois Stalker, Mildred Loucks.

For the delightful post-nuptial event the pretty appointed home had artistic floral decoration. Baby 'mums were used in the drawing room, and in the tea room a beautiful centre piece of yellow, full blown, chrysanthemums, adorned the exquisitely arranged table. During the reception hours the home was thronged with guests, the hostess receiving in a graceful gown of black panne with yellow ostrich ornament. Mrs. T. F. Milne received with her. At the tea table the honors were done by Mrs. J. Ritchie who filled the cups, and Mrs. D. L. Cranston, cutting the ices. Mrs. I. D. Evans of Fort William was dining room hostess and the assistants were Mrs. A. E. Southom, Fort William, Miss Ethel Brown, Fort William, Mrs. G. Foote and Mrs. R. "Sea Hawk" is Spectacular And Thrilling.
Frank Lloyd's First National picture, "The Sea Hawk", adapted from Rafael Sabatini's stirring novel of Barbary corsairs, will be seen at the Wonderland Theatre, on Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 15th and 16th. "The Sea Hawk" is the crowning achievement of a season of brilliant screen dramas, a play that registers its magnitude in every scene and with such force that it is not likely that local screen followers will cease to talk about it very soon. 50a

CONWAY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE
The December meeting of Conway Women's Institute took place on Tuesday, December 9th, at the home of Mrs. Frank Loyst, with eighteen ladies and visitors in attendance.
The usual form of opening routine was observed, and the meeting proceeded. A discussion arose as to the lessons in First Aid and Home Nursing. Mrs. W. Haight gave members some idea of the help given by the Institute for this purpose. Mrs. A. P. Young was appointed to purchase or have printed song sheets for community singing, these sheets to be the property of Conway Institute.
Then came a demonstration by Mrs. Haight of how to take a patient's temperature and pulse. We are glad to say those on whom she demonstrated registered an average normal temperature. The short afternoon was now drawing to an end, so the meeting closed with the National Anthem, and the hostess served a tasty lunch.
The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. T. Gurren, on January 13th.

INJURED MAN HAS BEEN IDENTIFIED
The mystery concerning the identity of the man who was found on the railway tracks about a mile and a half west of Napanee on Monday morning was cleared up at the Kingston General Hospital, when he was identified as Andrew Forsythe, of Portsmouth, by his sister, Mrs. McIvor, of Portsmouth, when she made a visit to the Hospital.
Tuesday morning it was reported that he had spent a very restless night and that his condition had shown no change from the time that he was brought in from Napanee. At times he regained consciousness only for a few moments, but then lapsed back into a state of coma again.
It was learned that Mr. Forsythe, who is 64 years of age, is a ship carpenter, and he had intended going to Ogdensburg to visit a sister, who is living there, leaving home on Monday day. It is believed that he encountered difficulty in entering the States, and in some way had got up past Napanee on the return trip. Whether he slept through Kingston or not has not been determined, as the unfortunate man had not been able to tell his story. No foul play, however, is suspected, and nothing definite can be learned until Mr. Forsythe recovers consciousness.
Provincial Officer Thompson, of Napanee, and Provincial Officer MacLachlan, of Kingston, are making an investigation of the case, but can do very little yet. An effort is being made to get the evidence of the conductor of the train on which Mr. Forsythe was riding, to see if he can throw any light on the matter.
Mr. Forsythe passed away in Kingston Hospital on Thursday morning at 6 o'clock.

Beaver Santa Claus Fund

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL

Do you remember the reception the canvassers met with who approached Old Scrooge for a contribution to a Santa Claus fund? A few of us said we were endeavouring to raise a fund to buy the poor some meat and drink and means of warmth. We chose this time, because it is a time, of all others, when want is keenly felt, and abundance rejoices. What shall I put you down for?

"Nothing!" Scrooge replied.

"You wish to be anonymous?"

"I wish to be left alone", said Scrooge. "Since you ask me what I wish, gentlemen, that is my answer. I don't make merry myself at Christmas, and I can't afford to make idle people merry. I help to support charitable institutions; they cost enough, and those who are badly off must go there."

But the matter did not end there. Old Scrooge was taken by the spirit to see the homes of the needy, to hear the wails and the poverty that was worse than he had thought to be even his own. His generosity was opened, his purse strings were loosened. He provided for needy families at Christmas dinner, and warm overcoats called again, gave generously without being pressed.

He watched the people hurrying to and fro, and patted children on the head, and questioned beggars, and looked down into the kitchens of the poor, and up to the windows, and found that everything could yield him pleasure. He had never dreamed that to walk, that anything, could give him so much happiness."

The transformation of Scrooge was not wrought by his generosity at the Christmas season. We may think it was Carpets in Napanee) as he who feeds him and Christmas Day is the reputation of our Christmas. There are many who will take a Christmas unless we who are better off provide it.

One remarkable thing. The money all didn't go equally well spent. Some was misspent through The Beaver, and an untold sentiment finally pole.

This is the fact appeal that will be made to every thirsty, dull, aching heart by The Beaver Santa Claus Fund".

OBITUARY

Mrs. Bicknell Grange.

Many a year has passed to its grave since Electa Parrott first saw the quiet old time Ernestown in 1836, she early became the wife of Richard Bicknell, and they established their home near Camden East. Later, as a widow, removing to Napanee, she became the wife of John T. Grange, at one time a member of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, who within the past year, predeceased her. She was a member of Grace Church, and at one time President of its Ladies' Aid Society. She dealt generously by Albert College. Only of late did her robust health and clear mind begin to fail, and after brief confinement to home she fell asleep. On Sunday, Dec. 14th, two days after her death, the funeral service was held at her home on Centre street. The pastor was assisted by Rev. E. N. Baker, D.D., the Principal of Albert College, who, as a former pastor and friend of many years, paid tender tribute to her memory. The body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Switzerville.

Her only surviving son, Fred, Bicknell, of Boise, Idaho, well and favorably known and respected in Napanee, has for many years visited her at least twice yearly, and spent the last ten days in kindly ministries at her bedside. Mrs. Minerva Asselstine, of Kingston, a sister, has well passed the century mark.

Mrs. Geo. T. Sexsmith.

Ann Comfort Sexsmith, widow of the late George T. Sexsmith, of Richmond, died on Wednesday, Dec. 10th, 1924, at the home of her son, Mr. A. E. Sexsmith, Herchimer Avenue, Belleville, after an illness extending over several months, in her sixty-ninth year.

The late Mrs. Sexsmith was the daughter of the late David O. Sexsmith, of Richmond, and lived in that vicinity until the death of her husband, thirteen years ago, when she went to live with her son, in Belleville.

She was a woman of cheerful disposition and good Christian character, having accepted Christ when only a young girl. She was a member of Ebenezer Methodist Church until her marriage, when she became a St. John's Church, Selby, remaining a member of that church until her death.

She leaves to mourn her loss, one son, Archie E. Sexsmith, of Belleville, who with his wife, tenderly cared for her, and one brother, Wm. Comfort, of Pittsburg, besides several nieces and nephews.

The funeral service, which was held at the home of her son, was conducted by Rev. Mr. Clarke, of Carlist Church, Belleville, and her remains were laid to rest in the Union burying ground in Richmond, beside those of her late husband.

The floral tributes from neighbours and friends were beautiful, testifying to the high esteem in which she was held.

John Card.

Three passed to rest on Sunday, December 14th, 1924, in the person of the aged resident, in his eighty-ninth year. Deceased was born at Moscow, where in 1854 he married Miss Eleanor Craig, who came from Belfast, Ireland, at the age of four years.

The late Mr. Card's life was spent on the farm, near Enterprise, where until a few years ago, he resided. His later years were spent in Napanee with his son, Mr. Cecil Card, and his wife, with whom he resided until the time of his death.

He leave to mourn his loss his widow in her eighty-eighth year, six daughters, Mrs. Jerome Wagar, Bantry, N. Dakota; Mrs. Jas. Walsh, Mrs. R. Walters, Miss Ella Card, Mrs. A. Graham and Mrs. A. E. Smith, all of Napanee, and three sons, Mr. Alonzo Card, of Belleville; Sask.; Mr. Cecil, of Napanee, and Mr. Murney Card, of Yarker; the fourth son, John Henry Card, having predeceased him in childhood. He also had ten grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren, besides a host of friends and neighbours.

The funeral services were held at his late residence, and were conducted by Rev. A. E. Hagerman, of Centre Methodist Church, preceding thence to Moscow for burial.

Mrs. Hewitt and Baby.

The double funeral of Mrs. Mahford G. Hewitt, nee Beth Wilson, of Newburgh, and infant daughter, Shirley Louise, who passed away on Saturday last, at the General Hospital, was held yesterday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, from the family residence, King St. West, to Oakland cemetery, where interment was made.

The service was conducted by Rev. D. A. Cowan and a very large number of sorrowing friends and acquaintances of the deceased and bereaved relatives attended. Included in the large gathering were a number of members of the Alumnae Association of Nurses of the General Hospital, of which Mrs. Hewitt was a valued member.

The floral tributes were so numerous that a special automobile was needed to carry them from the house to the grave.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Allan Gray, Harry Gray, Wm. DeCarle, Lyle Billings, Wallace Johnston and Clifford Hewitt—Brockville Recorder and Times, Dec. 10th, 1924.

THE WARDEN'S BANQUET

Mr. W. H. Milling, Reeve of North Fredericksburgh, and Warden of the County, was the host at a splendid banquet in the Paisley House on Thursday evening. Over one hundred guests were present, and all heartily enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Milling. The long tables were beautifully decked and the menu well served and appetizing. During the progress of the banquet community singing was indulged in, led by the Walters' Orchestra. At the conclusion of the menu, Mr. W. C. Wilson, the veteran County Clerk, acting as toast master, proposed the following toasts:

Toast to the King—God Save the King.

Toast to Our Host—Proposed by Mr. J. S. Johnson, Reeve of Adolphustown; reply by Warden W. H. Milling.

Toast to the Municipal Councils—Proposed by E. J. Sexsmith, M.P.; reply by A. E. Hall, Mayor of Napanee, and J. Hanna, Reeve of Camden.

Toast to the Province of Ontario—Proposed by W. S. Herrington, K.C.; reply by Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister Public Works and Highways; S. L. Squires, Deputy Minister Public Works and Highways.

"O Canada."

The principal speakers of the evening were Hon. G. S. Henry, Minister of Highways in the Ontario Government, and his Deputy Minister, Mr. S. L. Squires. Both of these gentlemen, of course, are interesting and instructive, Mr. Henry dealing with the general subject, and Mr. Squires giving the Council an insight into the regulations of the department, and the difficulties met with in framing an assentable road policy for the Province.

Mr. Henry forecasted a gasoline tax for autoists for next year.

During the evening a quartette, composed of Messrs. LeSalle, Waite, Shannon and Daly, rendered several selections to the delight of the audience.

PROFESSOR ROY AT THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

On Friday last Professor Roy, who is no stranger to Napanee, addressed the Historical Society on "The Present Situation in Germany". There is no man in Canada at the present time who is so well qualified to speak on this subject. Professor Roy spent five months last summer lecturing in one of the German Universities. And in this way was brought into close touch with the students, the professors and the leaders of the intellectual life in Germany. He was in the home circle of one of the middle class families, and was able to see Germany from the inside.

His address was more in the nature of an intimate account of the attitude of the people of Germany to their late enemies, and the outlook for the future, than a set address, and perhaps for this reason was particularly interesting.

The lecturer was not at all sure that Germany had settled for all time the question as to the form of Government that was to prevail in the nation, and even the results of the late election, while it assured that the Dawes plan would have the support of the government, showed that there were strong parties who would make it necessary for any government to walk warily. The attitude of the French in the Ruhr, and the rise of fascisti in Germany in cementing the diverse elements in opposition to France, and the many other real signs of cohesion since the armistice.

But the real spiritual movement in Germany is that known as the youth's movement. This is a movement among the young and women of Germany, who are seeking to express in their lives a revolt against the materialism of the present generation. The lads and girls chumming the country, tramping out on long tramps, the lads bare headed with long scholler collars, shorts and no tyrolese, braces, sandals, collars and bretbonned hates. The girls similarly early and watchly placed. They carry simple food with them, noting wildlife and conduct a one of the leading principles of those who are the leaders of the movement.

The lecturer gave a very vivid and interesting account of a conference of the members of this Youth Movement held at Schluchtern last summer, when addresses were given by men in the movement, and a quite symbolical dance around the Sonnenwendfeuer (summer solstice fire) which showed a romantic and idealistic side to the German character which few of the audience had thought was large since divorced from the Teuton face. This aims in life and the added interest in the life and movements of Ghandi of India in the speaker thinks is one of the greatest movement for a spiritual regeneration of the German people.

Athletics are more popular in Germany than ever before. The students are also taking an active part in the work their way through, a thing unheard of in Germany before the war.

The stories that one hears sometimes about the vast amount of munitions of war being manufactured there, or the large armies, the speaker branded as pure fiction. The commission of the allies make such a thing absolutely impossible.

Altogether the meeting was most instructive and timely, and about half with personal illustrations and incidents which gave it a real charm, and made it a treat for those privileged to hear it.

THE MAYOR'S BANQUET

To mark the end of the first administration of the town as the Mayor on Wednesday last was somewhat of an innovation when he tendered a dinner to a number of guests, in the Campbell House, to members of the Town Council, Town Officials, Warden of the County, General Representative, and the County constituted the guests from the town while Mr. J. Elliot, of Bellrock, was the guest of honor and represented the outside municipalities.

The tables were arranged in conventional dinner style and were prettily decorated with red and pink floral plants. The dinner was all that could be desired, and the service of the best.

Mr. W. A. Grange, the Clerk of the town, acted as chairman, and after the dinner he explained that the Mayor desired to review the season's work with representative citizens, and for that reason had invited them to the dinner. The first toast to the King was drunk and responded to in the usual manner. Mr. J. E. Robinson then proposed a toast to the Mayor, and in doing so, as chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, he reviewed the year's activities in that direction, pointing out that on the year's operations, even though about six thousand dollars had been expended on extension, there was a balance after all fixed charges had been met, of over three thousand dollars. He spoke in the kindliest terms of the co-operation of the Council and of the diligence and personality of Mayor MacGregor in all things that pertained to the town's welfare.

Mayor MacGregor, in replying, thanked the citizens for the way they had supported him. He then reviewed the work of the Council for the year; taking each committee he showed that each and every one had sought to do the work allotted to him in the spirit of co-operation and service. He pointed with pride to the condition of the streets, to the healthy financial condition of the town, and urged that at the coming election the ratepayers vote to support the fixed assessment on the Farmers' Dairy because of the value it had been to the town and community.

Councillor Burgess, in proposing a Toast to the Legislative Assembly, at some length the method of town finances. He pointed out that 75 per cent. of the taxes expended was fixed, and was not directly under the control of the Council, and how impossible it was in the light of this fact to lower taxes to any appreciable extent. He showed that all the committees except in the cases of unforseen difficulties, had kept strictly within their appropriation.

Mr. E. J. Sexsmith in replying for the Legislature, showed that what was true in the municipal life as regard to taxation was even more pronounced in the Federal arena, where the uncontrollable expenditure per year was in the neighborhood of $275,000,000. But there was no cause for pessimism as the assets of this country more than offset this. The broad expansion in the last year had been $29,000,000, from $306,000,000, agriculture $1,955,000,000. And Great Britain was taxed $70 per capita of population and New Zealand $60, and Australia $43, that of Canada was only $36.

Mr. J. W. Robinson, as chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, proposed a Toast to the Guest of the evening, and in doing so, pointed out that Mr. Elliot was known the length and breadth of the country for the way in which he had served for the Chambers of Commerce, and had sought to bring the town and the country together in this organization. He then spoke briefly of the Napanee branch of the Chamber of Commerce and the activities during the last year.

Mr. Elliot on rising thanked the host for the honor of calling him to speak. He said he brought personal greetings from the Mayor and Council of Bellecville. Mr. Elliot then outlined the activities of the Chamber of Commerce as a whole, and of the Provincial Associated Chambers of Commerce and as part of the Empire organization.

When in England this summer, as a delegate from the Ontario Associated Chambers of Commerce, he had the privilege of attending the Cheese Market, and seeing the cheese from the Bay of Quinte district sell for a shilling a hundred more than any other cheese in the Empire. Without political bias or other sectarian motive, the Chamber of Commerce seeking the good of the whole was in its mind the best organization for the bringing together of the town and country and making the needs and the advantages of the district known, and of bringing the necessities in a business way before the governments.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the guest of the evening by Councillor Simpson and Warden Milling.

Dr. Morden and George Gilbard moved and seconded a vote of thanks to the Clerk, Mr. W. A. Grange. Mr. Grange, in a very modest way, thanked the audience for their kindness.

The meeting broke up in the finished fashion of singing "Auld Lang Syne".

"Sickness Stalked Into This Happy Little Home"

When Jim Harrow moved into his pretty, white-washed cottage he thought he had reached the height of happiness. His wife and his baby boy loudly voiced their pleasure, too. Everything seemed to be "breaking right" for Jim.

But the happy days didn't last long. Sickness fell upon Mrs. Harrow. "It's just a pain in my back, maybe rheumatism," she said. But Jim knew how a previous attack of pleurisy had weakened her, so he called in a doctor. The doctor hinted at "lung trouble" and advised a complete examination. Jim took his wife to a specialist, who quickly confirmed the first verdict. "Consumption," he said. Husband and wife stared at each other in hopeless misery, but cheer was forthcoming. "Don't worry," said the doctor, "a year's treatment at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives will put Mrs. Harrow on her feet again; you must go now—no delay."

A kindly neighbor is taking care of the baby boy while Jim is "keeping house" by himself. Every few days the postman leaves a letter which tells him that nurses and careful doctors are doing their utmost to bring back the health that belonged to Mrs. Harrow. Shortly the letters will cease for she is almost ready to come back to the little white cottage.

Should you wish to have a hand in such worthwhile work as this, please send your contributions to Hon. W. A. Charlton, President, 123 College Street, Toronto, Ontario.

To Merchants and Salesmen

The Order you lost —Who got it?

The opportunity was there. Did your competitor call up your customer by Long Distance, and sell him?

Opportunities used to come a-knocking at the door. Nowadays salesmen go out to meet them half-way—by Long Distance.

They tell us that about 40% of the sales opportunities they go after by telephone prove profitable. Such salesmen are said to have "telephone initiative."

A well-defined plan of sales by Long Distance, and salesmen with "telephone initiative" handling it, may be just what you need to increase sales.

Why not give it a thorough trial?

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Sponger—You couldn't let me have five dollars till next week, could you?
Smart—No; and I can't promise to do it then.

Only the uninformed endure the agony of cums. The knowing ones apply Holloway's Corn Remover and get relief.

It Bids Pain Begone.—When neuralgia racks the nerves or lumbago cripples the back is the time to test the virtues of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Well rubbed in it will still the pain and produce a sensation of ease and rest. A trial of it will establish faith in it.

Mistress—Don't keep what, Mary?
Maid—What you told me to get, mum.
Mistress—What was that?
Maid—Damo, mum. I forget.

Miller's Worm Powders are a prompt relief from the attacks of worms in children. They are powerful in their action and, while leaving nothing to be desired as a worm expellant, have an invigorating effect upon the youthful system, remedying fever, biliousness, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, and other ailments that follow disorders caused by worms in the stomach and bowels.

"Why—well, I never!" ejaculated grand-dad, "I kept looking at the glass, but as I couldn't see myself, I thought I'd gone home."

For Scalds or Burns.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is a standard remedy for the prompt treatment of scalds and burns. Its healing power quickly soothes the pain and aids a speedy recovery from the injury. It is also an excellent remedy for all manner of cuts, bruises and sprains, as well as for relieving the pains arising from inflammation of various kinds. A bottle in the house and stable saves many a doctor's and veterinary's fee.

The Terror of Asthma comes like a thief in the night with its dreadful throttling, robbing its victim of breath. It seems beyond the power of human aid to relieve until one trial is made of that remarkable preparation, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Then relief comes with a rush. Life becomes worth living, and, if the remedy be used persistently, the disease is put permanently to rout. Take no substitute.

Address and Presentation

About twenty-seven members of the A. O. T. S. Bible Class of Grace Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Clark on Tuesday evening last, and spent a very pleasant time. The evening was spent in games and song, but the main feature of the evening was the presentation of a fountain pen and the following address to Mr. Stalker, the teacher of this class.

Dear Mr. Stalker,—We, the members of the A. O. T. S. Class, wish in some way to express to you our appreciation of your work. As our teacher you have given to us so willingly of your time and talents, not only in our Sunday class, but also in our social gatherings, that we feel we cannot let this festive season pass without expressing our thanks, so we ask you to accept this fountain pen as a small token of our appreciation of your good work. May you long be spared to continue in our Master's service.

Signed on behalf of the Class.
Mr. Percy Rose.
Mrs. G. W. Gibbard.
Mrs. J. T. Empey.

A dainty lunch was served of sandwiches, cake and tea. At a late hour all departed for their different homes, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Clark for their kind hospitality.

Electors of Napanee

READ THESE FACTS IN REFERENCE TO THE FARMERS' DAIRY CO. BY-LAW

USE YOUR VOTE AND INFLUENCE TO CARRY THE BY-LAW SO THAT IT CANNOT BE SAID THAT NAPANEE DOES NOT KEEP ITS AGREEMENTS WITH INDUSTRIES WHICH MAY BE INDUCED TO LOCATE HERE AND BUILD UP THE TOWN.

At the time of the January elections the property holders of the town of Napanee will be asked to vote on a by-law giving The Farmers' Dairy Company a fixed assessment of $15,000 for ten years. This does not affect the school taxes which are paid on the regular assessed valuation.

After very carefully looking into the matter, the Napanee Chamber of Commerce heartily endorses the by-law and urges all those who are interested in the progress of our town to vote and work in favor of it.

Some of the main items of local expenditure of The Farmers' Dairy Company for six months are as follows :—

From December 1st, 1923 to December 1st 1924.

Wages	$ 33,200 00
Water from the town	4,761 82
Canadian National Railways	28,487 22
Customs	4,902 17
Hydro-Electric	1,998 19
Milk and Hauling	506,235 06
Total	$579,584 46

Some Local Expenditures from 1920 to 1924 :

Wages	$127,825 00
Water from the Town	10,820 00
Canadian National Railways	83,000 00
Customs	17,300 00
Milk and Hauling	1,426,296 00
Total	$1,665,241 00

A few of the reasons why you should vote for the By-law are as follows :—

1st—When the town Council of 1919 induced this Company to locate in Napanee, they promised them that the people of Napanee would give them a fair deal and assured them that a fixed assessment would be granted them. If the people do not back up the officials of the town in fulfilling their promise, there can be no forward movement for Napanee. We cannot expect to induce other industries to locate in our town if we fail to honor the pledge given by the Council to the Farmers' Dairy Company in 1919.

2nd—An all year around market for the farmer's milk has been opened up by the Farmers' Dairy. It is no longer a six or eight months market. Dairy products are higher in the winter and opportunity is given the farmers to share in this added and increased market.

3rd—The land that is now occupied by The Farmers' Dairy Company formerly brought in less than $25.00 taxes. With a fixed assessment of $15,000.00 the Farmers' Dairy Company taxes last year would have been $1140.00.

4th—The Farmers' Dairy Company paid directly into our waterworks system this past year $4,761.82 and it cost the town very little more to pump the extra water used by them. You will see, therefore, that they are helping to a large extent to pay for your waterworks plant.

5th—As high as 40 men are employed at the plant at one time, about 25 the year around, with wages this last year of $33,200.00 paid to them. A goodly number of these men own their own homes or rent them, thus extra taxes are paid and property is made more valuable.

6th—The large amount paid the Canadian National Railways for expressage etc., by the Company ($28,487.22 this year) gives the Railway an added interest in our town.

7th—In the summer months there are 34 milk drawing routes, besides a considerable number drawing their own milk. In winter there are approximately 150 men coming to this factory daily with milk.

This Company has another milk powder plant at Sydenham where the township has already given them a fixed assessment of $10,000. The plant there costs approximately $200,000.00 to build. The Company is a large going concern, strong financially and growing all the time, just such a concern that other municipalities are seeking. If The Farmers' Dairy Company decided to close up their factory here and move elsewhere, it would be the greatest setback Napanee has known. Would it not be far better to make the officers of the Farmers' Dairy Company feel that Napanee has been a splendid location for them and have them tell other financial men what splendid possibilities there are in Napanee.

We understand that the Company has recently concluded a very large contract for milk powder to be marketed in Europe, thus insuring in the future a very large demand for milk.

Finally :—Napanee's expenses are practically fixed. We have certain debentures for sewers, sidewalks, waterworks, etc., which must be paid each year, the cost of fire protection, the cost of Police and clerical work, the cost of street lighting are all the same whether the Farmers' Dairy Company are here or not. Is it not very much to the advantage of the Town of Napanee to have them here, paying directly into the town's finances about $6,000 per year.

If they were not here that $6,000 would be divided up among the other tax payers, and there would be fewer tax payers to meet it.

It is generally conceded that we have turned the corner in the business world and coupled with this fact is the growing tendency of large Industrial firms to locate in towns and cities. If we as a town are to move forward, let us be fair to the industries we have to-day and by so doing protect our own interests in the matter of taxes, and place ourselves in line for new industrial developments.

WE URGE YOU TO VOTE IN FAVOR OF THE BY-LAW YOURSELF AND DO ALL YOU CAN TO INDUCE ALL YOUR FRIENDS WHO HAVE A VOTE ON THIS QUESTION, TO MARK IT IN FAVOR OF THIS BY-LAW ON MONDAY, JANUARY 5TH, 1925.

Big Value For Your Money

It is said that the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal works on the principle that nothing but the best will do for its readers. The soundness of this policy is amply demonstrated in the rapidly growing subscription list of this great weekly. The public have been tempted by trashy weeklies at give-away prices, but when it comes down to value for your money and a genuine Canadian flavor to your reading, the Family Herald and Weekly Star has no competitor. This year we see that the publishers are giving each subscriber whose subscription is paid in advance a large calendar for 1925 with a beautiful picture entitled "The Sale of Old Debbin", and a free entry to a contest in which ten thousand dollars will be awarded. The subscription price of the Family Herald is only Two Dollars a year.

"What is best for us always lies within our reach sometimes men never looked." Williams' Camphorated Mustard Cream is one of those best things, and if you haven't already a jar in the house, don't overlook it any longer. Secure a 25c. jar from the drug store to-day. For colds in the chest and rheumatism it has no equal.

"I'll Be Home Soon, Mother," Writes Sammy

Sammy is a keen little lad. He looks much younger than he is—only sixteen—and he has much more wisdom than is usual at his age. For two years he worked in a laundry doing a man's work. His father was unable to help him and his mother had her hands full at home, so Sammy complained of a sore side but his people didn't worry much. "It'll be all right in the morning," mother said; "go and take a rest." But it wasn't all right in the morning, nor the morning after, no, nor a week after. It was then time for a doctor to examine Sammy. The doctor looked him over several times, then took him to a specialist. Both medical men agreed that Sammy was consumptive and both held out some hope if he "took the cure" at once.

Sammy is quite a favorite up in the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. He keeps the other patients in good humor with his pleasant smile and his quaint stories of French Quebec, where he was born and raised. "I'll be home soon," he wrote in his last letter and he probably will be, for he is making splendid progress.

The Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, the Haven of the poor afflicted patient, depends in a large measure reliant upon public generosity for its funds to carry on its work.

Contributions may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton, President, 223 College Street, Toronto, Ontario.

A gift that will find constant use for years—a No. 2A Brownie Camera. It costs only $2.50, and takes wonderfully clear pictures. At Wallace's, Napanee agents for Brownies and Kodaks.

ROD AND GUN IN CANADA.

The January number of Rod and Gun in Canada comprises a variety of interesting stories and articles in addition to the excellent regular departments. Teddy's Hospitality from the pen of R. Valentine Gilbard is a well-written and entertaining story, while the first installment of Close Range by A. J. Colbourne tells of the thrilling adventure of a seal hunter. In his Winter Snips or "Winter Oysters" Bonnycastle Daly furnishes interesting and valuable facts concerning a rare and little-known Canadian bird. The other regular contributors of Notice, J. W. Winsen, F. V. Williams and Martin Hunter uphold their reputations in fine style and a number of articles on miscellaneous subjects of interest to sportsmen, including that of conservation, will be sure to hold their attention. The regular departments, conducted by the departmental editors, are all up to the mark and complete an unusually good number of the magazine. Published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

Paring a corn is both risky and ineffective. It is much better to use Holloway's Corn Remover and eradicate them entirely.

An $18,000 Rolls-Royce might be a great improvement over the one-horse shay, but is no greater an improvement than is Williams' Camphorated Mustard Cream over the old mustard plaster remedy. "Consumption Is No Respecter of Persons"

In one of the glistening, beautiful rooms of the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, Harry Williams occupies a bed right next to Jim Thom. Harry was studying Arts in the Toronto University, while Jim was a laborer in another city. Of course, that was before both knew that they had distinctions of consumption.

Harry, a handsome young man, say about 23, and Jim, about 35, are diverse in English literature. His home is in Western Ontario. Harry's mother is consumptive, too, and it was he who insisted that when Harry went back to school last fall, that he be thoroughly examined. The examination revealed consumption, so Harry withdrew from his classes, packed up a few belongings and journeyed to Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. "You know," says Harry, "consumption is no respecter of persons. Here I am, just as sick as my room-mate. He was a laborer and I was a student. He worked hard for years while I never labored in my life. He had no good home surroundings, while I have been cared for since birth. I can't understand it, can you?" And with that Harry smiles and turns wistfully down to let some-one else fight the silent struggle for his life.

Harry and Jim are but two of the many who are at present entirely dependent on the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. The Hospital itself relies on the generosity of its many friends.

NEW ISSUE BY C. P. R. IS MADE AVAILABLE IN CANADIAN MARKETS

COMPANY DECIDES TO INVITE DOMINION INVESTORS TO TAKE ITS SECURITIES

Secured by Land Sales.—Beatty Explains Desire to Extend Canadian Holdings of Railway's Securities.

Montreal. — An official announcement was issued following a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway of the issuance by the company of $30,000,000 4½ per cent. note-certificates, secured by deferred payments on lands.

Not in Need of the Cash.

Following is the statement as sent out from the office of President E. W. Beatty: "The company is not short of funds by any means, its bank account being of very comfortable proportions, but it has for many years been the company's policy to maintain a strong position in its cash resources, and, considering the magnitude of the enterprise, this is manifestly prudent. Works of improvement in contemplation to provide for its traffic and for the betterment of existing facilities will require a considerable sum in the near future, and to meet these expenditures and to provide ample working capital for other purposes the directors of the company have decided to make an issue of note certificates in much the same way as was adopted in 1914, save that the issue will be of a public character instead of being restricted to participation by its own shareholders.

"In the belief that more extensive holding of the company's securities in Canada is desirable from all standpoints, the company has cast the issue to a strong Canadian financial group consisting of the Bank of Montreal, the National City Company, the Royal Bank of Canada, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Dominion Securities Corporation, Wood, Gundy & Company, and A. E. Ames & Company.

Decided to Pass Up U. S. Market

"Already a very wide distribution is assured at a price to the public which will make it an attractive investment. It was quite open to the company to secure the requisite funds in the United States on terms equally favorable, but in view of the interest in the company's securities by Canadian investors, as evidenced by the increase in the holdings of its common stock and bonds, the directors were glad to be able to make the issue a Canadian one."

These 4½ per cent. Secured Notes are one of the highest grade and most thoroughly protected securities ever offered in the Canadian market. They are a direct credit obligation of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and in addition are specifically secured by a Trust Agreement under which the Railway covenants to pay to the Trustee land payments coming due to the Railway Company totally approximately $66,000,000.

This offering is the largest single piece of corporate financing ever undertaken in Canada. Prior to the present year, all corporate Canadian Railway financing has been done abroad, principally in Great Britain or in United States, in which markets the company's securities rank as market leaders. For example, in 1902 the company's 4 per cent debenture stock sold in London at 118⅞, to yield only 3.37 per cent. at a time when direct Dominion of Canada long term bonds were selling at approximately the same basis.

Following upon the success of the Dominion Government in refunding its maturing War Loan issues in the domestic market, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company issued $12,000,000 Collateral Trust Bonds in the spring of the present year. Although new to the average Canadian investor, these Bonds quickly reached a price comparable to the price of Dominion of Canada Victory Loan Bonds. It is not surprising, therefore, that the company has arranged to offer this larger issue in Canada. The offering is timely, inasmuch as the Dominion Government issued only $50,000,000 of long term bonds to replace $107,000,000 of maturing Victory Bonds, and it is evident that there is available large sums of money whose owners desire the highest grade of security. The present offering of Canadian Pacific Railway securities will undoubtedly be oversubscribed.

It is expected that the issue will be quickly absorbed by all classes of investors.

"She Was Too Sick To Try Entrance Exams."

Jeanne was one of the many children in New Ontario who travel miles each day to school. Fair weather or foul, they trudge along the rough roads together for the little bit of education possible for them. Fifteen years had passed since Jeanne's birth and she had never enjoyed the best of health during that time. Six of these years she had spent in going to school, helping around the house and at odd times working here and there to earn a little money.

One day she was caught in a sleet storm on her way home from school. Before long a terrible cough set in, which finally ended in Consumption. Of course, it was impossible for her to try the entrance examinations. Another year, perhaps, but certainly not this year, she thought.

She is now in one of the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. Her pleasing shyness still remains, her curly hair refuses to behave, while her eyes are with the aid of her health radiate cheer and hope. "Sure," says Jeanne, "I'm going to High School. Why not?" and we echo, "Why not?" and then, under our breath, "If we can!" because Jeanne is on the road to health.

Will you help her and others to regain health? Gifts may be sent to Dr. College of Physicians, Toronto. Contributions will be gratefully acknowledged.

NAPANEE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The December meeting of the Society was again a very interesting one. The attendance was a bit larger than usual, and twelve new names were added to the membership list.

The feature of the afternoon was a paper on "Apple History, Romance and Value", by our representative of the Department of Agriculture, Miss Weir. Read interesting and instructive.

Another very fine paper, dealing with the early settlement of Napanee, was read by Mrs. Herrington. This paper, "Certain Events and Persons in the History of the world-wonderful people", made quite a hit with the meeting story.

Mrs. Herrington is a member of the Napanee Chapter of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, and a descendant of Loyalist stock.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the ladies who had so kindly provided the refreshments, and to Mrs. Ackerman for the use of her home. The next meeting will be held in the Council Chamber, when Mrs. Ackerman will read a paper on "Christmas Customs in Many Lands".

NAPANEE CURLERS HAVE PLEASANT EVENING

The Club Rooms of the Napanee Curling Association was the scene of a very successful function Monday night, when the occasion of the opening night for the membership of 1924-1925.

The Curling Club is looking forward to a very successful season, the membership being now over 100, with an additional number to come in, which will constitute a record for Napanee.

The evening was in the form of a social and get-together event, and was largely attended, the club room being taxed to its utmost capacity.

The earlier part of the evening was spent in cards and social intercourse, after which a splendid impromptu program of music was given.

The meeting was favored with the presence of Mr. Aubrey Pringle, an old Napanee boy, now a member of "That Quartette", one of the finest vocal organizations on the continent, who captivated the gathering with several beautiful bass solos. Among others contributing to the program were Mr. Reg. Wemmell, whose solos were enthusiastically received as were also the solos of Messrs. Waite and Daly, quartettes by Messrs. Daly, Shannon, LeSalle and Waite. Napanee's new seven-piece orchestra, with Mr. Meggs, accompanist, made its initial appearance, and their several numbers brought forth rounds of applause.

At the conclusion of the festivities, light refreshments were served and before departing all voiced the feeling of the very delightful time which they had had. All are eagerly looking forward to the opening of the playing season, which will open soon if the present weather continues.

Mr. J. A. Pringle, the newly elected President, who is one of the greatest boosters of Curling, in Napanee, and his executive, consisting of Messrs. Huffman, Jewell, Wilson, Unger, Maybee and Taylor, are to be congratulated on the great success that has attended their efforts in boosting the membership to its present standing, and also for the happy relations that exist in the membership.

Address and Presentation.

What proved a very happy and pleasant event was the gathering of over thirty neighbors and friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Switzer on Monday evening, Dec. 15th, it being the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage, in the form of a chivari and social evening. Unlike one of our neighbors, the silver of their home were thrown open all came in and enjoyed themselves with music and games. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Switzer were called to a new position by Mr. Alfred M. Bell, and the following address was read by Mrs. Fred. Bell, and a silver cream and sugar set and pyrex pie plate set in silver were presented by Mrs. Fred. Switzer:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Switzer.

Dear Friends,—It is with no small degree of pleasure that we assemble here to-night to share with you in the celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of your married life.

We have observed, with satisfaction and appreciation, the great interest you have taken in the welfare of this community, your contribution to our social life, your service to the church of your choice, the zeal and integrity you employed in the management of our church choir, and your ability as organist, in which you have assisted very materially and no doubt made many sacrifices to carry out those duties during the past years, without any remuneration, and we fully appreciate your work and worth.

We further desire to express our delight at having an opportunity of enjoying the hospitality of your home, and participating on the occasion of your crystal anniversary. We do want to show our appreciation of not only this event of your life, but the esteem with which you are held by the people of Deseronto.

We desire to present you with this silver cream and sugar and pyrex pie plate as a token of our good will and good wishes, and we further trust that you both may long live on the earth to enjoy many more anniversaries, and we believe that you can congratulate yourselves on the success you have attained during the past fifteen years, and that you may look forward to a future of greater abundance and fruitfulness.

Kindly accept our grateful appreciations, and we all join in wishing you Merry Christmas and a bright New Year.

MRS. FRED. BELL.
MRS. FRED. SWITZER.

Mr. and Mrs. Switzer thanked Mr. and Mrs. Bell for the address, and the gifts, thanking them for their kind wishes, and for the pleasant evening they had given them. They also said "Good Night" after which lunch was served.

Beaver Santa Claus Fund

The venture on the part of The Beaver,—new in the annals of Napanee newspapers—to see that every last boy and girl in the town, irrespective of age, size or parentage, should have a real Xmas, has proved an unqualified success. For a number of days a survey was made of the needs and then purchases made of useful articles to meet them. There were stockings, mufflers, mitts, underwear, besides some candy and other goodies. In some cases an order was given on a local store for shoes, to insure a proper fit. These parcels have all been carefully wrapped, and labelled, and to-night the Boy Scouts, under the instructions of the committee will play the final roll in the Santa Claus act as they deliver the parcels to the respective parties.

The Beaver desires to thank all those who so generously contributed, for the societies who donated out of their funds; the group of girls who held the bazaar, and Mr. C. A. Walters and those who assisted at the dance. It has been a privilege for The Beaver to be of this service to the town and the ready and generous response has been much appreciated.

It is the intention of The Beaver to make this an annual affair. An audited statement will appear in the near future.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE COMMENCEMENT

Not often, if ever, has a larger crowd gathered in the Armouries than was there on Friday night to attend the Commencement Exercises, and the programme that was presented could not help but please the most discriminating. There was singing, speeches, music and an exhibition of gymnastic work, that interested and entertained the audience for about three hours.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. (Dr.) Wilson, played a number of selections, and they each and all showed the results of careful training and much practice. Perhaps in this more than in any other branch of the school programme was there noticable a marked improvement over last year. In the violin section particularly was the improvement in technique seen, and the sweep of the bow all at once and in the same direction was a great sight.

The Glee Club showed for some reason at a disadvantage. The choice of numbers was perhaps to some extent responsible for it; they were certainly not the best choice that could have been made. But there is a wealth of talent there, and at times showed what it was capable of doing.

The six speeches delivered by the students were well done and showed a long oratorical talent which only needs experience to be really effective. D. Alkenbrack had a subject which was new and extremely interesting. Though the speaker suffered a little from stage fright, he got through with credit to himself and school.

Miss E. MacMorine on Gene Stratton Porter, was at home in her subject, and spoke in a voice which was heard by all throughout the house.

E. Benjamin, on "What to do When Lost in the Woods", gave a lot of good advice, which showed careful attention to detail, and though given in a rather quiet manner, was very effective.

A. Parks, "In Union There is Strength. Mr. Parks was extremely hard to hear, though Dr. Taylor had him loud enough, for he referred facetiously to his bravery in tackling such a subject in the light of the present discussion in the churches.

Mr. Ham spoke on "How to Preserve the Forests", and showed a knowledge of our forest resources, and placed before the audience some good advice as to how they should be conserved.

C. Woodruff on "Galli Curci", spoke out well, and gave an insight into the life of the artist which was new to most and extremely interesting.

The piano solo, "Rhapsodie Hongroise No. 2", by Catharine Baird, was a finished production and was worthy of one much older in years and experience. It was unfortunate she was hidden while playing from most of the audience who were thus prevented from appreciating her technique.

The instrumental quartette by Ralph Black, Helen Moore, Fred Ballard and Chas. Walters was played accurately and lacks only practise to make it a real musical organization.

Jean Paul on "How Girls Study", captivated the audience with her free platform manner and clear voice.

The gymnastic exercises really astonished and bewildered the audience. The tumbling, horizontal bar work, work on the horse and pyramid building, particularly on the part of the girls, was something for which the audience was not quite prepared. To say it took well is putting it very mildly.

The feature of the evening from a academic point of view, was an address by Dr. Taylor, of Queen's, who dealt with the relation of the school to the home, the community and the nation. He stressed the point that good school work needs the co-operation of the home, where there should be good books and good literature, and where the love of scholarship should be kept constantly before the young. So in the community a successful school must have the co-operation and sympathy of the community. Criticism should be constructive, and the teachers assisted and helped. He believed there was too much distraction of energy in many schools. The school too is the training ground for the larger world. It was not so much the facts learned that mattered but that habits of study had been acquired. He pled with the young man and woman not to throw away the precious years of youth, when their minds were open and the memory retentive and the brain active.

The distribution of the school prizes by Mr. Morden, and of the I. O. D. E. prize by Mrs. Harshaw, concluded a most diversified programme, and one which will long stand out in the minds of those who were priviledged to be present. One more and more marvels at the power and strength of the modern Collegiate student who can in addition to a heavy curriculum carry along these extras at a busy time of the school year.

CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS

Court Lennox, No. 78, Canadian Order of Foresters, met in special session on Monday evening, Dec. 22nd, 1924, to initiate an A1 class of candidates, the result of a few days' work by Bro. Halpenny, that energetic, vigorous and effective organizer of the Canadian Order of Foresters, sent to us by the High Court, who, through his untiring and persistent efforts, succeeded in rounding up a sample of physical development that any society should be proud of.

After initiation, and the goat being thoroughly exhausted, as well as the candidates, after their journey through the tangled undergrowth of the forest, we all retired to the banquet room to partake of the bounteous repast provided by the committee, and all, even to the goat, enjoyed their kind and generous hospitality.

The chair was ably filled by Bro. James Wilson in a perfect and easy manner, which is quite natural, being the worthy son of a notable and worthy sire, a heritage of ancestory. First in order was the reading of the address to Bro. Halpenny by Bro. Russell Grass in a clear and impressive voice. The address was as follows:

Bro. Halpenny,—The Officers and Brethern of Court Lennox have met once again around the festive board to celebrate and also to record your successful work among us, and as the last days of the year 1924 draw to a close it adds another milestone of victory along life's highway of the Canadian Order of Foresters, which, through your zeal and steadfast devotion to duty, combined with your kind and genial smiles, you have won all hearts and you have been instrumental in bringing to a successful issue the campaign marked out for you by Bro. A. C. Wiley, Superintendent of Organization.

Bro. Halpenny, the quality of the candidates, combined with the numbers you have added to our list, is something to be proud of, and we also appreciate very much your association among us. You have mingled with the best of society. You have been called upon to assist in the worship of God by the leading churches of our town. Your daily walk in our midst has been an inspiration to our members, and more especially to the newly initiated members of the Order, to reach a high and a lofty plane, which should be the aim of every brother desiring to become a worthy and honored citizen.

Bro. Halpenny, please accept this umbrella as a token of friendship. Upon the gold band you will find engraved the name and the number of the Court from which it came. This mark of esteem, in which you are held by your brothers, does not fully convey to you the extreme loyalty and fidelity that seem to magnetize and so strengthen the tender cords of love that bind us together. May you long be spared to use it, and may the protection it affords you from the scorching rays of the sun and the boisterous and stormy weather ever remind you that there is One who is offering a life insurance eternal in the heavens, where at death, every brother draws his own premium.

As you leave us to-night for your home in Ottawa we all join in wishing you A Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year, and may the white winged angel of peace ever guide and direct your journey through life to the shining portals of heaven, where we will all have an opportunity to meet you and enter the shining gate and sit down together in the heavenly courts above.

Also behalf of the Officers and Brethern of Court Lennox, No. 78, Canadian Order of Foresters.

The presentation was made by Bro. Charles Loucks in his usual candid and gracious manner, and well chosen remarks befitting the occasion.

Bro. Halpenny's response, taken as he was on short notice, was a mental feast, and in a final explosion of eloquence he paid a grand and glowing tribute in acknowledgment of the gift and in the spirit in which it was given by the officers and members of Court Lennox.

Bro. James Wilson, following closely the rules of priority, called on Bro. Charles Loucks, who previously had given us a sample of his oral power, and he surprised the members with his witty remarks, where the Scotchman, and even the minister of the gospel, were not spared, and brought down the house with laughter, and to myself I said: "Truly he is the making of a silvery tongued artist".

Next in line, Bro. Geo. Walters was placed in the spotlight, and, as he is considered the pilot of the good ship Robin Hood, he cautioned us not to be extravagant in our expenditure, and as he is the one we consult in all the intricate and perplexing questions, he was listened to with profound attention as he carried us in facts and figures from the Napanee Court on the searching gaze of the High Court officials.

Then Bro. Wesley Conway was called to the carpet, but, unlike that man of Biblical tame, he carries the key of the money bags, and he surprised us all when he told us of the load he was carrying. The present weight, with the accumulation of interest, was overtaxing his strength and we would have to devise some way to relieve him.

Last, but not least, to be called upon was Bro. Ernie Lucas. After first apoligizing for the enormous quantity of nutritious food he had consumed, and with this handicap, acted as censor over blunders he claimed had been made from the chairman down the whole list of speakers, and when he finished he had it over them all.

After singing God Save the King we were all dismissed, after spending a delightful evening. —J.G.L.

JUDGMENTS GIVEN

His Honour James Henry Madden reserved judgment at the last sittings of the County Court in two cases arising from an automobile accident on the Deseronto Road, of Haslett vs. McVicker and Scouten vs. McVicker, and on the fifth gave judgment as follows :—

Haslett vs. McVicker—Judgment for the Plaintiff, Thomas George Haslett, for $187.25, and to the Plaintiff, Amy Anne Haslett, $250.00; with costs of action.

Scouten vs. McVicker.—Judgment for the Plaintiff, Albert H. Scouten, $251.90, and for the Plaintiff, Alice Scouten, $700.00; with costs of action.

G. F. Rattan, K.C., acted as counsel for the Plaintiffs in both cases, and Mr. C. A. Payne, of Messrs. Porter, Butler & Payne, Belleville, acted as counsel for the Defendant in both cases.

An actor got "carried away" on a festive occasion, and remained carried away for several days. He came to himself in his own room without knowing exactly how he got there. A friend sat beside him.

"Hello," he said, as he opened his eyes, "what day is this?"

"This," said his friend, "is Thursday."

The invalid thought it over for a minute. "What became of Wednesday?" he asked.

"A Little Bird Told Me."

The common expression, "A little bird told me so," means that information respecting a matter has come to a person in some secret and perhaps mysterious manner. The saying is not a literal quotation, but is borrowed from the twentieth verse of the tenth chapter of Ecclesiastes. The verse opens with a warning not to curse those in power, and even in thought or "in thy bedchamber; for a bird of the air shall carry the voice and that which hath wings shall tell the matter."

Simple Food Agreed With Them.

The wealth of the Ceylonese is usually estimated by the number of coconut trees they own. Native boats from the Maldive Islands sometimes arrive in Ceylon built, rigged, provisioned and laden with the produce of the coco-palms. A shipwrecked crew was cast upon the South Sea Islands, where the party remained for several months, living solely on coconuts and a little boiled fish; when they returned they had all increased in weight.

Arbitrage.

This is a term applied to transactions taking advantage of difference in price in different markets for the same articles. At the same time that the trader buys in the cheaper market he sells in the dearer. The margin between the two prices must be more than the cost of exchange in order to show a profit. Arbitrage transactions are usually in bullion or coin, bills and exchanges or stocks and bonds.

SUN'S ECLIPSE IS RARE EVENT

Sight of a Lifetime.—What Torontonians Will Experience on Morning of Jan. 24th.—Official Observation at Hamilton.

For a good many years Hamilton's mountain has been the butt of editorial jokes, but on Jan. 24th the old mountain is going to leap into scientific history as the site of an astronomical station, from which a squad of eminent astronomers, headed by Professor C. A. Chant and Professor R. K. Young, of Toronto University, will view, photograph and collate data of the total eclipse of the sun, which is then eventuate on that date.

So much, and a good deal more, was stated at the meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society in the Physics Building of the University last night, at which Professor Young made it quite plain that those who miss seeing the blotting out of Old Sol next month are going to miss the only opportunity they will have in this life, unless they care to travel to the uttermost ends of the earth when the next one takes place.

Fifteen Hundred an Hour.

Also, he stressed that only a certain area of Ontario will be favored with the actual sight of a total eclipse for the shadow, which travels at a clip of fifteen hundred miles per hour, has a breadth running from fifty to one hundred miles. And in the centre of the shadow are Goderich, Galt, Kitchener, Hamilton, Dundas, Welland and Bridgeburg. Toronto is on the west fringe.

In explaining what people might expect to see, Professor Young said: "On the morning of January 24th, 1925, the sun rises at 7.45. Fifteen to seventeen minutes later those who are watching the lower right hand corner of the sun as it peeps over the horizon will see a little black indentation, which will be the moon's disc beginning to cover up that of the sun."

Gradually the growing shadow cast by the moon would cover up the ruddy face of Old Sol, until about 9.06 it would be completely obscured. Here in Toronto it would remain hidden for not less than a thankyne minute. Hamilton, which is in the centre of the total eclipse, would last for about one minute and fifty seconds.

Starts in Minnesota.

The shadow of the moon, explained the speaker, would first touch the earth on Minnesota, and thence, travelling westward at the respectable gait of twenty-five miles a minute, it would pass through Western Ontario south through the New England States to New York, and then out on the Atlantic. Over the waters of that vast tumultuous sea it would sweep, missing England and, speeding still seawards, south of Iceland.

For the very fact that it was to take this path, the eclipse would mark an epoch in astronomical history, emphasized the speaker, for never before had a total eclipse of the sun been visible by so many millions inhabiting industrial areas. This one passed over not less than ten observatories, said Prof. Young, who pointed out that on other occasions it had been necessary to send groups of scientific observers to other parts of the world to view such a sight.

Comes With Rapidity.

He told the audience what they might expect to observe during the various progresses of the eclipse. The light would fade with surprising rapidity, for the moon's disc came down with incredible speed. It would be dark, though the sky would be slightly brighter than in ordinary moonlight. Many stars would leap into clear vision. Towards the western horizon Asterius would be visible, while the Big Dipper would stand out in plain view in the northeast. Venus would appear quite close to the sun, and to the west, the planet Jupiter. The shadow cast by the moon would not be circular, but of an elongated elliptical shape, he said.

As the moon continued to cover the face of the sun, the great loss of light could cause the landscape to take on an unusual appearance. Objects would appear a little strange of view. The heavenly condition would have its effect on animals. Chickens would call it a day, and take themselves to their roosts. Birds would follow suit. Other animals would become uneasy, this condition perhaps extending to the more ignorant of mankind.

Hints for Amateurs.

Amateur astronomers could do good work, thought the speaker, if they took with them to the corresponding they used cameras with focal lengths not less than six inches and gave at least one second time exposure. They should make an effort, though, to streamline their plates.

Speaking of the Toronto University's plans, Professor Young said that they intended to station there with one forty-five foot camera, using a three-foot camera for another place of the work. He mentioned that they were particularly interested in obtaining clear pictures of the corona—the light which surrounds the sun's orb, and consists of gases unknown to this earth.

One great difficulty would be that when the actual eclipse took place the sun would be very low on the horizon. For that reason it was the great hope of astronomers that the weather conditions would be fine, otherwise the photographic record would naturally be limited in scope. "But," concluded Prof. Young, "if the weather is clear it should be a unique and impressive phenomena."

Following a short address by Prof. Chant on the change of the astronomical day, an invitation was extended to all members of the society to attend a meeting next week, at which plans will be formulated for local astronomers to take thorough observations of the eclipse.

SANTA CLAUS USES THE RADIO

Until this year little boys and girls could only write to Santa Claus; post their letters and trust to the postman to deliver them. But this year the Radio Department of the Canadian National Railways made an arrangement with Santa Claus and letters from boys and girls, all over Canada, are being broadcast from the C. N. R. Radio Stations to Santa in his workshop in the Far North. Santa acknowledges, each evening by radio, that he is hearing what his little friends have to tell Him.

Although he is a very busy man, Santa Claus visited every broadcasting station of the Canadian National Railways, in Moncton, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton, telling his little friends to write him, care of the C. N. R. Radio, and thousands of letters from boys and girls have been received and broadcast to Santa.

The picture you see here was taken in one of those stations as Santa was speaking to his boys and girls through the microphone, which is the instrument used to send the sound of the voice dancing out over the world on the radio waves.

Down below you see one of the big engines that the Canadian National Railways are going to lend Santa Claus to carry his bags of toys, if there is not enough snow for his reindeer. These are the biggest and most powerful freight engines in the whole of the British Empire. They can easily pull a train of 150 loaded freight cars; so you see, Santa Claus will have no trouble bringing all his toys, no matter if there isn't any snow on Christmas Eve.

TREAT POLLUTED WATER

Sterilize It by Boiling or by Adding a Disinfectant

Use Hypochlorite—How to Make and Apply It—Calf Troubles—Sprouted Wheat Injured for Seed—When to Feed Silage.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

When wells have become polluted from unsanitary sewage or drainage the cause should be found and removed, and preventive measures taken so that the trouble should not recur.

The water so polluted should be sterilized before being used for drinking purposes. Sterilization may be accomplished either by boiling the water or by the addition of a suitable disinfectant. The disinfectant most suitable for this purpose is a hypochlorite solution.

Stock Hypochlorite for Water Purification.

This hypochlorite solution may be prepared and applied as follows:

1. Mix one-half pound of chloride of lime (22 per cent. available chlorine) with one pint of water.

2. Add sufficient water to make one gallon.

3. Dissolve 12 ounces of sal soda crystals in two quarts of lukewarm water.

4. Add sufficient water to make one gallon.

5. Mix these two solutions in a barrel or crock and allow the milky solution to settle over night.

6. Pour off the clear liquid from the white sediment into a jug and fill into bottles, well stoppered, and keep cool in a dark place. This "stock hypochlorite" will contain approximately the equivalent of 2 per cent. of chloride of lime or 1 per cent. of available chlorine.

Application.

Mix one ounce of this stock solution to five gallons of water that is to be used for drinking purposes. After mixing allow to stand for half an hour before use.

The solution may be added in small quantities to water after it has been drawn from the well, or the quantity of water in the well or cistern may be estimated and the necessary amount of the solution poured direct into the well and stirred in.

Farm well waters in Ontario suspected of being polluted will be tested upon application to the Bacteriological Laboratory, Ontario Agricultural College.—Prof. D. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

Main Causes of Calf Troubles.

Cold milk to-day; warm milk tomorrow.

Sour milk to-day; sweet milk tomorrow.

Sour, dirty feed pails and troughs.

Dirty pens; flies; no protection from heat or sun.

Feeding too much or too little.

No drinking water supply.

Sour whey and sour skim milk from the factory.

Vermin.

It is a good practice to leave the calf with its dam for the first two or three days, even though it is planned to rear the calf by hand.

Autumn-born calves usually escape direction troubles, due to cold weather being an aid in preventing the souring of food.

A grass lot adjoining the stable is very useful to calves over three months of age. Young calves thrive best in a clean, well ventilated, cool, dry stable.

If the horns are not desired, treat with caustic potash before the calf is more than ten days old.—Dept. of Extension, O. A. C., Guelph.

Wheat Sprouted Before Harvest Is Injured for Seed.

Winter wheat is less valuable for seed purposes if it becomes sprouted before it is harvested. Experiments were conducted in the Field Husbandry Department at the Ontario Agricultural College to which different varieties of winter wheat which had been more or less sprouted in the fields were tested for germination. The comparative injuries caused by sprouting before harvest is indicated by the following average percentages of the germination of the threshed wheat: Skin over germ, unbroken, 94; skin over germ, broken, 76; sprout one-quarter inch long, 30; and sprouts one inch long, 18. The sprouted seed not only gave lower germination, but the plants produced were uneven in growth.

This information may prove very valuable in some districts of Ontario where rains have been frequent at the time of winter wheat harvest this autumn.—Dept. of Extension, O. A. C., Guelph.

When to Feed Silage.

The time to feed silage is directly after milking, or several hours before milking. If fed immediately before milking the silage odors may pass through the cow's body into the milk. Besides, the milk may receive some taints directly from the stable air. On the other hand, if feeding is done subsequent to milking, the volatile silage odors will have been thrown off before the next milking hour.

Combating Orchard Pests In Winter.

When the orchards have been cleared of apples there is time to go through the nearby woods and hedges and cut the wild cherry trees and bushes which are the bivouacs of the tent caterpillars that raid the orchards in the spring. It is a good time to inspect the trees for borers and to put down mice and rabbit guards at the same operation. Trample the grass flat at the tree base to allow a close inspection for sawdust from the borer's operations, and then adjust the wire or paper guard to be in place when snow comes.

GETTING IN FARM ICE

Harvesting This Good Winter Crop In the Best Way

Success Depends on Ten Conditions —Ice-Houses May Be Cheaply Constructed — Harvesting the Crop — Maintenance of Farm Work Horse.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

It is now none too soon to make preparation for the winter harvest of the ice crop. Some may be for the first time planning to harvest some ice this winter, and they will in all probability need to construct some sort of a building or bin in which to store it. Those who have regularly stored ice may have to make some alterations or repairs to the old ice storage. In any case it is a good policy to make the necessary preparations early, and so have everything in readiness when the time comes to cut and store the crop.

Success Depends Upon Ten Conditions

The style of ice storage really does not count provided the following conditions are fulfilled:

(1) That the ice be cut from a body of clean water and be free from weeds and sediment.

(2) The cakes should be cut regularly, and all of a size. The ice should be at least 12 inches thick.

(3) The ice should be stored on a cold, dry day.

(4) The cakes should be packed together as closely as possible without any sawdust or other material between them. Any spaces between the cakes may be filled with finely broken ice or snow.

(5) Plenty of dry sawdust, at least 12 inches, should be packed between the mass of ice and the walls of the enclosure, and even a greater depth below and above the ice.

(6) The top of the ice storage should be provided with good circulation for air in order to prevent accumulation of warm, stagnant air over the ice. This point cannot be emphasized too strongly.

(7) The ground below the ice pit should be well drained in order to readily carry off the waste from the ice.

(8) The wall around the bottom should be air-tight.

(9) The ice should be kept well covered with dry sawdust all summer after each time ice is removed.

(10) As far as possible the ice storage should be out of the direct rays of the sun, but yet in a place where there is good circulation of air.

Ice-Houses May Be Cheaply Constructed.

It is possible to secure most of these conditions in a very cheap and simple construction, and therefore the storage of ice need not give one much concern. The better style of ice-house is usually constructed of a wall consisting of one layer of boards on each side of 2 x 4 studs, the space between being left empty.

Ice can be kept successfully in various sorts of storages: A large bin made of single boards nailed on ordinary studding or cedar posts and located inside some other building as a shed or barn; or outside as a simple lean-to on the shady side of a large building; part of a hay-mow; an old silo; or a more costly and attractive building usually called the ice-house or cold storage building.

Most of the ice stored on farms is used for cooling milk and cream and keeping it sweet for short periods. When both milk and cream are cooled it is necessary to store 1½ tons per cow kept, this amount covering a reasonable waste by melting in the storage. If a refrigerator is used in the house or adjoining the storage where foods for the table are kept, 2 or 3 tons extra should be stored.

Harvesting the Crop.

This crop is not the pleasantest one the farmer has to handle, as it is usually pretty cold and wet work. Lots of good company while working at the job is a great help, and therefore co-operative effort should be carried out in this line of work. The job can be done more efficiently, quickly, more economically and under more pleasant conditions than by the single-handed method. The job is worth while, and, if done about in a sensible manner, is not too objectionable—certainly not nearly so bad as standing at the tail-end of a threshing machine.

The Department of Physics, O.A.C., Guelph, will gladly supply bulletins and blue-prints describing ice-houses, small cold storages and refrigerators, and describing in detail how the harvesting is done. Write us early. —R. K. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Maintenance of Farm Work Horses.

Considerable work was done during the winter of 1922 by the Department of Animal Husbandry, Ontario Agricultural College, to ascertain the cost of maintenance of the farm horses. For heavy horses at teaming work necessary around the farm, such as drawing manure, etc., it cost from 31½ to 36.6 cents per horse per day for feed, stabling and care. The cost of feed was 54 per cent. of the total cost of maintenance, and the cost of labor was 22 per cent. of the total cost. Horse labor during the winter cost 21.6 cents per hour.

Good For the Soil.

Not only does farm manure supply plant food but the vegetable or organic matter it contains also helps to increase the productivity of soil. As this vegetable matter gradually breaks down, the acid products formed help dissolve and make available to plants some of the otherwise inactive plant food in the soil. Furthermore, the humus helps retain moisture and improves the soil texture.

But we still have plenty for sale."

The Many-Purpose Oil. — Both in the house and stable there are scores of uses for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Use it for cuts, bruises, burns, scalds, the pains of rheumatism and sciatica, sore throat and chest. Horses are liable very largely to similar ailments and mishaps as afflict mankind, and are equally amenable to the healing influence of this fine old remedy which has made thousands of firm friends during the past fifty years.

Antelope to Be Cared For.

The antelope, noted for its color- ...ing, delicate proportions and nymph- ...like movements, is threatened with ...extinction unless some measures are ...taken at once to give it some protec- ...tion. There are said to be 3,000 in ...the United States, and 350 of these ...are in the Yellowstone park. In 1908 ...there were 2,000 in the park alone. ...Agitation on behalf of the antelope ...has been started by the members of ...the American Bison society, which ...has done so much for the buffalo. ...The winter range in the Yellowstone ...park is not nearly adequate for the ...antelope alone and it is necessary to ...share it with other animals. It is ...proposed to enlarge this winter range ...and also to provide similar ranges in ...California, Oregon, Utah, Nevada, ...Wyoming and Idaho, and also to with- ...draw from public use certain parts ...of the Yellowstone where the animals ...congregate. The antelope herd in ...this country suffered last year from ...exposure and from the depredations ...of predatory animals.

And He Didn't Mean That, Exactly.

It was a concert in connection with ...the Sunday school anniversary, and ...when Freddy was called upon to give ...his recitation his nerve failed com- ...pletely. Standing trembling before ...the sympathetic audience, he seemed ...as if he could not make a start.

Persuasion was tried, but in vain. ...He broke into sobs and finally was ...sent back to his seat.

The officiating minister seized the ...opportunity to pour out consolation ...and also give encouragement for the ...good of the boy.

"Well, friends," he remarked, "it is ...not a very nice thing to stand here ...and look at all your faces."

Then he wondered why the audi- ...ence smiled.

Could Not Find "Mary."

A Sunday evening recently, shortly ...after 8 o'clock, a young man stopped ...at a home in West Forty-second street, ...and asked whether any one could tell ...him where "Mary" lived. He said he ...did not know her name, but that his ...sister had introduced him to Mary, ...and he had taken her home in West ...Forty-second street. He was told that ...no "Mary" lived in the blocks bounded ...by Conser avenue and the Northwest- ...ern bridge. He walked away toward ...the east with a box of candy under ...his arm.—Indianapolis News.

Woman Preacher in English Town.

The little English town of Sunning- ...dale is thoroughly up to date, for it ...now has a woman as sole minister of ...its Congregational church. She is ...Miss Norah Thompson, who has made ...a name for herself as an excellent ...preacher. She has officiated at mar- ...riages, baptisms and funerals and is ...fully qualified for every duty.

Symbolism of Animals.

In the symbolism of animals, the ...ant typifies frugality and provision; ...the bear, ill temper and uncouthness; ...the bull, straightforwardness; the ...bull-dog, pertinacity; the butterfly, ...sportiveness and living in pleasure; ...the dove, innocence and harmlessness; ...the fox, cunning; artifice; the goose, ...conceit and folly; the grasshopper, old ...age; the mule, obstinacy; the owl, ...wisdom; the peacock, pride; the swan, ...grace.

Most Eggs in New Moon Period.

Experiments have shown that more ...eggs will hatch if the hen is set when ...the moon is new, or very close to ...that period, and that the young chicks ...hatched at that time will be stronger ...and more vigorous, and will grow more ...rapidly. On the other hand, chicks ...hatched when there is no moon are ...often more weakly and do not make ...such strong and vigorous fowls, nor ...are they such good egg-layers.

Eskimos Regard Life Lightly.

The Eskimos, who have not yet ...come under Christian influence, are ...said to be filthy and treacherous. They ...practice polygamy and infanticide, and ...they kill off the aged and infirm ...when they are unable to hunt. But the ...Christian Eskimos are clean and self- ...respecting, and 75 per cent of them ...can read and write in their own lan- ...guage.

His Appetite With Him.

A story is told of a jockey who af- ...ter the race for which he had been ...long starving himself went to a hotel ...and ate a leg of mutton. When the ...waiter asked if he would like some ...sweets or cheese, he replied: "No, I ...never eat sweets. But if you have ...another leg of mutton I think I could ...manage it."

Primitive East Indian Dancing.

In native Hindu dances virtually ...every muscle of the body is in some ...way brought into play. There is a ...good deal of pantomime used, rather ...cryptic to the foreigner, and few of ...the professional dancers appear to ...have had the training necessary to ...give real rhythm of motion.

Our Christmas Message

Holly Berries and Mistletoe, boughs of Hemlock and the fragrant Pine, wreaths of glossy Laurel and Candles burning brightly in the windows of the homes, all proclaim that the spirit of Christmas is again abroad in our land.

It is in our homes that we look for the symbols of Christmas, reminders of the glory that once enwrapped the Child, cradled in rude straw, that transformed the lowly stable behind the inn into the holiest of all human Sanctuaries—the Home.

The lights of Noel—one by one, they come out along the streets throughout the Town and Country, telling of happy homes and hearth fires burning bright, giving glad evidence of the Christmas spirit alive to-day in the hearts of men. It is good to see them there, good to remember that for a while the harsh cares of every day are forgotten, the traffic of the market-place and the clamor of buying and selling are stilled, while Christmas candles shed a happy highway across the world.

Happiness is the greatest and most blessed of all Life's good gifts. Wealth, success, fame—all these are fair, but without happiness to crown them, they become as trivial as the tinsel ornaments that glitter on the boughs of our Evergreens. Yet the difference between happiness and sorrow is just that which lies between a gladsome enlightened acceptance of Life, and a hostile gloomy submission to it.

The happy Country lies open to us all. The lights of Christmas, the glowing tapers of kindliness and faith and hope and joy in our common heritage will make bright the way for us all the year, if we will but let them. It is this spirit of Christmas happiness that we hope will shine upon all our patrons and friends now, and throughout the coming year.

INTERESTING EVENT AT NEWBURGH PUBLIC SCHOOL

An interesting event took place at the closing of the Newburgh Public School for the holidays.

Miss Mitchell, having tendered her resignation as teacher, the pupils and their friends met to give her a send off. This, combined with the fact that Miss Lillith Gandier was severing her connection with L. T. L. work in the school, which she had carried on for some years, made the occasion of double interest. The regular monthly exercises of the L. T. L. were first carried out. During this period Miss Gandier, who is not only President of the L. T. L. but also a member of the School Board, addressed the school, thanking the pupils for their interest in and response to the work she had been trying to carry on with them. She paid a hearty tribute to Miss Mitchell for her co-operation, for the fine spirit that had been maintained in the school and for the interest she had aroused in the minds of the pupils with regard to the things that are best both inside and outside the school. A programme of songs and recitations was then carried out by the children, which was very much enjoyed. After this prizes were distributed, as follows :—A prize for the best conduct during the term, was by a previous ballot, voted to Isabell Walroth, by her classmates; for taking highest standing in their classes, the following received prizes, Sr. Fourth, Angus Harrison and Dorothy Kellar; Jr. Fourth, Ruby Switzer; Sr. Third, Mitchell Carter; Jr. Third, Margaret Hinch. Rev. Mr. Nickle, in his usual happy manner, presented the prizes, giving to each recipient a word of encouragement and advice.

The following address and presentation was made to Miss Mitchell :—

Dear Miss Mitchell,—We are very sorry to know that you are giving up the work of teaching among us, but we wish you a most pleasant career, and the best of success at Queen's University, where you are going after the New Year. Great is our gratitude to you for your generous and untiring efforts on our behalf in this school.

As a sign and token of this gratitude and as a parting gift and remembrance, we ask you to accept this electric lamp. We hope that it will bring you many pleasant memories of us, the pupils of Newburgh Public School.

Signed on behalf of the school,

Juanita Wartman.
Hazel Winter.
Marie Ramsay.
Ruby Switzer.

Miss Mitchell, in replying, thanked them most heartily, not only for the beautiful gift, but for the kindly thought expressed in the address. These, she knew were but the outward expression of the kindly and responsive treatment that had been accorded to her always by the pupils with whom she was severing her connection with much regret. She hoped and wished for them all that was good and best.

Miss Gandier received a gift of stationery as a slight acknowledgment of her unselfish and untiring efforts on behalf of the school and its pupils.

A delicious lunch was served by the pupils and their friends which rounded up an afternoon of real enjoyment.

HIS LIFE AN EPIC

Capt. Arthur Jackman a Hero to Newfoundlanders.

Lives in Their Memory—"Honest as de Sun He Was, and as True as Steel."

Among the sealers of Newfoundland certain figures loom gigantic. Such a one is Capt. Arthur Jackman, dead but never forgotten. Long before I reached Newfoundland on the steamer from New York, I began hearing about Jackman's incredible exploits. Many people in St. John's told me about him. And at the ice the sealers were constantly recalling bits of the Jackman legend. Jackman seems almost a national hero.

It was Jackman, most famous of seal killers, who once when he had an infected thumb called for a hatchet and calmly chopped that thumb off, "standin' dere on de ship's bridge, sir, bare-handed an' in a green split-tail coat." It was Jackman who once knocked a man down into the hold, jumped after him, flailed him around; whereupon the man sank all his teeth in Jackman's leg and went raving crazy.

The sealers tell you how Jackman was never drunk at sea or sober on land; how he used to trick all the other sealing captains and clean up the patch before they could reach it; how one time though short of coal himself, dumped 20 tons on the ice for a rival captain to pick up; how another time, when the funnel was ripped off by a blizzard, he built a wooden funnel and carried on to success.

"Roughest man in the world, sir, but inside of him a real man! Seven foot high he was, wid a hand like a bucket. Big-boned, sir, an' hard as de devil's 'ld. Only one man ever licked 'im—dat was a Scotch engineer he locked into de cabin to give a beatin' to. De engineer hammered him stiff, and Jackman love him for it.

"Honest as de sun he was, an' true as steel! He had prayers every night, sir, an' yit he had a calendar printed without no Sundays on us, at all, so dere wouldn't be no Sundayin' aboard. He'd put de Sunday men on de ice, an' keep 'em dere all day.

"Very polite he could be, too. One time he says to a man he was fightin' wid, 'Please don't come a-nigh me or I'll have to split ye wid dis hatchet!' Oh, Jackman was 'id of 'em all! He made up to seven t'ousand dollars a year'—fabulous wealth for Newfoundlanders"—and died when beam broke. Give away every cent, he did. His funeral procession was de loangest ever seen in St. Johns. Oh, dere never was narr un like Cap'n Jackman!"

The Jackman epic is interminable. Jackman is by way of becoming a Newfoundland solar myth.

The reference to Sunday men requires explanation. Before the Sabbath law went into effect certain men refused to kill seals on Sunday; and these were Sunday men. Today, seal killing is taboo on Sunday. —Grenfell in England, in Saturday Evening Post.

Couldn't Please Her Husband.

Husbands are curious cusses. They have odd tastes and likings. Really their fancies are fickle. Their appetites and passions are not easily restrained. The clerk of any divorce court knows that. Here was the case the other day of the husband who complained because his wife was taking on too much figure. He said that she had the waist of a sylphess and could wear a neat sack for a kimono. He said that nobody could love a fat wife.

So the spouse took up the matter of reducing. She read all the literature pertaining to the anti-fats. Finally she got hold of some powerful dope that bit into her frame like a buzz saw. She shed weight as if it were being swept off with a broom. From being fat she went into reverse English. She became really thin.

All for the love of a husband!

Now the man is suing the wife for a divorce. He says that the wife took drugs and cosmetics that made her wan and ethereal and that she lost and forfeited his love in the doing. He doesn't care for any pale and sickly companion about his home. —Los Angeles Times.

Necessities of Life.

Schnapps and cognac were officially ruled to be necessities of life by a German court when two bonzen barmaids, Maria Rhodes and Lyda Bock, with their employer, were fined heavily for profiteering in brandy.

According to the German law, necessities of life must be marked in plain figures and sold for no more. Luxuries need not be marked and the marked prices may be raised at will. When the government found a price higher than that marked had been collected for brandy the barmaids were fined 3,000 and 1,500 marks respectively, and the proprietor, Herman Loewer, 7,000 marks.

Cost of America's Wars.

The Revolutionary war cost the government $135,000,000 and 200,000 troops were engaged. The War of 1812 cost $107,000,000 with 471,000 soldiers engaged. The Mexican war cost the United States $100,000,000 and engaged 101,232 troops. The Civil war cost the North $6,189,929,000 and the northern troops numbered 2,859,132. The World war cost Uncle Sap the huge sum of $24,000,000,000 and there were over 4,000,000 men in the service of the country.

CHRISTMAS PARTY.

The opening of the Xmas season was a most happy one for the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Daly who attended the delightful party given by them on Tuesday evening last. Mr. and Mrs. Daly received with their sons, Morris and Bill, and their house guests, Miss McEachern, of Calgary, and Miss Tomlins, of Toronto. Mrs. Daly wore white embroidered georgette, Miss McEachern petunia crepe beaded in blue, and Miss Tomlins, American Beauty georgette.

The large drawing rooms on either side of the hall were bowers of cheery greens with touches of bright red to give the true Xmas atmosphere. Tall baskets of pale yellow mums made a charming contrast. A splendid Orchestra played from nine until two, and everyone enjoyed the dancing. Supper was served at midnight in the prettily decorated dining-room, with a miniature Xmas tree, colored lights and red and green balloons, effectively arranged.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Miss Graham, of Belleville, and Mr. Wm. Parker.

The Danger Zone

By Lillian Henderson

"Nance, you're not to go to bed at ten o'clock any more to-night," said Mrs. Duryea, "you're to stay up with me until I get ready to go myself, Levi. I've got things to say to you."

"Oh, sorry," scorned Levi Blair. "Sorry to keep you waiting, but I'll be polite, just I'd speak the truth if I were sorry." There's someone else, I'll bet, that's the trouble, and I'd like to get across him. And I have a dim idea as to who it is. It's keeping close, and getting better, for he's wanted and if he's caught the crowd will surely settle him.

"I have said quite enough," spoke Nance Duryea with flashing eyes, "and you dare to come here any more? And Levi Blair found the closed door between himself and the object of his love. He shook his fist at an imaginary rival and went his way.

Mrs. Duryea house was connected by a covered passageway with the little cobbler shop and left workshop where John Duryea made boots. He had originally been a cooper, but there was no demand for barrels or kegs in the district since the steamships had been driven into exile. At Mayville, twenty miles away, however, a small shoe factory had been started. Labor was cheap and there was a local tannery, and the shoe people had given him steady employment and quite profitable contract to supply them with shipping cases.

The value of the contract and the necessity of business expansion had about influenced Mr. Duryea to remove to Mayville, and Nance hailed the prospect with delight. There was nothing at Crofton to attract a young girl. The men were rough and uncouth, the women led a humdrum, shavelike life and the town and the district was dominated by a fierce, inbred clique, familiarly known as "The Hillers."

They were called that because at the appearance of anyone in collision with the law the moonshiner up among the mountain ranges welcomed the refugee to shelter and protection. The two elements were in friendly communication and stood by each other in a signal way when occasion required.

The advent of a stranger was always hailed with suspicion. The rough element looked for an excise officer or a government spy invading their territory in every movement, and when Bert Knowlton, a young lawyer from a distant city appeared in the interest of a client relating to a large tract of real land, he was advised by the local head of justice as follows:

"Get through your job quick as you can and stay in nights."

"Why? What's the particular danger?" inquired the self-possessed young man rather coolly.

"You're hitting the gang, that's the particular danger," answered the village peace keeper. "As you know, the squatter rights of the tract in litigation rest with the Hiller people. They are short strong and powerful with the folks hereabouts. They'll block you, I warn you, and if you stick too much of a stumper, it will be a load of buckshot some dark night."

"I shall try to take care of myself," said Knowlton with his habitual composure, and went on his way, undeterred and unafraid.

By the merest chance once or twice he had met Nance Duryea. The first time was when he overtook her in a sudden rainstorm, and his umbrella, as he escorted her home, afforded her timely shelter. She was duly impressed with this neatly groomed, clear-eyed young man, whose courtesy and attentions made her remember him. There had been a half understanding between them that he was to call upon her the evening when Levi Blair made his plea and threat, but Knowlton did not come, much to the disappointment of Nance. It was the next afternoon just about dusk when loud voices and a general commotion in front of the house called her to the front door. She was startled to observe her father with set face and wrath-filled eyes confronting half a dozen rough-looking men, one of whom was holding a bloodhound in leash, Levi Blair was the leader.

"Search my house," John Duryea was shouting, and his honest face fairly bristled with indignation and resentment. "Why, I'll wing the first dast and who crosses the threshold."

"That's all right, John Duryea," spoke Blair, "but our dog has found the blood marks in this direction. We are after that spy, Knowlton, and we're going to get him. He wounded one of our men and he escaped, but with a good dose of buckshot in one leg."

"You coward," cried Nance, springing into plain view. "How dare you insinuate that Mr. Knowlton came here. My father would have known me and I have not seen him for two days. Double crazen you are, to hunt down a stranger who comes here among us on legitimate business."

"You can go your way," spoke Mr. Duryea. "I have always been accounted in your affairs, attending strictly to my own. I'll tell you this, though, some day you'll go too far and the police down at Mayville will come up here and clean you out, root and branch."

Reluctantly and with crestfallen eye Levi Blair led his crowd away. Nance went to her own room. She was agitated and in tears. Analyzing intuitively an emotion of rare interest in the human heart, she realized that a front her father with her tell-tale face.

HISTORY OF ANCIENT DAYS.

Excavators Have Unearthed Remains of a Palace.

While excavating among the ruins of the ancient city of Kish, near the site of Babylon, Prof. Langdon and Mr. McKay unearthed what is supposed to be a palace.

The early historians of Babylon, who wrote their records on tablets of clay, said that Kish was founded soon after the Flood, and they put down the date at 3,000 years before about 5500 B.C. Of this most ancient town nothing but a heap of mounds remains, but, digging among them, the excavators have discovered the city bounds, and they tell us that Kish enclosed by a wall was about five miles long and two miles wide. The mounds inside the great city wall hide the secrets of the earliest known people of historic times.

* These people were of a very warlike tribe; their chief god was the god of war; and most of the pictures scratched and chiselled on the fragments of walls unearthed deal with the old story of a conflict between Bel and his conquests.

But not the excavators have come across the remains of a palace, with decorations on the walls and pillars; and a collection of written tablets—dictionaries and records—a royal library of ancient days.

One is supposed to think of a library as a collection of printed books, with perhaps a number written by hand before the art of printing was discovered. But long before men wrote on paper they knew of the element; and before that on papyrus; and before that on lumps of stone. And so we get back to the very beginning of the world's history recorded by human beings.

This library that has been discovered promises to supply information that archaeologists are always hunting for about the history and development of a certain kind of writing called cuneiform. This was largely used by the ancient Assyrians and Babylonians, and consisted of wedge-shaped characters.

In the earliest records the writing was pictographic—that is to say, the words were pictures, scratched on stone. When clay tablets began to be used the writing, done on the soft clay, became simpler and simpler, the picture part of the characters slowly disappearing. This was called cuneiform writing, and was in use in the East almost till the time of Jesus Christ.

In the British Museum in London may be found many clay tablets. The earliest writing, the pictographic, is naturally rarer, as it belongs to a period of the world's history of which very few traces have been found. On one has yet found the beginning, the explanation of the picture alphabet, and its development.

But the past is being dug out of the earth in a most wonderful way, and soon day by day little may be seen a picture of the first piece of writing ever made.

Shark Products.

At a meeting of the American Leather Chemists' Association, a rather interesting paper was delivered on the products that are obtained from marine animals. The paper dealt particularly with the products that are gained from sharks. It was said that, in tropical waters sharks that vary in size from ten to twenty feet are caught, the average size being ten feet. The most common method used for catching is by the use of gill nets. These are 300 yards long and 12 feet deep, and are suspended in the water by buoys and anchors. The small fish are allowed to pass through the net, while the large fish are retained. On pulling in the nets the fish are delivered by one of the men between the eyes of the shark. It is then hooked in the mouth and hauled on board. A good boatload is 40 sharks, although 100 can be handled. Skinning is done by cutting down the back and working the skin over the sides and belly, any adhering flesh being subsequently removed. The skin is now salted down, ready to be sent to the tannery. The liver can now be sent for oil recovery, as it contains approximately 50 per cent. of oil, which for some purposes might replace cod or menhaden oil. The bulk of the flesh is used either as manure or poultry food.

Must Reduce Meat Diet.

Chinese lead the world as living demonstrators of vegetarianism, says an eminent physician who has made a special study of the subject. He claims they are a thousand years in advance of the people of the occident. They can make an entire dinner from peas to nuts or the bean curd. No race has given meat up cheerfully, and when it has at last been compelled to come to vegetable diet there is still a hankering after flesh food. But with the Chinese coolie the vegetarian diet must come. In northern Europe a few decades ago the inhabitants ate tremendous meals, consisting mainly of meat; now the people of the crowded industrial cities of Belgium, France and Germany have several meatless days every week.

The Great Mogul.

Chiefs of the Mogul empire founded in Hindustan in 1526 A.D. were the first to be honored with the title of "Great Mogul." For more than two centuries the Mogul emperors ruled India and lived in great magnificence at Delhi, which continued to be their capital until the reign of Akbar (1555-1605), when it was transferred to Agra. They were finally conquered by the British and in 1896, Shah Allum, the last person to whom the title of "Great Mogul" rightly belonged, having died, the Mogul empire ceased to exist. The religion of the Moguls was Mohammedan, but, although historians say he diverted his course, but his gaze was fixed on Aida, seated on a bench beside a young man, a stranger. They

At the Garden Gate

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

Bruce Tyrrell and Aida Wrenn were acting out a sweet little love story all by themselves. So far they were only friends they told themselves, but their inner consciousness revealed to them that they were fast drifting into that delightful state of supersalicence where life is one rose-tinted, deliciously whirl of sweetness.

Aida was a schoolteacher. So was her sister, Marcia, in a rural district fifty miles distant. The family was a pleasant one, the mother of the old-fashioned, fast-disappearing type, indulgent and sympathetic, the father a storekeeper of the town with trade enough to keep things comfortable. He was content, and not willing to invest business expansion at the cost of risking his little capital and passing sleepless nights worrying over it.

It was by mere chance that Bruce had become acquainted with Aida. The biggest ranchman Hillsdale had ever known was on the program in native display, one warm spring afternoon, when he was absolutely unmoved upon a rise of ground near the roadside, with no shelter except an open stock shed. He was rather glad of the company of two horses which crowded out of the drenching rain with him. They were docile and friendly. It had begun raining just after the bell of the little crossroads schoolhouse called in the odd two dozen scholars from the playground. There was no afternoon recess, for the rain never let up until four o'clock. By that time the roadway was a rushing torrent and the water was up over the steps of the little frame building. At its open doorway stood the pretty schoolteacher, with a dismayed face peering the gruesome prospect, while at the windows the pupils crowded generally, very much entertained by the novelty of their situation.

Conditions were less discouraging at the roof shelter. The water had been over shoe tops for an hour, but a run of a hundred feet in knee-deep water would have landed Bruce on the higher level. A sturdy framework of planks, apparently used as a bridge across some creek or ditch, had been dug from its moorings and had landed directly against the side of the shelter shed. There came a final fearful downpour, resembling a cloud burst. Bruce saw that the water had come up clear over the threshold of the little schoolhouse and was purring in over the floor.

"Something ought to be done for those refugees. They'll be there all frightened soon. There may be no danger, but there will be some wallowing through the mud and water before they can get back."

Bruce studied the watery waste between the shed and the schoolhouse, and then tried to calculate how far the floating, but stalled platform might be from the latter. It was strictly incumbent to it the water was up to his knees, and he doubted not that it was up to the waist farther in the center in the direction of the marooned pupils and their teacher. Across one side of the shed was stretched a long pole, to which a food trough had been placed to contain fodder for the horses. This pole, stanch and secured by nails at both ends.

"The very thing," decided Bruce, tore it loose, waded to the platform and got upon it. Then using the pole as deftly as he had manipulated it when it had floated the contraption afloat on a home pool, he started his bulky hark in the direction of the bedraggled ones cugell within the little schoolhouse.

He was inspired mightily to diligent effort as the schoolmistress appeared at its door, waving her handkerchief encouragingly . The little ones clustered behind her and at the windows, keeping up a babel of excited cries and cheers. The experiment was a success, and as, for the first time close at hand, the eyes of Bruce rested on the lovely face of Aida Wrenn, he felt in the trouble well recompensed. In the three grueling minutes they were rafted across the expanse to where Bruce's ranch, fully familiar with the topography of the vicinity, pointed out a rising bluff path. Dry shod and flattered with rare excitement, the little ones dispersed, and were safely delivered from peril and discomfort.

"How can we ever thank you for your wonderful work?" Aida fluttered, as she stepped upon the raft. "What is that?" she added, with a quick backward glance. Then she shuddered. A grinding creak had sounded out; the underpinning of one end of the schoolhouse had given way. Lopsided, the structure toppled and rested four feet deep in the water, crushing the door and window out of shape, a wreck.

There came a cloud over the spirit of his dreams one day. As he was passing through the village he observed his course, but his gaze was fixed on Aida, seated on a bench beside a young man, a stranger. They were so very close together that he seemed to whisper to her at times. Then as they arose to separate, Aida seized both hands of the handsome young fellow and held in a fervent clasp, meanwhile looking earnestly into his eyes.

"Who can he be? And she?" reflected Bruce in a troubled way. "Can it be possible that her heart is already engaged and that I am never to be mine?"

Bruce grew depressed and was half minded to cease his visits to the Wrenn home. He was magnanimous concerning Aida, for although their relations had been friendly she had never given him any definite encouragement as a suitor. She was no coquette, he was sure of that, and he blamed his own sanguine nature for the daring presumption that Aida's landclasp had at times been lingering and tender, and that her eyes responded sympathetically to his own ardent glances.

"I can hardly break the engagement for this evening," meditated Bruce, "but tomorrow!"

Aida and himself were to attend a party at Wildwood, a few miles distant on the trolley line. Bruce called for her that evening. Never had she looked so beautiful. A pretty locket and-chain he had never noticed before were her only jewelry adornments. Bruce sighed as he recalled that but for his discovery of the day, he intended to present her with a friendship ring he carried in his pocket. Her acceptance of it would have decided him as to the fate that was in store for real depth to the interest she had manifested in him.

And, further, never had she been more charming in the kindly, pleasant way in which she received his attentions. He partly took heart of hope that he might be entertaining a suspicion without foundation. Still, he was constrained and unhappy all the evening.

As they left the trolley car on the return trip and proceeded towards Aida's home, the latter paused abruptly with a little cry of dismay.

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, her hand to her throat, "I have lost the locket."

"Are you sure?" questioned Bruce solicitously.

"Oh, yes, I had it when I got aboard the car."

She shook her dress and they retraced their way to the trolley station. It was bright moonlight, but their searching eyes discovered no trace of the missing article of jewelry.

"You had better let me see you home," suggested Bruce. "There will be return and wait till the car comes back on its return trip. It may be that you lost the locket on the car."

"I shall wait up for your report," said Aida, "I am very anxious about the locket."

Bruce signaled and halted the car as it returned. At his first question regarding the locket and Aida the conductor produced the lost article.

"Just found it under a seat," he explained, and Bruce hastened to impart the glad news to Aida. He turned the locket over and over in his hand. Its upper case was of glass.

"It is as I feared!" he half groaned, and well he might, for a bright ray of moonlight revealed a diminutive photograph within the case. It was that of the man he had seen with Aida that afternoon. He then saw at once how of the existence of a rival! Bruce had one thought only in his mind—to restore the locket to Aida and forget her.

"Just a minute, please," spoke a voice behind him as he neared the Wrenn home, and Bruce faced a new, astounding circumstance. Turning, he confronted the original of the photograph.

"You are Mr. Tyrrell," Spoke the other. "I have heard Aida—that is Miss Wrenn—speak of you and have seen you once or twice before this. I also know you are her close friend. Will you do me a great favor? Are you going to her home?"

"Yes," answered Bruce, suddenly and darkly suspicious.

"Will you hand her this note?" and the other tendered a folded paper.

"Why should I?" resented Bruce, drawing back coldly.

"Must I tell you?" questioned his companion. "Yes, I will. Aida says you are a man to trust. Well, then, I am secretly married to Aida's sister and the note tells her that Marcia will be here in the morning to break the news to her parents."

"Oh!"

It was passed by as a mere commonplace inquiry as to the state of the law. For Bruce it expressed relief, and hope and joy. With alacrity he accepted the commission and said good-night. He listened later to Aida's explanation that her sister had left the locket at home on her last visit, and Aida had borrowed it for the occasion of the party.

And then Bruce felt that he should also unburden his heart, which he did, and graciously Aida listened to him, and that white moonlight night was a delight

"CHRISTMAS JOY"

By ARCHIE McNEELY, Newburgh, Ont.

Oh! Xmas; merry Xmas,
The best of all the year.
It is a time of joy—
A time of hearty cheer.

The summer days are gone,
With all their sickening heat.
The snappy days of fall,
To us a glorious treat.

And winter comes full soon,
Yet cheerfully we sing
Many the high tribute
To Frost, the great Ice King.

The ice is frozen o'er
The river's shining face,
And all along it's top
Skates take the swimmer's place

They click, they clang, they cling,
The wind comes whistling by.
They slide, they glide, they whirl;
They fairly seem to fly.

The glow of million lights,
Lights up our open rink.
We hear the joyous cries,
And the skates go click and clink.

And then we have the dance
Upon cold winter's night.
Who doesn't love to dance
Is somewhere not alright.

The lights are glim'ring high,
Below the shining floor;
And if the music stops
They cry for more, and more.

The lights are then turned low—
The moonlight simmers in,
And a swinging melody
Seizes you from within.

You swing out, on the floor,
As one that's in a trance.
The lights blaze up again—
You've had the "moonlight dance."

But! back to Xmas cheer.
Who doesn't want to be
An ins'rument in bringing
Joy to two or three?

And Xmas Eve will come—
Santa with his prancing team.
And when you wake the morning
Twill seem a happy dream.

And out you jump so quickly,
They think the house 's afire.
You open up your window,
And become the town crier.

And though your blood is tingling.
Happiness keeps you warm,
And love, that fills your heart,
Is proof 'gainst any storm.

So come, one and all—
Everyone, far and near,
Merry Xmas to all,
and to all, a New Year.

ISLAND MADE PLEASURE SPOT

... Wonders, Made Celebrated by ... Defoe, Turned Into Attraction for Tourists.

... holiday on Robinson Crusoe's island will be possible in the near future.

The charming little island of Juan Fernandez, where Alexander Selkirk spent four years of his life, and whose story Defoe used to write his famous masterpiece, is to be transformed into a holiday resort.

It belongs to the Chilian government and can be reached in summer from Valparaiso. The island is thirty-six square miles in extent, and is heavily wooded with splendid tree ferns, orange trees, myrtles, and sandal wood. It is mountainous, and full of ravines and torrents. Crowds of wild goats roam through the underwood, and myriads of humming birds chat among the trees. The climate is said to be ideal.

At Cumberland bay, where Selkirk landed, is the island's only hamlet, San Juan Baptista. A modern hotel is to be erected here, and a bi-weekly steamboat service is to be run.

Naturally, the great curiosities of the island are the places where Robinson Crusoe, according to the story, passed the best part of his life. First, there is the grotto where he made his dwelling; it is carpeted with ferns and climbing plants. All around it grows the pelogony, a curious plant, from whose gigantic leaves he made his crockery—plates, dishes, soup tureens, and even washing basins and tanks. There is the little bay in which he used to moor his boat, and the plateau on which he built his cabin.

ALLIGATOR A GOOD MOTHER

Takes Care of Young in Much the Same Manner as Does the Hen of the Barnyard.

The female alligator lays a great number of eggs with hard shells, which in size and general appearance resemble hens' eggs. And she lays them in a nest built in a curious manner.

Along the bank of a stream is spread a layer of mud and grass, or leaves, and on this is placed a layer of eggs, then another layer of mud and grass about seven or eight inches in thickness, then another layer of eggs covered, and so on, until often thirty or more eggs are deposited.

Although the eggs are hatched by the heat of the sun, and the decaying vegetable matter, the mother alligator watches the nest carefully. As soon as the young, which are helpless little creatures about eight inches long, are hatched, she leads them to the water and takes care of them as a hen does her brood of chickens, until they are strong enough to defend themselves.

Another Link With the Past.

Eight hundred years ago the parish church of St. Mary at Warwick, England, was taken into royal favor by Stephen of Blois and made into a collegiate establishment of canons under the patronage o fthe great Earldom of Warwick.

But the original building dated much earlier, to pre-Norman times, though of it there remains nothing more than foundations.

The Dissolution of the Religious Houses under Henry VIII. and the temporary triumph of Puritanism left their respective mark upon the edifice; but these and more were wiped out by a great fire in 1694. One of Wren's best pupils restored everything in the best manner, having the magnificent Beauchamp Chapel as a pattern and ideal, for the fire had happily spared it.

This gem of ecclesiastical work was founded by Richard Beauchamp, the earl in 1442, and took 21 years to complete. Rich in Gothic ornamentation, exquisite in outline and detail, it has been described as the most gorgeous sepulchre of a subject in England. Here many a proud Warwick lies—de Newburgs, Beauchamps, Grevilles—with Elizabeth's Earl of Leicester, who lived at Kenilworth and men who fought at Crecy.

Here is possibly the smallest piscina extant, with a wooden top or mouth, believed to be unique in that respect.

Dramatic Critic Punished.

Back in 1632, an English Presbyterian lawyer named William Prynne was placed in the pillory where his ears were shorn off. He was then sent to prison for life for criticizing the stage and theatrical plays. He published a treatise called "Histrio-mastix, or the Players' Scourge," in which he advocated the total suppression of all stage plays. About the time Prynne's work appeared the Queen and her ladies had taken part in a pastoral at Whitehall. Charles I. considered Prynne's poem a reflection on the Queen and had the poet summoned before the High Tribunal, which condemned him to stand in the pillory, to have his ears cut off, to pay a fine of 5,000 pounds and to life imprisonment. After spending some years in prison Prynne was released. He began again to write, but no one would publish his efforts. In the reign of Charles II. better times came to Prynne and he lived in ease and honor.
